THE KLEMME TIMES

VOLUME XIV. NUMBER 23 KLEMME, IOWA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1910. $1 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

POLITICS

The political pot is beginning to simmer in Hancock County and we are this week printing the announcements of a few of the candidates who are first in the field for political honors. While the primaries are not to be held until next June, it is really only a comparatively short time before the candidates will have to be up and doing and extending the glad hand to Mr. Voter.

John Suurballe, the present very efficient county sheriff, is a candidate for a third term and in his announcement he mentions the fact that it is the third term he is after, not wishing to mislead anyone on that score. He also makes the assertion that should no candidate receive the 35 per cent required to nominate under the primary law, he will support, at the convention to follow, the one receiving the plurality vote at the primary. John has made a good sheriff—that no one can dispute—and he will be a strong factor in the race for this office.

A. E. Baumgartner, of Garner, is a so a candidate for the office of sheriff before the republican primary. He is well and favorably known and has lots of friends who will take pleasure in supporting him. Last week's Signal says in regard to his candidacy: "August has been a resident of the county all his life and is well known to most everyone. He has a lot of friends who wish him success in his venture and who believe he would, if nominated and elected, fill the office of sheriff with credit to himself and the county. We have known August personally for about thirty years and have always found him industrious, accommodating and of good habits. We have no hesitancy in recommending his candidacy to the careful consideration of the voters of the county. He has never sought an office although he has lived here all his life."

For County Auditor we have the announcement of W. L. Fitkin, of Garner, who is very favorably known to the voters of the county. He has been deputy sheriff for a number of years and has been a good one. He understands county business and is in every way qualified to take charge of and successfully conduct the business of this most important county office. Mr. Fitkin should make a very strong candidate and if nominated and elected, he will no doubt prove efficient and accommodating in his dealings with his constituents.

It gives us great pleasure to be able to announce that Prof. J. R. Baggs, of the Garner public schools, will be a candidate for County Superintendent, and we know of no one whom we would rather support for this important office than Mr. Baggs. Not only is he a first class instructor and a well trained school man in every way, but he is also one of the finest gentlemen we have ever met. The affairs of our schools have been in excellent hands under Mr. Deyoe and we believe Mr. Bagge is qualified to keep our schools up to their present high standard. Prof. Baggs is an ideal man for County Superintendent and he should have no opposition for that office.

A GLIMMER FROM BEHIND THE CURTAIN

By SUSAN P. LOWRIE.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

There are many things that are considered superstitious which may be outcroppings of nature's laws. We scientists can trace animal life back to the very cicatricula of the egg, which is an embryo living being, but we cannot tell why two people will frequently think of the same thing at the same moment. In other words, we have never made a beginning in the science of mental telepathy, either between living people or between the living and the dead. This is preliminary to an experience given me by one of my most gifted pupils shortly after she had taken a husband.

"Professor," she said, "you remember that I once confided to you that there was a mystery in our family, that when I was a child my nurse was dismissed for the mere mention of it to me, though she had given me no idea of what it was. Well, the evening before my marriage while exploring a garret for some needed article I came upon a trunk, which I opened and found to contain sundry knickknacks, all evidently very old. One was a daguerreotype of a girl, another a pasteboard box tied with a faded ribbon. I opened the box and found a small piece of wedding cake, dried to a crisp. Girls, you know, sleep with wedding cake under their pillows to influence their dreams. I took the piece I found away with me and that night slept with it under my pillow.

"I dreamed this dream:

"I was walking in one of those old fashioned gardens still common in old New England, and more so in the southern states, inclosed by a high wall. Through a vista of trees and flowers I could see the rear of a house. Through a door opening on to a porch came a young man and a girl. The man wore a frock coat with brass buttons, a profusion of neckwear and trousers strapped beneath his shoes. He carried a cane. The girl's dress was covered with flowers, and her hair, parted in the center of her head, was plastered down over her temples. The two came toward me over a walk bordered with boxwood, and as they drew near I recognized the girl whose daguerreotype I had seen in the trunk in the garret. The man's face looked familiar, but I could not place it.

"They were talking excitedly, but what they said I did not hear. Indeed, I didn't hear their voices; I only knew they were discussing some subject of vital importance to them. Suddenly a wooden door in the garden wall opened, and another man entered. He, too, was young and dressed in the same fashion as the man walking with the girl. On his entrance she gave a cry, and the two young men stood and glared at each other. There was some confusion in my dream from this point for awhile, and the next feature I remember distinctly was seeing the man who had come out of the house with the girl pull his walking stick in two pieces, separating it just below the handle. The upper part was a long, thin piece of steel. With it he rushed upon the man who had entered last and stabbed him. The steel withdrawn, I saw the red blood gush forth. The girl fell over on a bed of flowers in a faint.

"I awoke in one of those horrible conditions produced by bad dreams. Had mine been the consequence of some internal ailment like indigestion I might have quieted down and gone to sleep. But my seeing in the girl the person whose likeness I had found in the trunk convinced me that I had been carried back to some scene enacted in the past. Consequently I puzzled over it till morning and arose on my wedding day, having slept only a few hours. At breakfast father, noticing my appearance, looked at me anxiously and asked me if I were ill. I told him my dream.

"After my return from my honeymoon father told me the family secret. My grandmother, his mother, was a New Orleans creole. A coquette, she had encouraged two suitors. The scene I had dreamed had been enacted in the garden behind her father's house in that city. My grandmother had chosen the young man who had entered the garden with her. His portrait, taken when he was about forty years old, hangs in our drawing room. No likeness of my grandmother remains, except the daguerreotype, which was taken a year before the crime. Indeed, she would never have her portrait painted, living a retired life, burdened by the thought that she had been the cause of the tragedy. The weapon used was a sword cane, much in vogue in that day."

When the narrator ceased the inquiring look she gave me told that she wished to know if I had any theory of the natural causes that had transported her back to witness what had occurred more than sixty years before. I said this to her:

"As prior to the fifteenth century there was a vast continent—America—unknown, except through report, to the people of the world, there is and has always been a realm of spirit, soul—call it what you will—whose manifestations are so vague, in which truth and error are so inextricably mingled that as yet we scientists have no data on which to begin to work. Some day some one will make—accidentally perhaps—a discovery which will open up a new continent in the world of psychology. Then these scattered experiences which are now merely the glimmerings of realms concealed from us will take shape."

FIRST GUN IS FIRED

By Senator Cummins in Battle for Government Reform.

SPEAKS AT DOLLAR DINNER

Opposes Cannon and Hull, Endorses Prouty and Byers, and Wants Progressive Congressmen Elected to Help Senators.

Des Moines, Jan. 3.—In a speech that was much cheered at the "dollar dinner" of progressive Republicans last Saturday night, Senator Albert B. Cummins, urged those present to press the progressive cause, named men, and insisted on progressives being sent to Washington from Iowa. He also suggested the consistency of a progressive state administration.

He spared none of the opponents of the cause, but said at the outset of his speech that he had not a vestige of ill-feeling in his heart for any of the standpatters whom he is seeking to unseat and replace with progressives.

He touched upon the issue between progressives and standpatters. He related the battles in congress, he spoke of state issues, and in the local Seventh congressional district asserted that Capt. J. A. T. Hull has not in the past rendered such service to the people as will warrant them in sending him back.

Indorses Judge Prouty.

He indorsed Judge S. F. Prouty, progressive candidate in the Seventh against Captain Hull; he came out strong for Attorney-General Byers in his Ninth district fight against Congressman Walter I. Smith. He declared himself for the progressive candidates in the Eighth and other districts whoever they may be.

"I stand for the progressive candidates in every district in the state of Iowa," he asserted.

In state affairs, too, he was for the progressive candidates, declaring: "You can't blame me for wanting the flag of the progressives to wave over the state house as well as at Washington."

He said that some of his friends believed that he should be impartial and remain silent in this fight, but that he would not do so, for it seemed to him illogical that the people of the state should send him down to Washington to fight for the things for which they and he stand, and at the same time send down standpat representatives to antagonize and neutralize his every effort and embarrass instead of aid him.

All Along the Line.

For this reason, he asserted, he was in the fight for a progressive victory all along the line "simply so we can carry to the best fruition the struggle now in progress."

In the discussion of the differences between the progressives and the standpatters, Senator Cummins saw no reason for party disintegration. In fact he asserted that in a full, fair and honest discussion of these disputes lay the chief hope for the republican party for continued supremacy in the nation.

Whatever the outcome of the disputes and discussions might be, he declared that he was for the republican party first, last and all the time, and that after the primaries in June he would do all in his power to elect every republican nominee, whether he be progressive or standpat.

"But before the primaries I promise you that I will exert my every influence, will do everything in my power to bring victory to the progressive cause and every progressive candidate," he added.

Challenges Standpat Leaders.

He hurled again his challenge at Aldrich, Cannon, Hale, Dalzell, Hull and other standpatters in congress, daring any standpatter to show what they had done, where they had raised their voices or lent a helping hand to any measure in the interest of progress.

He asserted that in a government organized like this there is a power in the people which will bring about the enactment of laws desired and that it is but a question of time until the people have accomplished with a standpat congress what they have already done with the republican convention, make it progressive, and that victory for the progressive cause is assured. "We will convert the standpat congress into a progressive congress, no matter how long it will require," he asserted.

And in this connection he gave it as his belief that President Taft is in sympathy with the stand of the progressives and that his coming messages will show it.

Among the others who spoke, were Lieutenant Governor George Clarke, of Adel; ex-Governor Warren Garst, Judge S. F. Prouty, W. H. Berry, H. W. Byers, Henry Wallace, and Ed. Addison.

The attendance at the banquet was far larger than had been anticipated. It is estimated that over 500 were present. The banquet room could not possibly accommodate the crowd and an overflow of several hundred were cared for in the public cafe.

Increased Price of Elk Teeth.

"During the last five years the value of elk teeth has more than trebled," said a western traveler at the Frederic, according to the St. Paul Dispatch. "In 1904 you could get any number of fine specimens in Idaho, Montana, Washington and bordering states for $2.50 apiece. Now you will pay from $7.50 to $10, and they are hard to get for even that. The Apache, Sioux, Comanche and Chippewa Indians used to have dozens of them in their possession and traded them for trinkets. But the redskin got wise to their value, and you can buy them from a regular dealer cheaper now than from the Indian. The passing of the elk and the great demand made by the members of the Elk lodge for teeth for emblems have boosted the price."

The traveler recited an incident of an Oklahoman who bought a robe covered with elk teeth from a Wichita Indian for $100. He cut off the teeth and cleaned up $2,200 on the deal.

Happiness in marriage would be more prevalent if a man would handle his wife as tenderly and carefully as he does an old briar pipe.

A Lesson in Economy.

"I notice you always fling the driver your purse when we take a conveyance," said the heroine of the historical novel.

"I do," admitted the hero of the same.

"How do you expect to support a wife? Give him the exact legal fare hereafter." — Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Novice.

Old Lawyer (to young partner)—Did you draw up old Moneybag's will?

Young Partner—Yes, sir; and so tight that all the relatives in the world cannot break it.

Old Lawyer (with some disgust)—The next time there is a will to be drawn up, I'll do it myself!"—New York Sun.

And Mother Officiates.

Eddie—Do you have morning prayers at your house?

Freddie—We have some kind of a service when father gets in.

Occasionally we meet people who spend half their time telling what they are going to do and the other half explaining why they didn't do it.

Knowledge Enough.

At the moment of their fall Adam and Eve, being innocent, were used to doing things in an unconscious manner.

That is to say, they didn't Fletcherize.

With the result that they failed of getting the full effect of the apple—all the proteids and carbohydrates.

However, in thier blind, blundering way, they attained to enough knowl odge of good and evil to make them terrible bores to themselves forever after, and to all their descendants likewise unto the present generation.—Puck.

His Business.

"You see that man across the street? Well, you can always get cut rates from him for his work."

"What is it?"

"Trimming trees and hedges."—Baltimore American.

Where Pepys Won Fame.

"Who was this fellow Pepys, and what is his claim to fame?"

"His claim to fame is well founded, my friend. He's the man who kept a diary for more than a year."

Interesting Information.

In an interview published in the Kieler Neueste Nachrichten, Grossadmiral von Koster says many interesting things about his visit to New York, among them the following: "In the absence of President Taft, who was away on a trip to the Mexican frontier, the place of honor was taken by the vice-president of the United States, Secretary of State Sherman of New York."

Graphic Variations.

"Civilization," remarked the cannibal king, "promotes some strange ideas."

"To whom do you especially refer?" inquired the missionary.

"Among you the ultimate consumer is regarded with sympathy. Here he is considered very lucky."

Mistakes Will Happen.

Lady (to her sister, a doctor)—There—I cooked a meal for the first time to-day and I made a mess of it.

"Well, dear, never mind; it's nothing. I lost my first patient."

If you see a fault in others, think of two of your own, and do not add a third one by your hasty judgment.

Don't Weep At The Ice House.

Some people swell up on "emotion" brewed from absolute untruth.

It's an old trick of the leaders of the Labor Trust to twist facts and make the "sympathetic ones" "weep at the ice house." (That's part of the tale further on.)

Gompers et al sneer at, spit upon and defy our courts, seeking sympathy by falsely telling the people the courts were trying to deprive them of free speech and free press.

Men can speak freely and print opinions freely in this country and no court will object, but they cannot be allowed to print matter as part of a criminal conspiracy to injure and ruin other citizens.

Gompers and his trust associates started out to ruin the Bucks Stove Co., drive its hundreds of workmen out of work and destroy the value of the plant without regard to the fact that hard earned money of men who worked, had been invested there.

The conspirators were told by the courts to stop these vicious "trust" methods, (efforts to break the firm that won't come under trust rule), but instead of stopping they "dare" the courts to punish them and demand new laws to protect them in such destructive and tyrannical acts as they may desire to do. * * * The reason Gompers and his band persisted in trying to ruin the Bucks Stove Works was because the stove company insisted on the right to keep some old employees at work when "de union" ordered them discharged and some of "de gang" put on.

Now let us reverse the conditions and have a look.

Suppose the company had ordered the union to dismiss certain men from their union, and, the demand being refused, should institute a boycott against that union, publish its name in an "unfair list," instruct other manufacturers all over the United States not to buy the labor of that union, have committees call at stores and threaten to boycott if the merchants sold anything made by that union. Picket the factories where members work and slug them on the way home, blow up their houses and wreck the works, and even murder a few members of the boycotted union to teach them they must obey the orders of "organized Capital?"

It would certainly be fair for the company to do these things if lawful for the Labor Trust to do them.

In such a case, under our laws the boycotted union could apply to our courts and the courts would order the company to cease boycotting and trying to ruin these union men. Suppose thereupon the company should sneer at the court and in open defiance continue the unlawful acts in a persistent, carefully laid out plan, purposely intended to ruin the union and force its members into poverty What a howl would go up from the union demanding that the courts protect them and punish their law-breaking oppressors. Then they would praise the courts and go on earning a living protected from ruin and happy in the knowledge that the people's courts could defend them.

How could any of us receive protection from law-breakers unless the courts have power to, and do punish such men?

The court is placed in position where it must do one thing or the other—punish men who persist in defying its peace orders or go out of service, let anarchy reign, and the more powerful destroy the weaker.

Peaceful citizens sustain the courts as their defenders, whereas thieves, forgers, burglars, crooks of all kinds and violent members of labor unions, hate them and threaten violence if their members are punished for breaking the law. They want the courts to let them go free and at the same time demand punishment for other men "outside de union" when they break the law. * * * Notice the above reference to "violent" members of labor unions. The great majority of the "unheard" union men are peaceable, upright citizens. The noisy, violent ones get into office and the leaders of the great Labor Trust know how to mass this kind of men, in labor conventions and thus carry out the leaders' schemes, frequently abhorrent to the rank and file: so it was at the late Toronto convention.

The paid delegates would applaud and "resolute" as Gompers wanted, but now and then some of the real workingmen insist on being heard, sometimes at the risk of their lives.

Delegate Egan is reported to have said at the Toronto convention:

"If the officers of the federation would only adhere to the law we would think a lot more of them."

The Grand Council of the Provincial Workingmen's Ass'n of Canada has declared in favor of severing all connections with unions in the U. S., saying "any union having its seat of Gov't in America, and pretending to be international in its scope, must fight industrial battles according to American methods. Said methods have consequences which are abhorrent to the law-abiding people of Canada involving hunger, misery, riot, bloodshed and murder, all of which might be termed as a result of the practical war now in progress in our fair provinces and directed by foreign emissaries of the United Miners of America."

That is an honest Canadian view of our infamous "Labor Trust."

A few days ago the daily papers printed the following:

(By the Associated Press.))

Washington, D. C., Nov. 10.—Characterizing the attitude of Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor in the contempt proceedings in the courts of the District of Columbia, in connection with the Bucks' Stove and range company, as "a willful, premeditated violation of the law," Simon Burns, general master workman of the general assembly, Knights of Labor, has voiced a severe condemnation of these three leaders. Mr. Burns expressed his confidence in courts in general and in those of the District of Columbia in particular.

APPROVED BY DELEGATES.

This rebuke by Burns was in his annual report to the general assembly of his organization. He received the hearty approval of the delegates who heard it read at their annual meeting in this city.

"There is no trust or combination of capital in the world," said Mr. Burns, "that violates laws oftener than do the trust labor organizations, which resort to more dishonest, unfair and dishonorable methods toward their competitors than any trust or combinations in the country."

Mr. Burns said the action of "these so-called leaders" would be harmful for years to come whenever attempts were made to obtain labor legislation.

"The Labor Digest," a reputable workingman's paper, says, as part of an article entitled "The beginning of the end of Gompersism, many organizations becoming tired of the rule-or-ruin policies which have been enforced by the president of the A. F. of L."

"That he has maintained his leadership for so long a time in the face of his stubborn clinging to policies which the more thoughtful workingmen have seen for years must be abandoned, has been on account partly of the sentimental feeling on the part of the organizations that he ought not to be deposed, and the unwillingness of the men who were mentioned for the place, to accept a nomination in opposition to him. In addition to this, there is no denying the shrewdness of the leader of the A. F. of L., and his political sagacity, which has enabled him to keep a firm grip on the machinery of the organization, and to have his faithful henchmen in the positions where they could do him the most good whenever their services might be needed.

"Further than this, he has never failed, at the last conventions, to have some sensation to spring on the convention at the psychological moment, which would place him in the light of a martyr to the cause of unionism, and excite a wave of sympathetic enthusiasm for him, which would carry the delegates off their feet, and result in his re-election.

"That his long leadership, and this apparent impossibility to fill his place has gone to his head, and made him imagine that he is much greater a man than he really is, is undoubtedly the case, and accounts for the tactics he has adopted in dealing with questions before congress, where he has unnecessarily antagonized men to whom organized labor must look for recognition of their demands, and where labor measures are often opposed on account of this very antagonism, which would otherwise receive support.

"There is no doubt but what organized labor in this country would be much stronger with a leader who was more in touch with conditions as they actually exist, and who would bring to the front the new policies which organized labor must adopt if it expects to even maintain its present standing, to say nothing of making future progress."

We quote portions of another article, a reprint, from the same labor paper:

"Organized labor, through its leaders, must recognize the mistakes of the past if they expect to perpetuate their organizations or to develop the movement which they head. No movement, no organization, no nation can develop beyond the intellects which guide these organizations, and if the leaders are dominated by a selfish motive the organization will become tinged with a spirit of selfishness, which has never appealed to mankind in any walk of life at any time since history began.

"It can be said in extenuation of certain leaders of organized labor that the precarious position which they occupy as leaders has had a tendency to cause them to lose sight of the object behind the organization. The natural instinct in man for power and position is in no small measure responsible for the mistakes of the leaders, not necessarily in labor unions alone, but in every branch of society. This desire for power and leadership and personal aggrandizement causes men who have been earnest and sincere in their efforts in the start to deteriorate into mere politicians whose every act and utterance is tinged with the desire to cater to the baser passions of the working majority in the societies or organizations and this is undoubtedly true when applied to the present leaders of the Federation of Labor. We mention the Federation of Labor particularly in this article, because that organization is the only organization of labor which has yet found itself in direct opposition to the laws of the land. There are other organizations of labor whose leaders have made mistakes, but they have always kept themselves and their organizations within the bounds of the law and respected the rights of every other man in considering the rights of themselves and their constituency; whereas, the motto of the Federation is just the reverse, and unless the leaders conform themselves and their organization in accordance with the laws of the land, the leaders and the organization itself must be disintegrated and pass into history, for in America the common sense of mankind is developed to a greater extent than in any other nation on the earth, and the people, who are the court of last resort in this country, will never allow any system to develop in this country which does not meet with the approval of the majority of the citizens of the country.

"This must have forced itself upon the leaders of the Federation by this time. If it has not, the leaders must be eliminated. The organization which they head has done many meritorious things in times past and the people are always ready and willing to acknowledge the benefits which their efforts have brought to their constituency as a whole, but at the present time labor organizations in general, and the Federation of Labor in particular, stand before the bar of public opinion, having been convicted of selfishness and a disposition to rule all the people of the country in the interest of the few. The people are patient and awaiting to see if the object lesson which they have been forced to give to these leaders is going to be recognized and if they are going to conform themselves and their future work and actions in accordance thereto."

Let the people remember that comment, "The Federation of Labor in particular stands before the bar of public opinion having been convicted of selfishness and a disposition to rule all the people of the country in the interest of the few."

The great 90 per cent of Americans do not take kindly to the acts of tyranny of these trust leaders openly demanding that all people bow down to the rules of the Labor Trust and we are treated to the humiliating spectacle of our Congress and even the Chief Executive entertaining these convicted law-breakers and listening with consideration to their insolent demands that the very laws be changed to allow them to safely carry on their plan of gaining control over the affairs of the people.

The sturdy workers of America have come to know the truth about these "martyrs sacrificing themselves in the noble cause of labor" but it's only the hysterical ones who swell up and cry over the aforesaid "heroes," reminding one of the two romantic elderly maids who, weeping copiously, were discovered by the old janitor at Mt. Vernon.

"What is it ails you ladies?"

Taking the handkerchief from one swollen red eye, between sobs she said:

"Why we have so long revered the memory of George Washington that we feel it a privilege to come here and weep at his tomb."

"Yas'm, yas'm, yo' shore has a desire to express yo' sympathy but yo' are overflowin' at de wrong spot, yo' is weepin' at de ice house."

Don't get maudlin about law-breakers who must be punished if the very existence of our people is to be maintained.

If you have any surplus sympathy it can be extended to the honest workers who continue to earn food when threatened and are frequently hurt and sometimes killed before the courts can intervene to protect them.

Now the Labor Trust leaders demand of Congress that the courts be stripped of power to issue injunctions to prevent them from assaulting or perhaps murdering men who dare earn a living when ordered by the Labor Trust to quit work.

Don't "weep at the Ice House" and don't permit any set of law-breakers to bully our courts, if your voice and vote can prevent. Be sure and write your Representatives and Senators in Congress asking them not to vote for any measure to prevent the courts from protecting homes, property and persons from attack by paid agents of this great Labor Trust.

Let every reader write, and write now.

Don't sit silent and allow the organized and paid men of this great trust to force Congress to believe they represent the great masses of the American people. Say your say and let your representatives in Congress know that you do not want to be governed under new laws which would empower the Labor Trust leaders with legal right to tell you when to work, Where! For whom! At what price! What to buy! What not to buy! Whom to vote for! How much you shall pay per month in fees to the Labor Trust etc., etc., etc.

This power is now being demanded by the passage of laws in Congress. Tell your Senators and Representatives plainly that you don't want them to vote for any measure that will allow any set of men either representing Capital or Labor to govern and dictate to the common people, who prefer to be free to go and come, work or not ,and vote for whom they please.

Every man's liberty will disappear when the leaders of the great Labor Trust or any other trust can ride roughshod over people and mass their forces to prevent our courts from affording protection.

"There's a Reason."

SILHOUETTES OF WESTERN CANADA

The man from Iowa began to talk land before the train was well out of the C. N. R. depot in Winnipeg. The talk began in rather wide circles. The rush to the land, the bumper crop, the system of summer fallowing pursued in the semi-arid districts, were all discussed, and then, with a sort of apologetic smile, the Iowa man said: "I'm a bit interested in this country myself. Some of the men down home got a few sections up here along this line, and I'm going to have a look at them. Never been up in Canada before"— (it is curious how these mid-western Americans pronounce the name of the Dominion as if it was "Can'dy")—"but if it looks good we will be up to stay next fall."

"You see, it's like this," said the man from Iowa—quite manifestly continuing an argument that had been going on in his mind for some time. "Back in our State land has become dear. Anybody wanting to sell can get $70 or $80 an acre for it, and every farm that's offered is snapped up. In Saskatchewan we have just as good land that cost us $11 and $12, so that a man can take up five or six times as much there as in Iowa on the same investment of money.

"It isn't the money, though, that brings most of us up from Iowa. I'm not sure that money would be enough. The 'invasion' is a family affair. We have no chance of keeping our sons around us back home. They have to leave the farm and go into the big cities of the neighboring States to get work. To keep them on the farm and in touch with us, we come up here and make little colonies with the children around us, on homesteads or bought land. This makes it easier for the farmers back there in Iowa to get land for the stay-at-homes. The families that come to Canada are kept together and the families that buy the farms they leave are kept together, too. There won't be any slackening of the rush, either, for they still raise big families back in Iowa."

One could almost see the mental process of this typical American farmer in defending a step that meant a new flag, a new allegiance, a new land, and new associates. To abandon Old Glory of the Declaration of Independence for a good thing in cheap land would hardly be playing the game, but to go out into Saskatchewan to "keep the family together," was another and a quite higher motive.

Why seek too closely to analyze the reasons for the greatest land trek in the history of America? It is enough to know that the sons of the frontiersmen of Iowa, and Kansas, and Minnesota—the best blood of the mid-west—are pouring into the Canadian west in an ever-increasing stream, and are learning that "God Save the King" and "My Country 'Tis of Thee," are sung to the same tune.—Toronto (Ontario) Globe.

NEW YEAR'S LEVEE

President and Mrs. Taft Greet New Year Throng.

TAFT SHOOK HANDS WITH 5537

First Lady of Land, Although Ill, Acts as Hostess at First Reception of Administration at White House.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 3.—President and Mrs. Taft held their first New Year's levee at the White House Saturday. Although Mrs. Taft has not yet regained her full strength and seemed rather pale in a gown of white silk, she carried out her original intention of remaining in the receiving line until all the members of the cabinet circle, the foreign ambassadors, ministers and members of their households and the justices of the supreme court had paid their respects.

At the end of twenty minutes Mrs. Taft retired. The vice presidena and all of the members of the cabinet, with the exception of Secretary of State Knox and Secretary of War Dickinson, remained in the receiving party until the last of the general public had passed.

The reception began promptly at 11 a. m. and ended at 1:55 p. m., when the White House doors were closed. In the two hours and fifty-five minutes that he held his position at the portal of the famous blue room, President Taft shook hands with exactly 5,537 persons, which fell short of the figures of the last two years of the Roosevelt administration.

A light fall of snow made conditions outside anything but desirable. The line of citizens began to form, however, at 10:30 a. m., although they were not scheduled to enter the White house grounds until 11 o'clock. President Taft began and ended the reception with a smile.

Visited by reporters, worried by telegrams seeking interesting information which he is known to possess, Schell made the same reply to all, "Lamphere confessed to me in secret and I do not feel at liberty to give it out, although it would be a surprise in many ways."

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

Farm and Garden

MICE PRODUCE PLAGUES.

How to Stop Their Ravages of Crops and Orchards.

The annual damage caused by field mice to crops, nurseries and orchards in the United States has been estimated by the agricultural department at over $3,000,000. There are fifty species of mice.

With few exceptions the short tailed field mice are readily distinguishable from other mice by their stout, chunky bodies, short legs, short, round tails, blunt muzzles, short ears and rather small eyes. The species shown in the cut are dark brownish or grayish brown in color and considerably larger and heavier than the common house mouse.

They live almost everywhere in damp meadows, where their presence may be detected among the grass and weeds by small, well defined, crooked trails, along which at intervals are little heaps of fresh grass or other herbage. In alfalfa or clover fields their numerous burrows are usually in colonies. As a rule, they appear first along ditches or about damp areas, where dead plants are almost certain evidence of their work.

In the past many methods of destroying field mice have been tried, yet the records describe no instance in which well established plagues have been successfully suppressed. Failing to recognize the early stage of the plague, the people in stricken districts did not usually adopt vigorous measures until after the fields were swarming with mice. The failure, then, has been due partly to lack of co-operation and partly to lack of knowledge of quick, cheap and effective measures. Without witnessing such a plague one can hardly form a conception of the almost incredible numbers of mice and of the magnitude of the task of destroying them.

Among methods of little value which have been tried in other countries to rid the land of these scourges are rolling the land with heavy cylinders, trampling it by cavalry or by droves of sheep, liberating large numbers of cats and injecting water, steam or suffocating gases into the mouse burrows. Many measures practicable on a small scale or of value in the early stages are entirely inadequate for the suppression of well established plagues, particularly where farms are as large as in the United States. Among such methods are digging trenches or pitfalls wider at the bottom than at the top, into which the mice fall; killing by means of traps, clubs or dogs, burning off the herbage in infested areas and flooding the fields. The elimination of these leaves as methods generally applicable for suppressing plagues only two, the employment of disease and poisoning.

Wrapping Fruit In Paper.

Any method of handling apples that hastens the ripening after the fruit is packed shortens the period of commercial value. Any treatment that checks the ripening prolongs the marketing period. The value of wrapping apples in paper has been tested in both seasons by the experiment station of the Iowa College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. The comparison was made with duplicate quantities of fruit that were grown and handled in the same way. One lot was not wrapped, and with the other each apple was wrapped in unprinted newspaper. With some varieties like the Gano, Roman Stem, Salome, Winesap and other hard, late ripening sorts the advantage of wrapping in paper was not very apparent. But with tender varieties like the Clemons, Jonathan and Wealthy a wrapper was a distinct advantage in extending the life of the fruit, preserving its natural brightness and lessening the amount of decay. A wrapper serves to reduce the bruising that may result from poor packing or from rough handling in transportation. It retards shriveling and adds to the value of the fruit by preserving its attractive appearance. The wrappers cost about 20 cents per thousand for newspaper 9 by 12 inches.

Luxurious Beehives.

A schoolmaster in a small German town, being very fond of bees, resolved to build for them something novel in the way of a home. As beehives are generally of the same size, color and shape, it is sometimes difficult for a bee to find his own particular home, so it came about that this kind hearted schoolmaster decided to give each of his hives some distinguishing mark, so the buildings represent an inn, castle, house, cottage, windmill, etc. There are also a number of animals, including an elephant, carved from wood, closely resembling their living brothers. The owner is naturally very proud of his creation and is constantly enlarging it.

COMPARISONS OF CLIMATE.

Some In Both Hemispheres Are Quite Similar.

When two regions on different hemispheres possess similar climates there is nearly always a similarity in their native vegetation, and it is a demonstrated fact that many of the plants native to one of the regions find themselves perfectly at home in the other. California conditions are markedly similar to those of the Mediterranean region, so that it is no surprise to find more than fifty plants from the latter region that thrive in California with marvelous vigor. It is conservatively estimated that over 75 per cent of the forage on the California range lands is made up of Mediterranean immigrants, mostly annuals, such as wild oats, bur clover, alfilerilla, brome grasses, fescues, wild barleys and many others.

The Great basin and the Columbia basin resemble California in one marked respect—namely, that the summers are dry and the winters wet. Indeed, the principal difference from California lies in the colder winters. The difference has not prevented the introduction and rapid spread of most of the European annuals now so conspicuous in California. It is really little short of amazing how rapidly and extensively some of these plants have occupied the range lands at the expense of the native vegetation.

The conditions in Arizona are not very favorable to the plants that have found California conditions so congenial, with the exception of alfilerilla. Arabia of all old world regions is most like Arizona, and from there, if anywhere, we should expect plants adapted to Arizona conditions.

Western Washington and western Oregon closely approximate in climate the British isles, and practically everything that thrives in the one region is at home in the other.

The middle and south Atlantic states are similar to Japan and China in climate. It has long been recognized that all Japanese plants, especially ornamentals, thrive in this region perfectly. A number of them are so at home, indeed, that they have literally taken to the woods and behave as natives. Witness the Japanese honeysuckle, Japan clover, ailanthus, paulownia and the recently introduced Chinese violet.

The cotton states evidently have much in common with India and southeastern Asia, whence we have obtained cowpeas, crab grass, Bermuda grass, velvet beans and many weeds, and to a less degree with Argentina, where rescue grass, carpet grass, paspalum grass and a number of common southern weeds are native.

Of late years there has been increasing evidence that the high plains of northern Texas resemble the highlands of India. At least practically every plant introduced from the India highlands has succeeded better in the Texas Panhandle than elsewhere in the United States.

The great plains region lying east of the Rocky mountains and west of the one hundredth meridian finds its nearest parallel in climate in Asia. This is the region that gave us alfalfa.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Emma Henschen (nee Hasenjaeger) died at her home in Klemme on Sunday evening, January 2nd, 1910, the cause of death being cerebral embolus. Deceased was born in Warren county, Missouri As her parents died while she was quite young, the year and day of her birth was not known to her, but it is presumed that she was born in 1842. Being an orphan, her childhood was anything but pleasant. In 1865 she was united in marriage to Herman Henschen, who died on the 11th of May, 1906. The Henschen family came to Iowa in 1878 and have since that time resided in this neighborhood, where they have always been highly respected. Deceased leaves eight sons to mourn her loss.

Funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon from the residence and also from the German Reformed church, Rev. Achtermann officiating. Burial was made in Klemme cemetery.

The bereaved ones have the sympathy of all.

M. Hyde, the Garner liveryman, was here Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Josten, Sr. are on the sick list.

Mrs. G. Platt and her son Albert returned home from Belmond Saturday.

The masquerade ball at the Klemme opera house Friday evening was well attended.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Suckow and daughter Fern left Monday evening for an extended visit with relatives at Tarkio, Missouri.

German M. E. Church Items

Chas. Busch made a trip to Garner last Wednesday.

Esther Lenz was a visitor at the Ludeke home last week.

The Germantown W. F. M. S. meet with with Mrs. Kahler Tuesday afternoon.

Fred Ridder and daughter Viva were Garner visitors between trains Monday.

Mrs. Louis Sampson was taken quite seriously ill last Thursday but is much better at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. A. Gast gave a New Year's dinner to some 30 of their relatives on Saturday.

Henry Ludeke returned Monday morning from a trip to Illinois where he spent last week with relatives.

The members of the Germantown League were invited to a party at the Geo. Ulrich home last week Tuesday evening.

Geo. and Minnie Kraus from Elkport Iowa are visiting their grand parents, father and mother Kraus, and other relatives.

Ella Griewe and Lurena Wessel returned to college Monday after an enjoyable vacation of two weeks spent at the parental home.

The next quarterly meeting will be held in the Germantown church Saturday and Sunday. Rev. Klause of Garner will conduct the same

Henry Ridder and daughter came down from Charles City Saturday evening and spent Sunday evening with his brothers and their families.

Clarence and Amanda Arnold left Monday evening for Ames where they will take a short course in agricultural and domestic science respectively.

Mr. and Mrs Henry Griffen had planned to give a New Year's dinner to a number of their friends last Saturday, but other engagements interfered, so they gave on Sunday to which some 20 did ample justice.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Stille had their little boy christened last Sunday afternoon, naming him Bernet Curtis. The little fellow has been in delicate health, and we sincerely hope for his recovery.

The Watchnight gathering at the Wm. Sampson home was a pleasant affair. But the last hours of the old year slipped by so quickly that only about one-half of the program was carried out. The oyster stew was relished by some, while others were rather delicate eaters.

A number of young people met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas Lenz last Wednesday evening. We understand it was to be a surprise on Elmer Lenz, a brother to Chas., but he happened to be eight miles away at his sister's home in Germantown. Several other surprises had been planned for Friday evening, but failed to work.

The temperance program given by the members of the Germantown Epworth League in Klemme Sunday evening was right up to date and well received. E. G. Beier, C. C. Schaefer, and G. I. Schaper delivered addresses, Roy Schaefer gave a reading, Ella Schlei a declamation and Erick Josten a well written essay while Matie Bredlow and Lizzie Riemer favored the audience with a duet. They did not beat around the bush, but struck straight home and yet in such a manner that no one could take offense.

The sad intelligence reached us last week that Mrs. Benj. Henke, nee Luella Stork, had died in Los Angeles Cal., on Christmas day. She had been operated on, on Thanksgiving day and was on a fair way to recover, when diphtheria set in and ended her young life. Since she had died of a contagious disease her body had to be cremated which makes it all the harder for her parents and relatives. Dying so far away from her kin folks who could not get to her bedside to be with her when the last summons came and now to have no mound in some cemetery to which they can stroll in memory or person seems very sad. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved parents, husband and two little motherless boys.

Sought at one time by the federal authorities under a $10,000 reward for his capture, dead or alive, for his alleged conspiracy in the murder of President Lincoln, and now appointed as a member of the United States senate, is the strange experience of Col. James Gordon, who has been named by Gov. Noel as successor to the late A. J. McLaurin.

Prince Hans of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glucksburg, a brother of the late King Christian of Denmark and generally known as the "uncle of Europe," is critically ill.

GENERAL NEWS.

Miraculously restored to health through a power which he declares was the Holy Ghost, Gen. J. B. Weaver, well known in national and Iowa state politics in the last fifty years, has come out strongly in support of divine healing and will lead a movement for a national convention of Divine Healers to be held in Des Moines some time early next year.

The Des Moines (Ia.) Press club, composed of the news writers of the city, gave a complimentary banquet at the Savoy hotel last night to Senator Cummins and Congressman Hull. Gridiron features prevailed.

Thomas Botham, a retired farmer, 72 years old, killed himself after a fruitless attempt to slay his wife at St. Joseph, Mich. Botham's little granddaughter was hurt slightly in jumping from a second-story window in escaping from her crazed grandfather. Policeman Delwin Fisher was knocked down by a bullet which grazed his temple.

Only a technical legal shadow now stands between Charles W. Morse, convicted banker and one-time ice king, and the 15-year sentence in the federal prison at Atlanta. Judge Hough in the United States circuit court denied his motion for a new trial.

Michael Malone,, Michael McGraw and Fred Malone, miners, were burned to death near Harrison, Mineral county, Virginia. Patrick Malone and Frederick Dugan, who boarded at the same house, are missing. Officers are working on a clew indicating that the fire was started after the celebration by a man who had been ejected.

Out of the Nicaraguan war a crisis has developed in Central and South American affairs, which was not contemplated by this government, and so important has the situation become that upon President Taft's return from New York Secretary Knox at once consulted him as to the best method of meeting it.

Five hundred delegates, representing the various business colleges and commercial departments of collegiate institutions of the United States, assembled in Louisville for a three-days' session.

One 30,000-barrel tank was burned and 40 others were emptied to prevent their destruction in a fire which threatened the large Standard Oil plant in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, N. Y.

While the body of John McClintock, a sheep herder, who was killed in a range dispute near Rocky Spur, Idaho, was being taken to Nampa in charge of the sheriff, it was jolted out of a box in the wagon and when the conveyance reached Nampa the loss was discovered. The body was found in the rough mountain road eight miles from Nampa.

Mrs. Francesca Hinkel of Newark, N. J., mother of a former patient confined in the Essex county insane asylum, made an affidavit and placed it in the hands of Prosecutor Mott, at Newark, to the effect that the woman whose charred skeleton was found several weeks ago hidden in the roof of an abondoned building of the asylum, was that of Mrs. Katherine Linder, and that she was beaten to death by three women nurses and her body secreted in the roof by them, with the cognizance of Dr. Daniel M. Dill, superintendent of the hospital.

"Acts rather than declarations." This is the reported expression of President Taft to callers regarding his program for the conservation of natural resources. The president declared that when the present session of congress ends he will be able to point to the first practical conservation statutes ever placed upon the law books of the nation as his answer to the criticism, which has been directed toward the White House.

Bessie May Priest, a beautiful 18-year-old girl, is dead by poison at Los Angeles, Cal., slain, it is believed, by a woman rival, whose every other effort to break her victim's betrothal to Harry Sayre, son of a millionaire of Newark, N. J., was futile. Mystery which surrounds the crime and the identity of the jealous woman may develop features more sensational than the Cornish-Molyneaux case.

James P. Connery, secretary and treasurer of the Chicago Fire Appliance Company and secretary of the Miami Coal Company, and Michael H. Rogers, Democratic committeeman of the Thirteenth ward and head of the M. H. Rogers Coal Company, were indicted at Chicago by the December grand jury on charges of obtaining money by false pretenses in connection with the sale of coal to the city.

President Taft has put the final touches to a special message to congress dealing with the amendments which he believes are necessary in the interstate commerce and Sherman anti-trust acts. Recent reports to the contrary notwithstanding, it is known that the president will take up the anti-trust act and deal with it at great length.

McReynolds, presented to the supreme court of the United States the case of the government in the famous "tobacco trust cases." Further, it is asserted that they have been actuated by a fixed purpose to destroy competition and obtain monopolies.

That the closing year has been a prosperous one for the railroads of the country is evidenced from figures made public by the Railway Age Gazette. Farmers' Short Course.

Hopkinton.—Lenox college will conduct a week's short course in agriculture in connection with the agricultural extension work at Iowa State college at Ames, the dates being fixed from January 31 to February 5, 1910. This course is particularly designed for the benefit of farmers and young men who are unable to take the full courses in agriculture offered by the State college or the agricultural department of Lenox college. At the same time a domestic science course will be offered for women. The studies for the week will include treatment of all the subjects in elementary and advanced agriculture, as outlined by the extension department:

Dairying, dairy cattle and feeding.

Corn breeding, judging and demonstrations.

Soils and their treatment, fertilization, rotation of crops.

Drainage problems.

Stock breeding—Horses, beef and dairy cattle, sheep and hogs.

Domestic science—Selection and preparation of food, sewing, house furnishing, nursing, hygiene and kindred subjects. Illustrations and actual demonstrations will be made by instructors.

Valuable premiums will be awarded in the corn contest, which will be divided into two divisions. The first division will be confined to contestants who have exhibited or taken prizes in state or international shows. The second division will be open to amatuer corn growers who have not contested in such exhibitions.

Four Die in Explosion.

Dubuque.—John Oldberg, aged 40 years, of Benton, Wis., Ed Eullivan, aged 34, Lead Mine, Wis., C. H. Morton aged 24, and Thomas Clegg, aged 30, of New Diggins, Wis., lost their lives by the explosion of a powder house at the mouth of the Ollie Bell mine, two miles south of Benton.

Council Revokes Milk License.

Waterloo.—The city council acting as a board of health revoked the license to sell milk and cream of the Sindlinger Sanitary Dairy because it has sold milk and cream in violation of the ordinance which says all milk and cream sold shall come from tested cows.

Foster and Lewis Asphyxiated.

Des Moines.—William Foster, owner of Foster's and the Grand opera houses, and Louis Bemis of Spencer, Ia., a guest at the Foster home, were found dead in their beds in a room at the Foster residence, 3920 Grand avenue. The room was full of illuminating gas. The door of the bathroom adjoining was open and a gas heating stove inside was turned on and lighted. Gas had escaped where the tube was but loosely attached to the jet. It is presumed that Mr. Foster, according to his custom, got up in the night, lighted the stove and went back to bed to sleep until the room should become warm. Death came upon him while he slept. The ghastly discovery was made by R. G. Fobes of Marquis, Ia., fiance of Mr. Foster's daughter, Helen, aged 18.

Wife May Die From Awful Ordeal.

Colfax.—"I still love Bob. Don't let anyone hurt him." Moaning on her bed of pain, Mrs. Robert Hanley, who was chased from her home in Colfax by her drunken husband and forced to stumble a mile through the snow in her bare feet and clad only in her night gown, is still loyal to her husband. Because of his drunken frenzy, she was subjected to torture equaled only by that practiced in the inquisition. Yet she still loves him. Yet for fear of a mob, so intense was the feeling in Colfax over Hanley's brutality, he was quietly spirited away to Newton by Sheriff H. S. Russell. He was arraigned for drunkenness and sentenced to thirty days in jail.

Dairy License Knocked Out.

Council Bluffs.—Judge Snyder of the superior court upset the city's plans for collecting a license from the dairymen of the city by declaring a recently enacted ordinance illegal. The court held that the state collects a license from dairymen; that the statutes do not provide for local licenses. He held that the health board can enforce the tuberculin test and other methods of safety.

Home for Old Folks.

Iowa City.—An old ladies' home, established by a local philanthropist, Stevens O. Coldren, will be opened in the spring. The institution is now being fitted out for inmates and already a large number of applicants for admission have applied to the board of trustees. The home is named for Mr. Coldren's mother, The Mary O. Coldren Home for Aged Women.

Survey for New Milwaukee Line.

Mason City.—Surveyors of the Milwaukee road are running a line east of Charles City. Paul Montgomery assistant engineer of the road is in charge. The new line will lessen the grades and shorten the distance and cut off many bad curves. A new line between Lowler and Wacoma is contemplated.

McLean Gets a Prison Chair.

Iowa City.—President G. F. MacLean of the University of Iowa is in receipt of a chair, presented to him by Warden Sanders of the state penitentiary at Fort Madison, the gift coming by way of a Christmas token. The chair is the product of the work of a man serving a life term in the "pen."

Iowa's Biggest Chicken Hawk.

Sidney. — Samuel Mitchell, the young son of Robert Mitchell, living one mile south of town, shot and killed the largest chicken hawk ever seen in this county. It measured 4 feet 8 inches from tip to tip across the wings and had committed many great inroads on the poultry flocks of that community.

Northwestern to Enter Davenport.

Davenport.—Official announcement was made that the C. & N. W. railroad will ask the city council of Davenport for permission to lay railroad tracks in the wholesale district. The road will enter Davenport over the Clinton-Davenport Interurban railroad.

Makes Run in Bare Feet.

Cedar Rapids.—Joe Nolan, a farmer near Watkins, while suffering from delirium, escaped from his guards at his home and ran over a mile in the snow in his bare feet and half clothed. When captured his feet were so badly frozen they had to be amputated.

Electrician Goes to State College.

Cedar Rapids.—Thomas Sloss, an electrician in the employ of the electric light plant here, will soon go to Ames, where he will be the electrical expert at the State college. He was given a Christmas present of a check for $500 by his late employers.

Noted Woman Dead.

Leon.—The funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Davis, nearly 90 years of age, was held at Garden Grove. Mrs. Davis drew the first money ever paid to a public school teacher in Decatur county.

Provided for Newsboys.

Mrs. William Waldorf Astor provided in her will that the newsboys of New York should have a Thanksgiving dinner, as they have had at the expense of the Astor family for half a century. This year at least 2,000 newsboys were on hand, the afternoon papers having suspended work, thus giving the little fellows a holiday.

During the first six months of his married life a man pities old bachellors. After that he envies them.

Where is Bessie Hartman?

Rosanna and Bessie Hartman lived with their mother at Chapman, Nebr., in 1901, the year that their father was killed by a falling tree at Anada, Mo. Their mother, an invalid, being unable to care for them, the girls were sent to Omaha to school, being housed and mothered by a Mrs. Smith.

Finally, in 1903, Bessie, the younger of the two, was taken in charge by the Nebraska Children's Home society, who refused to tell her married sister, Rosanna, where she is. Bessie became of age last February. If she will send her address to P. O. Box 898, Omaha, Nebr., it will be forwarded to her sister Rosanna, who is now Mrs. Geo. Duerr.

BOY TORTURED BY ECZEMA

"When my boy was six years old, he suffered terribly with eczema. He could neither sit still nor lie quietly in bed, for the itching was dreadful. He would irritate spots by scratching with his nails and that only made them worse. A doctor treated him and we tried almost everything, but the eczema seemed to spread. It started in a small place on the lower extremities and spread for two years until it very nearly covered the back part of his leg to the knee.

"Finally I got Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills and gave them according to directions. I used them in the morning and that evening, before I put my boy to bed, I used them again and the improvement even in those few hours was surprising, the inflammation seemed to be so much less. I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, the same of the Pills and the Soap and my boy was cured. My son is now in his seventeenth year and he has never had a return of the eczema.

"I took care of a friend's child that had eczema on its face and limbs and I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They acted on the child just as they did on my son and it has never returned. I would recommend the Cuticura Remedies to anyone. Mrs. A. J. Cochran, 1823 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 20, 1909."

SYNOPSIS.

Richard Derring, returning from a winter in the woods to his mother's farm home, is overtaken by his uncle, accompanied by his eccentric wife, coming to pay a visit at the farm. Aunt Jerusha's questions about Emily Hutton, supposed to be Richard's sweetheart, bring out the fact that she is to marry a merchant, Edwards. Derring's disappointment stimulates his ambition and under the advice of Seth Kinney, a hermit of the woods, he resolves to fit himself for college. Kinney promises to teach him Greek. Derring tells his mother his resolve, and in his grandfather's old laboratory begins the study of Greek. Seth Kinney hears Richard's Greek recitation in the woods while he and Tom Bishop ply the cross-cut saw. Derring learns that he can look indifferently upon the loss of Emily. He visits Aunt Jerusha, who volunteers to help him through college. The Greek learned in the woods carries Richard triumphantly through entrance examinations, wins approval from the professor and insures his popularity among his fellows. Four years in college obliterates the memory of Emily. Derring begins journalistic work in Chicago. He meets Helen Gordon, an artist. Derring is promoted to art critic on his paper. He makes rapid progress in comradeship with Helen.

CHAPTER XI.

He sought her the next day in the studio and found her occupied with a pupil. He had forgotten it was her day for pupils. She would be busy until four o'clock.

"I will come around and walk home with you—if I may."

"Very well," she assented.

They stood in the doorway, just out of sight of the pupil. He was watching her face anxiously. He fancied that she looked pale and worn, as if she had not slept.

"You are tired?" he questioned in a low tone.

She admitted that she was—"a little."

"Perhaps I would better not come for you to-night."

"No. Come. It will rest me to have some one to talk to."

"But if I come, I shall speak," he insisted.

She did not raise her eyes to his as he had half hoped. She hesitated for a moment, and then only said, as she turned towards the studio, "I will wait for you."

He left the building, a tumult of joy and doubt in his heart. She had given him permission to speak, but she seemed to have refused his demand before it was made. He dared not hope. He hoped in spite of fear.

As the day wore on the fear subsided and the joy of love took possession of him. That, at least, she could not take away, no matter what she might refuse.

He found her alone, at work in the gray afternoon light.

"I am improving the last minutes," she said, looking up as he entered and speaking lightly, as if eager to put their meeting on a commonplace footing.

He did not answer, but seated himself on the long couch opposite her. He watched her as she sketched in the outline of a still-life study. She was sitting as usual, with the light falling full upon her. Yes, he had been right. Her face was pale.

"What is it?" he asked abruptly, at last, in a low tone.

"I am afraid of it," she answered quietly.

"Why?"

"Because things will never be the same again."

"I hope not," he responded quickly.

"I want them to be. I don't want them to change," she replied as quickly.

"Then they shall not. I won't say anything more."

A silence fell on the studio. The shadows in the corners grew darker and lengthened softly toward the center of the room. The light suited the room, Derring thought, as he sat waiting for her to speak. The harmonious tones and subdued colors seemed to gather and center in the quiet figure under the skylight. It was always so. She would always gather the light and life in everything and transmute it to something softened and human.

She was trying the colors on the edge of her block, making ready to wash in the sketch. She spoke slowly, without looking up. "But you know that I love you?"

Derring started suddenly. "No, I didn't know—you hadn't told me—"

Their eyes met, and they broke into a laugh.

"You will marry me?" he said bluntly.

"No."

"Why not?"

She had become absorbed in the edge of her sketch and was drawing futile, ineffective lines.

"Why not?" he repeated.

"It's so selfish"—after a pause.

"Selfish?"—blankly.

"Yes, two people fall in love and they forget everything else and marry. They seem to think that love justifies everything."

"It does."

"But there are other claims."

He was looking at her intently.

"Grace must be sent to school and the boys are hardly able to take care of themselves; and there is mother. They all depend on me. Don't you see that it would be selfish?" She was leaning forward and looking at him, impersonally, with the old air of comradeship.

"But I would help."

"I know. But you have no right to marry yet. There would be children, and the children of Bohemia are not always so happy as their parents. It is not fair that two people should be happy at the expense of so much. Probably marriage was meant to be right; but it is all wrong as things are now."

Spoken with quiet conviction, rapidly. Whatever she decided must be right. But one phrase stirred his pulses.

"That two people should be happy," he repeated. "You think—"

"I think that most marriages are mistakes," she replied, taking up her brush again and sketching rapidly. "People are madly in love. They marry. And then apparently the love dies. I should die myself," she said quickly. "I could not bear that."

He had risen and was standing, one hand raised and resting on the easel, looking down at her.

She lifted her face to his, smiling at him a little wistfully. "I had not hoped that you would understand. I thought there would be an explanation—and parting."

"Not that—never!"

"But there are no promises," she said quickly. "No," holding up her hand as he would have interrupted her, "I am older than you, you know. You may outgrow me. You must not be bound even by a promise. If we are made for each other, we shall find it out, as time goes on, without them; and if we are not, we shall only drift farther apart and there will be no pain for what never really existed. But if we were bound by marriage—" She broke off, looking straight before her.

"You have loved before." He was looking down at her. "You would not reason so clearly—"

"I thought once—that I loved." Her eyes were on her work.

The question sprang to his lips, "And he is dead?"

"Thank God—yes."

He stared at her blankly.

"I should not have found out in time. We should have been miserable. I thought I loved him. I mourned a long time. But lately—I have known—" Her head bent lower over her work.

His face deepened. He started towards her. "Ah, you have learned—"

"I have learned that I dare not trust myself," she said. She began to gather up her materials and put them away.

Presently she stood beside him. She had put on the long gray cloak. "I am going now," she said.

He looked about for his hat and found it still in his hand. He held it out with a whimsical gesture. "I have been eminently proper," he said.

With a laugh of the old comradeship she held out her hand and he covered it with his own.

"It is a compact?" he said.

"That there are no promises," she replied.

CHAPTER XII.

But if there were no promises, there was much happiness in the months that followed. After the talk in the studio their life assumed a new phase—something as far removed from the unrest of courtship on the one hand, as from the commonplaceness of married life on the other.

Derring had accepted her decision as final. There was to be no marriage—not even a promise of marriage at some distant day. His love for her must begin and end in itself. One less capable of love, or one who had longed less for love, might have fretted at the anomalous position in which he found himself—neither aspirant nor accepted lover. But to Derring it seemed that never since man was created had a love so unique been upon the earth.

He was at the studio daily, sometimes several times a day. He fell into the habit of going there to write up the articles for which he had been gathering material—an art lecture below stairs or a first view above. Often he read these articles to her as she sat at work. Her criticisms were frank and unsparing. Sometimes for days together, a stranger, overhearing them as they talked or jested, would not have guessed that they were more than good comrades. Only, now and then, a word, half-breathed, as he sat watching her move about the studio, would speak volumes and bridge over hours of commonplace. Then again there would be days when they would talk of their love as of any accepted fact of common interest.

Perhaps nowhere but in the art world could such a friendship have existed without danger of misunderstanding. At the boarding house they had instinctively remained mere table acquaintances. But among the artists they came and went with Platonic freedom. No one criticised. No one watched with malicious eyes. Here as wherever artists meet, life was too busy for petty spying. Or is it, after all, not indifference or preoccupation, but the inherent purity of an apparently careless life, that makes artists slow to think evil of each other? In any case, these two were safe among them from fear of misunderstanding; and Derring was in the studio whenever his work, or leisure, gave him opportunity.

"I always knew you must be somewhere," he said one day. He had finished writing and sat leaning back, his hands clasped behind his head. It had been half an hour since he finished work and no word had broken the silence till he spoke.

"I never dared believe I should find you, though," he continued.

She was turning her head to one side and leaning back, with half-closed eyes, to get a view of the last wash. "Yes, you were a good while finding it out." She gave critical touches here and there with the extended brush.

He started suddenly forward to an upright position. "What do you mean? Did you know—or care?"

"That is another strange thing," she said, smiling a little to him, "the woman always knows first. But she must wait patiently until the man's lumbering intelligence finds it out."

"But I never dreamed," he persisted, coming back to the concrete case. "You seemed so indifferent—"

"Of course. It wouldn't have been modest not to. And, besides, I did not want you to find out. I didn't suppose any man could be generous enough to understand how a woman might feel."

"It isn't that we don't understand. Any one can see how unfair marriage is to a woman—that it compels her to give up everything and offers her nothing. We see it plainly enough. But what can we do? We love you, and most of us see no way out of it but marriage."

"Now it is you who are hard," she returned. "The fault cannot all lie on one side. Marriage, in itself, is no harder for a woman to-day, I suppose, than it has always been. The difference is that so many other ways of happiness are open to her; and when she finds her marriage a failure, she does not try to make the best of it, without protest, as the only thing open to her. She is more restive under her own mistake than when fate left her no choice. So everything gets into a nice tangle and they don't live happy forever afterwards," she finished laughingly.

"Bread" and "Pigeon" Seed.

School children in the crowded parts of New York do not speak of corn and oats and wheat by those names, but always refer to them as "seeds." The other day in one of the big schools the teacher was talking to her pupils about gardening. She ended with a request for each pupil to bring a few seeds the next day to be planted in the window boxes. The following morning the children appeared mostly with either oats, wheat or corn. While putting a few grains of each in the earth the teacher referred to them by their familiar names. One of the girls in the class took courage to "set the teacher right" and said: "Some one must 'a told you wrong, teacher. That"—pointing to the wheat—"is bread seed, an' that yellow stuff ain't corn; it's pigeon seed. We always call them that in the block where we live."

A Home for Spirits.

Andrew Hale, a recluse who recently committed suicide at Lebanon, Ore., had a house to which he had about twenty additions. Each of its small rooms was for the abode of the spirit of a departed friend. The house was filled with curious things, gathered together to amuse the spirits. A lot of shoe strings, several clocks, musical instruments and various articles were there. The collection must have cost Hale more than $2,500.

CATS ON THE FARM.

More Apt to Kill Chickens and Birds Than Rats.

Many an innocent hawk, skunk, owl and weasel has been shot for the deeds of that sleek highwayman, the house cat. It is safe to say that this marauder, which enjoys all the comforts and protection of a home, destroys in the aggregate more wild birds and young poultry than all the native natural enemies combined. A cat has been known to kill a whole brood of chickens in a day, a feat unequaled by any predaceous animal, with the possible exception of the mink. Others in the course of a season have practically destroyed whole coveys of quail or grouse or nests full of young songsters. A well known naturalist estimates that in the New England states alone 1,500,000 birds are destroyed annually by cats.

The offender is not so often the well fed household pet as it is the abandoned and neglected outcast. In 1905 the Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in New York city killed monthly an average of 6,000 sick, injured or homeless cats—a total for the year of over 70,000. A considerable proportion of these were pets abandoned by people who had gone to the country for the summer.

Moreover, summer visitors to the mountains or seashore sometimes take with them their cats, which, on their return home, are too often left behind to swell the local overflow and make serious inroads on the birds of the region. It is safe to assume that in the rest of the state outside of New York city as many cats follow a nomadic life as in the city, and if we assume that each cat kills one bird a week we have a grand total of over 3,500,000 birds destroyed annually. In the milder parts of our country, as in the chaparral region of California, where bird life is abundant, cats often revert to a semiwild state and never revisit their old homes except for plunder. Sportsmen and bird lovers should be ever watchful and whenever possible remove marauding cats from the coverts.

The principal reasons given for keeping cats are their attractiveness as house pets, their usefulness as companions for children and their alleged value as rat and mouse killers. It is impossible at present to obtain correct figures on the subject, but it is safe to say that few persons during a normal lifetime run across more than half a dozen cats that habitually attack rats. Occasionally a hunter cat is found which seems to delight in catching rats, gophers or ground squirrels. It is a common experience to find premises that are well supplied with cats overrun with rats and mice. At a certain ranch in the west a member of the agricultural department in Washington trapped eight mice in his bed, although there were eight cats on the ranch.

DONE BY A WOMAN.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

It had often been remarked in the village of Highlands that Mrs. Carson, wife of the carpenter, was a smart woman. It was not so much that she did the Monday washing out an hour ahead of any other woman in the village or that her hens were laying eggs right along when other hens were resting, but that she was always putting smart ideas into her husband's head and he was always telling of them. The only reason none of these ideas were carried out was from lack of capital. A village carpenter working for $2 a day never has a bank account back him up in speculations calling for thousands of dollars. That was the trouble with his wife's ideas—it wanted a lot of money to carry them out. Besides, Mr. Carson was not a born speculator. He was simply a good natured, easy going carpenter.

The day finally came when the carpenter sickened and died. He left a home clear of debt and a life insurance of $1,000. Some of the neighbors said that was more money than his wife would make in fifty years, notwithstanding her smartness, and others predicted that she would take the cash capital and open the eyes of the town. Within a month after the funeral it was known that she was making a move of some sort. The fact that she had sold her property could not be concealed from the public, but as to what she was going to do with the cash in hand she was reticent. The minister of her church called and offered his financial advice, but it did not seem to be greatly appreciated. Squire Henderson, who was supposed to be one of the cutest capitalists and speculators in that part of the state, called and tried for an hour to convince her that pork was sure to go up and that she could double her money by investing in hogs, but she would not promise to follow his advice. Advice came in on all sides and was received and put on the shelf.

A mile west of Highlands and on the same line of railroad was a farm of 200 acres. It was one of the oldest and poorest on Long Island. It began at the railroad and ran back to the shores of the sound—not exactly to the shore, but to a marsh and a bayou and three or four tidal channels, the breeding ground of malaria and mosquitoes for ten miles around. The farm had been for sale since the oldest inhabitant could remember. It had passed from father to son two or three times. It had steadily gone to decay with all changes, and the day the Widow Carson made her call and announced she might buy it if the price were right she was regarded as an angel straight from heaven. The price was made right, and a promise was extorted that the name of the buyer should be kept secret for a certain length of time. Even before the deed was signed men were at work cutting down the dead and scraggy fruit and other trees, burning up rotten fences and clearing off the site everything but the house. That was left for the real estate office of the Highland Bluffs Improvement company. No one had ever seen any bluffs there, and no one could discover any bluffs there. But what of it?

On the same day that arrangements were made with the railroad company to build a suburban station at the bluffs a surveyor was in the field laying the old farm out into parks, avenues and streets. A few days later the maps were out. Then followed the advertisements of the new town. The Widow Carson came to the front now. She was handling the good thing all by herself—that is, she paid cash to her assistants, and that ended their interest in the matter.

The Widow Carson went on the principle that the bigger her advertisements the quicker they would be read and the more they would convince. She therefore took half pages. It was costly business, but even bankers came forward and offered to advance any money needed, and every day or two a new reporter came down from the city to give "the only woman in the real estate business" another fine writeup.

Did you ever see a woman auctioneer? Well, the hundreds from the city who went down to that sale and got off the train where the foundations for the new depot were being dug saw one. It was Mrs. Carson. A lawyer and a notary were at hand to make out the deeds, but she took her stand on a box to act as auctioneer. It was a novelty. The crowd had come down feeling good natured, and the novelty further pleased them. There were beer and sandwiches, and the day was lovely. The tide covered most of the mud flats and the marsh, and if any one missed the bluffs he wasn't mean enough to speak of it. That auction sale went with a rush. Between 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 3 in the afternoon 400 lots were sold for cash down. The horse's nose bag used to hold the greenbacks was nearly full. After the first forty lots went the rest was all velvet for the widow. It is said that she quit over $25,000 ahead of the game. Quit? Oh, yes! They always do that, you know. She went up to the city and invested her money in a store and made it pay, and if you will go down to Highland Bluffs tomorrow you will find the place just as it was left the day after the auction. There are the frames of the "villas," the real estate office, the parks and streets, the water filled holes where the depot was to rest. You will find the marsh, the mud and the mosquitoes. "What's the matter?" you will ask. Nothing—nothing 'tall. It was "just one of those sales," and the only novelty about it was that it was worked by a woman.

WHAT BECAME OF GEORGE AIKEN?

By TOM GAYLORD.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"What is this report, Meriam, about you and Mr. Abercrombie?"

"It is that we are to be married, and it is true."

"And yet people say that after a man passes forty he will invariably choose a woman from fifteen to twenty years younger than himself."

"There are cases where men past forty marry women they have loved in their youth."

"And yours is such a romance?"

"It is more than a romance—it is a remarkable case."

"Do tell me. I am dying to hear it."

"I must go back twenty-four years. I was then eighteen. Father at that time was speculating in cotton and had made a great deal of money. He was very ambitious for me and told me that, whether or no I married wealth, I must marry a polished man. Father had little opportunity to become refined in his youth, and people always covet what they have been denied. One day when I was out horseback riding my pony ran away with me. A farmer's boy came galloping after me and, catching my rein, saved me from going over a high bank into the river.

"An intimacy sprang up between myself and the youth, whose name was Aiken. I was a shrewd little minx and never said anything at home about the runaway or the farmer's boy.

"Finally I made up my mind that I could not live without George Aiken and proposed to elope with him. He consented, but very unwillingly. He loved me, but had too much sense to consider such a course either honorable or likely to result in our happiness. I called him timid, and this brought him over to my plan.

"My room was on the third story. I procured a rope ladder, on which I intended to descend after the family were all asleep, and hid it in my closet. Aiken was to be at the foot of the ladder to receive me. But when it came to descending the swaying thing my courage failed me, and I called on him to come up and help me. He sprang up the ladder, and just as we were about to go down together we heard footsteps coming up the walk. George Aiken climbed into the window and drew up the ladder.

"Some one came on up to the house and stopped beneath my window. I peeped through the slats and recognized father. He had gone out without my knowing it. He called up the coachman and stationed him under the window, then came into the house.

"'I am ruined!' I cried, clinging to my lover. 'Father must have seen you enter the window.'

"George Aiken remained perfectly cool. Presently he said in a steady, low voice:

"'Give me your watch.'

"I took it from my belt and handed it to him.

"'Go to bed,' he said, 'and pretend to be asleep.'

"He opened the door softly and stole out. In a few minutes I had taken off my clothes and was in bed. I heard a commotion downstairs, and presently father came to my door, awakened me, as he supposed, and told me that a thief had been caught in the house with my watch on him.

"Then I saw it all. George had sacrificed himself to save me from disgrace with my own family. I was in agony. I begged father not to prosecute the thief, but he had already called the police, and in another hour George was in jail. He was tried, put in no defense and, being the son of a reputable farmer, got off with a light sentence.

"I disguised myself, went to the jail, saw him and proposed to confess the whole affair. He said my reputation would be lost and that would be worse than a term in the penitentiary for him. I should have had the strength to confess without his consent, but I hadn't. I who had got him into the scrape was too mean spirited to get him out.

"He served eighteen months. When he came out of prison he did not try to see me, but managed to get a note to me undiscovered in which he said that my father would never consent to my marriage with an ex-convict and it would be a sin for an ex-convict to permit me to make the sacrifice. That was the last I heard of him.

"I married, father failed, my husband became an invalid, and I, always anxious to show some courage to contrast with the weakness of my youth, studied stenography and accepted a position. The afternoon of my entrance on my duties I was called into the office of the head of the firm to take his dictation of the day's letters. He looked at me curiously and asked me some questions about myself.

"Six months after this my husband died. I had been getting remittances from time to time from an unknown friend whose identity I could not possibly discover. After my husband's death these remittances were doubled. I wondered if George had prospered, found me out and helped me without making himself known.

"A year after my husband's death the head of the firm for which I worked told me that he was my unknown friend. Surprised, I asked him what reason he had for serving me. He asked me if I remembered George Aikin. I started, turned pale and said yes. Then he told me that he, Edward Abercrombie, was the lover of my youth.

"We are to be married in October."

EDUCATION FOR THE BOYS.

Why Sons of Small Farmers Develop Managerial Ability.

The education acquired on the small farm broadens citizenship because it is a many sided education and gives correct impressions of many phases of life. All over the world the small, independent farmers are stanch supporters of conservative government. They are intense lovers of home and opposed to radical changes.

Ultimately the small farmer learns to keep a reserve of cash against emergencies, and these aggregated accumulations become very important factors in the capital of the nation, for they are more reliable than deposits from commercial sources. The vast sums of money necessary to carry on the business of a nation are not derived from the deposits of capitalists, but from the aggregation of millions of thrifty small depositors. This is especially true in England, France, Germany and the United States.

It has been observed for years that the sons of small farmers develop managing ability. From their earliest years they are compelled to do things and to act independently. It is from this source that the greatest number of managers of the various enterprises of our country have been drawn.

The great value of educating and training youth for agriculture is so universally conceded that it does not require discussion. The necessity of presenting and impressing better types of husbandry upon adult farmers through demonstrations under their care is rapidly being accepted by the American people as a most important means of education for the rural masses and necessary to any general and rapid advancement.

If all is considered education that "leads out," develops or trains the individual, then the amount of education acquired in even the best schools is only a fraction of what the average man must know to succeed in life. It is, then, of the highest importance to the state that this greater mass of knowledge should be correct, broad, conservative and elevating. Liberal provision has been made for schools by the state, by churches and by individual gifts, but the molding of this greater knowledge to the best interests of society has been mainly left to the caprice of individual effort. The state can with propriety specially foster such conditions of society, such lines of industry or such occupations as evidently tend to mental and physical vigor, to breadth of understanding, to the best citizenship and to the stability of the state. For these ends no more potent influence has been found than an intelligent, prosperous and contented body of thrifty small farmers.

Homemade Horsepower Pump.

The accompanying sketch shows a novel horsepower pump which is used on a northwestern ranch. This pump consists of a walking beam twenty to twenty-five feet long, which is connected at one end to the pump rod and at the other end to the shaft of an old mower wheel. This shaft is lengthened out to about twelve feet and bent into the shape of a crank near the end opposite the wheel. The bearings for this crank are made from a piece of bar iron, V shaped, with a flat bottom. This iron is bolted down loosely to a piece of timber fitted into the ground.

The horse is hitched on near the wheel. The V shaped bearing turns as the horse walks around in a circle, and the crank makes a double stroke for every revolution of the mower wheel. Where a well is deep two mower wheels may be put together to add tractive weight. A horse soon learns to operate this pump without a driver.

The first fatality in England to result from a suffragette disturbance occurred when Alfred Hudson, a policeman, died from injuries received during a riot outside the Colliseum on August 10, last. An attempt on the part of a large body of suffragettes to enter precipitated a riot, in which Hudson was injured internally.

COMMERCE LAW AND THE TRUSTS TREATED BY TAFT

PRESIDENT HANDLES TWO IMPORTANT TOPICS IN HIS SPECIAL MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

WANTS NEW COURT CREATED

Tribunal Would Hear Cases Arising Under the Interstate Law—Chief Executive Also Urges Federal Incorporation Statute to Suppress Abuses and Not to Destroy Legitimate Combinations of Capital.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Needed legislation concerning the interstate commerce law and the control of trusts formed the subject of President Taft's special message to congress. The president calls attention to the partial failure of the present commerce law to get results because of the frequent appeals from its decisions to federal courts and the slowness of the supreme court in deciding these cases. The message says:

"It would not be proper to attempt to deprive any corporation of the right to the review by a court of any order or decree which, if undisturbed, would rob it of a reasonable return upon its investment or would subject it to burdens which would unjustly discriminate against it and in favor of other carriers similarly situated. What is, however, of supreme importance is that the decision of such questions shall be as speedy as the nature of the circumstances will admit, and that a uniformity of decision be secured so as to bring about an effective, systematic and scientific enforcement of the comerce law, rather than conflicting decisions and uncertainty of final result.

Recommends "Court of Commerce."

"For this purpose I recommend the establishment of a court of the United States composed of five judges designated for such purpose from among the circuit judges of the United States, to be known as the 'United States court of commerce,' which court shall be clothed with exclusive original jurisdiction over the following classes of cases:

"(1) All cases for the enforcement, otherwise than by ajudication and collection, of a forfeiture or penalty, or by infliction of criminal punishment, of any order of the interstate commerce commission other than for the payment of money.

"(2) All cases brought to enjoin, set aside, annul or suspend any order or requirement of the interstate commerce commission.

"(3) All such cases as under section 3 of the act of February 19, 1903, known as the 'Elkins act,' are authorized to be maintained in a circuit court of the United States.

"(4) All such mandamus proceedings as under the provisions of section 20 or section 23 of the interstate commerce law are authorized to be maintained in a circuit court of the United States.

"Reasons precisely analogous to those which induced the congress to create the court of customs appeals by the provisions in the tariff act of August 5, 1909, may be urged in support of the creation of the commerce court.

"In order to provide a sufficient number of judges to enable this court to be constituted it will be necessary to authorize the appointment of five additional circuit judges, who, for the purposes of appointment, might be distributed to those circuits where there is at the present time the largest volume of business such as the second, third, fourth, seventh and eighth circuits. The act should empower the chief justice at any time when the business of the court of commerce does not require the services of all the judges to reassign the judges designated to that court to the circuits to which they respectively belong; and it should also provide for payment to such judges while sitting by assignment in the court of commerce of such additional amount as is necessary to bring their annual compensation up to $10,000.

Only Second to Supreme Court.

"The regular sessions of such court should be held at the capitol, but it should be empowered to hold sessions in different parts of the United States if found desirable; and its orders and judgments should be made final, subject only to review by the supreme court of the United States, with the provision that the operation of the decree appealed from shall not be stayed unless the supreme court shall so order. The commerce court should be empowered in its discretion to restrain or suspend the operation of an order of the interstate commerce commission under review pending the final hearing and determination of the proceeding, but no such restraining order should be made except upon notice and afetr hearing, unless in cases where irreparable damage would otherwise ensue to the petitioner. A judge of that court might be empowered to allow a stay of the commission's order for a period of not more than 60 days, but pending application to the court of its order or injunction, then only where his order shall contain a specific finding based upon evidence submitted to the judge making the order and identified by reference thereto that such irreparable damage would result to the petitioner, specifying the nature of the damage."

"Under the existing law the interstate commerce commission itself initiates and defends litigation in the courts for the enforcement, or in the defense of its orders and decrees, and for this purpose it employs attorneys, who, while subject to the control of the attorney general, act upon the initiative and under the instructions of the commission. This blending of administrative, legislative and judicial functions tends, in my opinion, to impair the efficiency of the commission by clothing it with partisan characteristics and robbing it of the impartial judicial attitude it should occupy in passing upon questions submitted to it. In my opinion all litigation affecting the government should be under the direct control of the department of justice; and I therefore recommend that all proceedings affecting orders and decrees of the interstate commerce commission be brought by or against the United States eo nomine, and be placed in charge of an assistant attorney general acting under the direction of the attorney general."

Would Permit Agreements.

Coming to the subject of railroad pools and traffic agreements, the president says:

"The Republican platform of 1908 expressed the belief that the interstate commerce law should be further amended so as to give the railroads the right to make any public traffic agreements subject to the approval of the commission, but maintaining always the principle of competition between naturally competing lines, and avoiding the common control of such lines by any means whatsoever.

"In view of the complete control over rate-making, and other practices of interstate carriers established by the acts of congress, and as recommended in this communication, I see no reason why agreements between carriers subject to the act, specifying the classifications of freight and the rates, fares and charges for transportation of passengers and freight which they may agree to establish, should not be permitted, provided, copies of such agreements be promptly filed with the commission, but subject to all the provisions of the interstate commerce act, and subject to the right of any parties to such agreement to cancel it as to all or any of the agreed rates, fares, charges, or classifications by 30 days' notice in writing to the other parties and to the commission."

Other Amendments Urged.

In accord with other declarations of the Republican platform of 1908, the president further recommends that the interstate commerce law be amended so as to provide, that no railroad company subject to the commerce act shall, directly or indirectly, acquire any interests of any kind in capital stock, or purchase or lease any railroad, or any other corporation which competes with it respecting business to which the interstate commerce act applies; that a law be enacted providing "that no railroad corporation subject to the interstate commerce act shall hereafter for any purpose connected with or relating to any part of its business governed by said act, issue any capital stock without previous or simultaneous payment to it of not less than the par value of such stock, or any bonds or other obligations (except notes maturing not more than one year from the date of their issue), without the previous or simultaneous payment to such corporation of not less than the par value of such bonds, or other obligations, or, if issued at less than their par value, then not without such payment of the reasonable market value of such bonds or obligations as ascertained by the interstate commerce commission; and that no property, service, or other thing than money, shall be taken in payment to such carrier corporation, of the par or other required price of such stock, bond or other obligation, except the fair value of such property, services or other thing ascertained by the commission."

Would Prevent Wrong Practices.

The president continues:

"I believe these suggested modifications in and amendments to the interstate commerce act would make it a complete and effective measure for securing reasonableness of rates and fairness of practices in the operation of interstate railroad lines, without undue preference to any individual or class over any others.

"By my direction the attorney general has drafted a bill to carry out these recommendations, which will be furnished upon request to the appropriate committee whenever it may be desired.

"In addition to the foregoing amendments of the interstate commerce law, the interstate commerce commission should be given the power, after a hearing, to determine upon the uniform construction of these appliances—such as sill steps, ladders, roof hand holds, running boards and hand brakes on freight cars engaged in interstate commerce—used by the trainmen in the operation of trains, the defects and lack of uniformity in which are apt to produce accidents and injuries to railway trainmen. The wonderful reforms effected in the number of switchmen and trainmen injured by coupling accidents, due to the enforced introduction of safety couplers, is a demonstration of what can be done if railroads are compelled to adopt proper safety appliances.

"The question has arisen in the operations of the interstate commerce employers' liability act, as to whether suit can be brought against the employer company in any place other than that of its home office. The right to bring the suit under this act should be as easy of enforcement as the right of a private person not in the company's employ to sue on an ordinary claim, and process in each suit should be sufficiently served if upon the station agent of the company upon whom service is authorized is made, to bond the company in ordinary actions arising under state laws. Bills for both the foregoing purposes have been considered by the house of representatives and have been passed, and are now before the interstate commerce committee of the senate. I earnestly urge that they be enacted into law."

Control of the Trusts.

The second part of the message is devoted to the control of trusts. After a lengthy discussion of trusts, good and bad, and the success of prosecutions under the Sherman anti-trust act, Mr. Taft says:

"It is the duty and purpose of the executive to direct an investigation by the department of justice, through the grand jury or otherwise, into the history, organization, and purposes of all the industrial companies with respect to which there is any reasonable ground for suspicion that they have been organized for a purpose, and are conducting business on a plan which is in violation of the anti-trust law. The work is a heavy one, but it is not beyond the power of the department of justice, if sufficient funds are furnished, to carry on the investigations and to pay the counsel engaged in the work. But such an investigation and possible prosecution of corporations whose prosperity or destruction affects the comfort not only of stockholders but millions of wage earners, employes, and associated tradesmen must necessarily tend to disturb the confidence of the business community, to dry up the now flowing sources of capital from its places of hoarding, and produce a halt in our present prosperity that will cause suffering and strained circumstances among the innocent many for faults of the guilty few. The question which I wish in this message to bring clearly to the consideration and decision of the congress whether to avoid business danger something cannot be done by which these business combinations may be offered a means, without great financial disturbance, of changing the character, organization and extent of their business into one within the lines of the law under federal control and supervision, securing compliance with the anti-trust statutes.

For Government Control.

"Generally, in the industrial combinations called 'trusts,' the principal business is the sale of goods in many states and in foreign markets; in other words, the interstate and foreign business far exceeds the business done in any one state. This fact will justify the federal government in granting a federal charter to such a combination to make and sell in interstate and foreign commerce the products of useful manufacture under such limitations as will secure a compliance with the anti-trust law. It is possible so to frame a statute that while it offers protection to a federal company against harmful, vexatious and unnecessary invasion by the states, it shall subject it to reasonable taxation and control by the states, with respect to its purely local business.

"Many people conducting great businesses have cherished a hope and a belief that in some way or other a line may be drawn between 'good trusts' and 'bad trusts,' and that it is possible by amendment to the anti-trust law to make a distinction under which good combinations may be permitted to organize, suppress competition, control prices, and do it all legally if only they do not abuse the power by taking too great profit out of the business. They point with force to certain notorious trusts as having grown into power through criminal methods by the use of illegal rebates and plain cheating, and by various acts utterly violative of business honesty or morality, and urge the establishment of some legal line of separation by which 'criminal trusts' of this kind can be punished, and they, on the other hand, be permitted under the law to carry on their business. Now, the public, and especially the business public, ought to rid themselves of the idea that such a distinction is practicable or can be introduced into the statute.

"In considering violations of the anti-trust law we ought, of course, not to forget that that law makes unlawful, methods of carrying on business which before its passage were regarded as evidence of business sagacity and success, and that they were denounced in this act not because of their intrinsic immorality, but because of the dangerous results toward which they tended, the concentration of industrial power in the hands of the few, leading to oppression and injustice. In dealing, therefore, with many of the men who have used the methods condemned by the statute for the purpose of maintaining a profitable business, we may well facilitate a change by them in the method of doing business, and enable them to bring it back into the zone of lawfulness, without losing to the country the economy of management by which, in our domestic trade the cost of production has been materially lessened, and in competition with foreign manufacturers our foreign trade has been greatly increased.

Asks National Corporation Law.

"I therefore recommend the enactment by congress of a general law providing for the formation of corporations to engage in trade and commerce among the states and with foreign nations, protecting them from undue interference by the states and regulating their activities so as to prevent the recurrence, under national auspices, of those abuses which have arisen under state control. Such a law should provide for the issue of stock of such corporationas to an amount equal only to the cash paid in on the stock; and if the stock be issued for property, then at a fair valuation ascertained under approval and supervision of federal authority after a full and complete disclosure of all the facts pertaining to the value of such property and the interest therein of the persons to whom it is proposed to issue stock in payment of such property. It should subject the real and personal property only of such corporations to the same taxation as imposed by the states within which it may be situated upon other similar property located therein, and it should require such corporations to file full and complete reports of their operations with the department of commerce and labor at regular intervals. Corporations organized under this act should be prohibited from acquiring and holding stock in other corporations (except for special reasons upon approval by the proper federal authority), thus avoiding the creation, under national auspices, of the holding company with subordinate corporations in different states which has been such an effective agency in the creation of the great trusts and monopolies.

State Laws Conflict.

"If the prohibition of the anti-trust act against combinations in restraint of trade is to be effectively enforced, it is essential that the national government shall provide for the creation of national corporations to carry on a legitimate business throughout the United States. The conflicting laws of the different states of the union with respect to foreign corporations make it difficult, if not impossible, for one corporation to comply with their requirements so as to carry on business in a number of different states.

"To the suggestion that this proposal of federal incorporation for industrial combinations is intended to furnish them a refuge in which to continue industrial business under federal protection. It should be said that the measure contemplated does not repeal the Sherman anti-trust law and is not to be framed so as to permit the doing of the wrongs which it is the purpose of that law to prevent, but only to foster a continuance and advance of the highest industrial efficiency without permitting industrial abuses.

"Such a national incorporation law will be opposed, first, by those who believe that trusts should be completely broken up and their property destroyed. It will be opposed, second, by those who doubt the constitutionality of such federal incorporation and even if it is valid, object to it as too great federal centralization. It will be opposed, third, by those who will insist that a mere voluntary incorporation like this will not attract to its assistance the worst of the offenders against the anti-trust statute and who will therefore propose instead of it a system of compulsory licenses for all federal corporations engaged in interstate business.

"Let us consider these objections in their order. The government is now trying to dissolve some of these combinations and it is not the intention of the government to desist in the least degree in its effort to end these combinations which are to-day monopolizing the commerce of this country; that where it appears that the acquisition and concentration of property go to the extent of creating a monopoly of substantially and directly restraining interstate commerce, it is not the intention of the government to permit this monopoly to exist under federal incorporation or to transfer to the protecting wing of the federal governmen of a state corporation now violating the Sherman act. But it is not, and should not be, the policy of the government to prevent reasonable concentration of capital which is necessary to the economic development of manufacture, trade and commerce. . . .

May Doubt Constitutionality.

"Second—There are those who doubt the constitutionality of such federal incorporation. The regulation of interstate and foreign commerce is certainly conferred in the fullest measure upon congress, and if for the purpose of securing in the most thorough manner that kind of regulation, congress shall insist that it may provide and authorize agencies to carry on that commerce, it would seem to be within its power, this has been distinctly affirmed with respect to railroad companies doing an interstate business and interstate bridges. The power of incorporation has been exercised by congress and upheld by the supreme court in this regard. Why, then, with respect to any other form of interstate commerce like the sale of goods across state boundaries and into foreign countries, may the same power not be asserted? Indeed, it is the very fact that they carry on interstate commerce that makes these great industrial concerns subject to federal prosecution and control. How far as incidental to the carrying on of that commerce it may be within the power of the federal government to authorize the manufacturer of goods, is perhaps more open to discussion, though a recent decision of the supreme court would seem to answer that question in the affirmative.

"The third objection, that the worst offenders will not accept federal incorporation, is easily answered. The decrees of injunction recently adopted in prosecutions under the anti-trust law are so thorough and sweeping that the corporations affected by them have but three courses before them:

"First, they must resolve themselves into their component parts in the different states, with a consequent loss to themselves of capital and effective organization and to the country of concentrated energy and enterprise; or second, in defiance of the law and under some secret trust they must attempt to continue their business in violation of the federal statute, and thus incur the penalties of contempt and bring on an inevitable criminal prosecution of the individuals named in the decree and their associates; or

"Third, they must reorganize and accept in good faith the federal charter I suggest a federal compulsory license law, urged as a substitute for a federal incorporation law, is unnecessary except to reach that kind of corporation which, by virtue of the considerations already advanced, will take advantage voluntarily of an incorporation law, while the other state corporations doing an interstate business do not need the supervision or the regulation of federal license and would only be unnecessarily burdened thereby."

"QUANTITY, QUALITY AND PRICE"

THE THREE ESSENTIALS THAT ARE GIVING WESTERN CANADA Greater Impulse Than Ever This Year.

The reports from the grain fields of Central Canada, (which comprises the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta) are to hand. The year 1909 has not only kept pace with previous years in proving that this portion of the Continent is capable of producing a splendid yield of all the smaller grains, but it has thoroughly outstripped previous seasons. There is quantity, quality and price and from all parts of an area of about 320,000 square miles there comes the strong refrain of contentment and satisfaction. In the distribution of the conditions causing it no district has been overlooked.

Various estimates of the total yield of wheat for the country have been made, but it is not the vast total that influences the general reader so much as what has been done individually. The grand total—say 130 million bushels—may have its effect on the grain price of the world; it may be interesting to know that in the world's markets the wheat crop of Canada has suddenly broken upon the trading boards, and with the Argentine, and with Russia and India, is now a factor in the making of prices. If so today, what will be its effect five or ten years from now, when, instead of there being seven million acres under crop with a total yield of 125 or 130 million bushels, there will be from 17 to 30 million acres in wheat with a yield of from 325 to 600 million bushels. When it is considered that the largest yield in the United States but slightly exceeded 700 million bushels, the greatness of these figures may be understood. Well, such is a safe forecast, for Canada has the land and it has the soil. Even today the Province of Saskatchewan, one of the three great wheat growing provinces of Canada, with 400,000 acres under wheat, produces nearly 90 million bushels, or upwards of one-tenth of the greatest yield of the United States. And Saskatchewan is yet only in the beginning of its development. As Lord Grey recently pointed out in speaking on this very subject, this year's crop does not represent one-tenth of the soil equally fertile that is yet to be brought under the plough.

Individually, reports are to hand of yields of twenty-five, thirty and thirty-five bushels to the acre. Scores of yields are reported of forty and some as high as sixty bushels. The farmer, who takes care of his soil, who gets his seed-bed ready early, is certain of a splendid crop.

The news of the magnificent crop yield throughout the Canadian West will be pleasing to the friends of the thousands of Americans who are residents in that country and who are vastly instrumental in the assistance they are rendering to let the world know its capabilities.

A BURNING ERUPTION FROM HEAD TO FEET

"Four years ago I suffered severely with a terrible eczema, being a mass of sores from head to feet and for six weeks confined to my bed. During that time I suffered continual torture from itching and burning. After being given up by my doctor I was advised to try Cuticura Remedies. After the first bath with Cuticura Soap and application of Cuticura Ointment I enjoyed the first good sleep during my entire illness. I also used Cuticura Resolvent and the treatment was continued for about three weeks. At the end of that time I was able to be about the house, entirely cured, and have felt no ill effects since. I would advise any person suffering from any form of skin trouble to try the Cuticura Remedies as I know what they did for me. Mrs. Edward Nenning, 1112 Salina St., Watertown, N. Y., Apr. 11, 1909."

SYNOPSIS.

Richard Derring, returning from a winter in the woods to his mother's farm home, is overtaken by his uncle, accompanied by his eccentric wife, coming to pay a visit at the farm. Aunt Jerusha's questions about Emily Hutton, supposed to be Richard's sweetheart, bring out the fact that she is to marry a merchant, Edwards. Derring's disappointment stimulates his ambition and under the advice of Seth Kinney, a hermit of the woods, he resolves to fit himself for college. Kinney promises to teach him Greek. Derring tells his mother his resolve, and in his grandfather's old laboratory begins the study of Greek. Seth Kinney hears Richard's Greek recitation in the woods while he and Tom Bishop ply the cross-cut saw. Derring learns that he can look indifferently upon the loss of Emily. He visits Aunt Jerusha, who volunteers to help him through college. The Greek learned in the woods carries Richard triumphantly through entrance examinations, wins approval from the professor and insures his popularity among his fellows. Four years in college obliterates the memory of Emily. Derring begins journalistic work in Chicago. He meets Helen Gordon, an artist. Derring is promoted to art critic on his paper. He makes rapid progress in comradeship with Helen. Helen refuses to marry Richard and hamper his career and her own. They enter into a companionship compact.

CHAPTER XII.—Continued.

Gradually he came to understand that her determination not to marry him was influenced by something stronger than a mere personal shrinking from a false marriage. She would not marry, because she would not take a selfish happiness at the expense of her mother and those that depended on her; but more than that, and deeper, she would not by a rash promise add one more to the marriages that end in vain regret or divorce.

Gradually, too, he came to understand more fully what she had meant by saying that if they were made for each other they would find it out without promises, and if not, it were a thousand times better they should drift apart. And as he came to understand, an element of reverence mingled with his love for her, deepening and intensifying it.

He himself would not have questioned. He would gladly have married. To him it would not have been a test, but a consummation. But that they were not to marry did not trouble him. Why should he ask more of a love that was proving the fulfillment of all the longing of his boyhood and youth? It was transforming him—mind, body and soul. His frame, which had been tall, spare, and loosely built, began to fill and settle into strength! his step became firm and quick; his head took a firmer poise above the square shoulders; even his eyes shared in the metamorphosis—they lost their dreamy, pleading look and became alert, laughing, and full of happiness and a strange power that seemed no longer to ask, but to command help and sympathy from all who met their glance.

Something of this change Derring himself recognized. He knew that he was alive, glowing in every fiber; but he was less analytic in his happiness than in his misery; he did not see that his overflowing vitality communicated itself to everyone with whom he came in contact. It was only when some one spoke of the change that he knew that it was being marked. He exulted in his heart that no one guessed the cause.

He was settled down and working with a vigor of which he had not dreamed himself capable. Everything bent before him. He felt within himself power to conquer the world should it stand in his way. Sometimes he clenched his hands and stretched his arms to their fullest to give outlet to the play impulse that could not exhaust itself in work.

In his inner life, too, a change, less perceptible, but no less real, was taking place. Sight and hearing were opened to new beauty. Music had become to him a medium of soul speech; and the sordid city streets, with their overhanging clouds of smoke, started to picturesque life and beauty.

A long archway with a slant of sunshine at the farther end—an Italian woman stealing into the shadow, a huge bundle on her back and colored kerchief about her head—would stir his pulses like an old painting. The unsightly process of building, with its debris of mortar, bricks, and lath, gained artistic value as his eyes took in the grouping of the men at work around the mortar-beds—the soft, gray-white of the mortar, the dull red, blue or orange of the shirts upon the supple or stolid figures of the men, with the play of muscle beneath. Sometimes it was a single figure, that might have stepped from a Rembrandt canvas, appearing for a minute and disappearing in the shifting crowd. Always, everywhere, there was beauty—until Derring, seeing it all, longed at times to relieve his overcharged senses by a loud cry—so wonderful, so overpowering, had the beauty of the world become.

Undoubtedly much of this quickened insight was due to the thought of Helen, who was never for a moment absent from his mind. Whatever work was engaging his hand or brain, deep below it all was a consciousness of her existence, like a second ego, only a thousand times dearer and more inspiring than his own personality. It seemed to give him a sixth sense by which he perceived the beautiful—until Helen gave up in despair the attempt to transfer to canvas all that he brought to her notice.

It became a common sight for her sketching stool to be set up in some sheltered corner of the busiest part of the city. Derring, who had dreaded the experiment, saw, with a thrill, that the quiet power of her personality that so rested and soothed him was felt here. The crowd either passed her by or stopped for a moment to look with respectful curiosity as the work grew under her hand. Sometimes a mason filled her water-can or a carpenter paused for a moment in his work to adjust her umbrella. It was the Chicago spirit—laissez faire, and help when you can. Except for the dust and rattle of the street she was as unmolested as in her quiet studio.

She Seemed to Him Already Dead—Removed from Caresses.

CHAPTER XIII.

The fall and early winter had been mild. In January it came on to snow and to blow; and with the snowing and blowing the thermometer dropped many degrees. Old inhabitants told each other it was real "Chicago weather;" and new inhabitants shivered in their sealskins, or, lacking these, put on extra flannels.

It was during the cold weather that Derring's work took him one afternoon to Lakeview to look over the work of the Amateur Art club. As he left the house after finishing his task a dull roar fell on his ear. He started and listened eagerly—yes, it was the lake. In a moment more his coat-collar was pulled up about his ears, his hat settled bore firmly over his eyes, and he was on his way to the shore. The lake had a peculiar fascination for him. He could never resist it, especially when it was roaring and thundering like this.

A few minutes' walk brought him in sight of the mounting, threatening, white-capped breakers. His heart leaped with exultation. The power of the storm was on him. He longed to run, to leap, to wrestle with it and scream himself hoarse against its tumult. It was like the ocean—that long stretch of lonely shore as yet unprotected by the breakwater.

Gradually, as he looked, he became conscious of something homelike and protected in the midst of the uproar. A thread of smoke rose from the chimney of a small, rude house, far down the shore, almost within reach of the threatening waves that ran up the sandy beach. All about the house boats lay stacked, evidently in winter quarters; and here and there remnants of fishing-tackle showed the occupation of fair weather. The house was sheathed in rough red boards and patched with artistic regularity. It was a sketch made to hand—a touch of nature within arm's reach of Chicago.

Helen was filled with enthusiasm and scoffed at his suggestion of waiting for warmer weather. "Half its charm is in the contrast," she protested. "Don't you see?—winter quarters in the midst of all that tumult. I shall go up this afternoon."

Derring consented unwillingly. He was obliged to go to Hyde Park for the day, and it was not till four o'clock that he was free to seek her on the North Shore.

She was seated near the point from which he had first seen the house, an old piece of sail-cloth, fastened between two stakes, sheltering her from the wind.

She looked up when he approached as casually as if he had stood there all the afternoon. "I haven't caught that wind and it isn't cold enough—too much blue, isn't there?" she asked, holding her head back and surveying her work critically.

"Really, aren't you blue with too much cold?" he responded meekly.

"Don't be foolish. I am all right."

He had taken off his overcoat and was fastening it around her shoulders.

"Oh, you mustn't do that. You'll take cold. Well, then, if you will—only you must go into the house and get warm. You'll find them highly entertaining, besides being good," she added. "They made me some hot coffee and the man rigged up this sail-cloth to keep off the wind. And there's a pair of candlesticks in there I would give my eyes for. But they're not for sale. So you're not to raise my bid."

"I couldn't raise it—if it were only a glance of your eyes—let alone the eyes themselves."

"I hope you didn't come all the way up here in the cold just to be funny," she responded severely. But she did not vouchsafe him the glance. She was absorbed in washing out the unsatisfactory sky for a second trial.

Derring did not go into the house. He walked rapidly up and down the beach, watching the angry sky and the isolated little house. He fancied that, as the early twilight settled down, it stood out more distinctly and vividly—emphasizing its individuality—the work of man against the power of darkness.

At last he came and looked over her shoulder.

"Rather better, isn't it?" she asked complacently without looking up.

"You have caught the very demon of the storm in those clouds."

It was true. She had done what the water-colorist seldom achieves—succeeded in washing out her first attempt and replacing it with the desired effect. The thorough wetting of the paper or a touch of genius had aided the second attempt, and the result was a wash—clean and fresh in color—and in the clouds what Derring had called the demon of the storm.

"Come," he said decisively as she sat putting in the last few touches lingeringly. "Come. You must stop. It is too dark. You will be frozen."

She began to collect her sketching materials.

"Leave those for me. Go on to the house and get warm. I'll bring your traps."

She started obediently towards the house, breathing on her cold fingers to warm them. But—so fierce was the wind—she made slow progress, and before she reached the house he was at her side. He opened the door that ushered them into the low room.

The round-faced Dutchwoman who greeted them looked with kindly eyes on the young lady. She bustled about the room and placed an armchair near the fire. "You stayed out longer this time," she said in a deep guttural voice. She gave a quick look of interest from Helen to Derring.

Helen sank into the chair with a grateful smile. "Yes, I stayed out to fin—" She had slipped noiselessly from the armchair to the floor.

With a quick exclamation Derring dropped to his knees beside her.

"It's only the heat," said the Dutchwoman practically. "Give her this." She had prepared a draught of brandy

Derring poured it between the white lips, around which a blue line was slowly settling.

They watched for the effect—Derring eagerly, the woman with close attention. There was no sign of returning life. Derring looked up in despair and the woman hurried away into an inner room for some other remedy.

He leaned over the motionless figure, listening. Slowly he gathered it in his arms. Tenderly, passionately, he drew her to him and pressed his lips on the white mouth with its shadow. She seemed to him already dead—removed from caresses. Slowly the lids fluttered, a breath trembled through the lips, and she lifted her eyes to his, faintly.

Whistling Trees.

Among the curiosities of tree life is the sofar, or whistling tree of Nubia. When the winds blow over this tree it gives out flutelike sounds, playing away to the wilderness for hours at a time strange, weird melodies. It is the spirit of the dead singing among the branches, the natives say, but the scientific white man says that the sounds are due to a myriad of small holes which an insect bores in the spines of the branches.

The weeping tree of the Canary islands is another arboreal freak. This tree, in the driest weather, will rain down showers from its leaves, and the natives gather up the water from the pool formed at the foot of the trunk and find it pure and fresh. The tree exudes the water from innumerable pores situated at the base of the leaves.

Misplaced.

A young mother has just been deeply shocked as the result of her attempted religious instruction to her five-year-old daughter. The vehicle selected as her favorite illustration in these teachings was a picture of the "Madonna and Child" in the library wall. What she actually succeeded in fixing in the youngster's brain was that the supreme being whose picture hung before them was strictly a resident of churches and ever to be spoken of with bated breath.

So much accomplished, the child was taken on a shopping expedition. Scarcely were they across the threshold before the young mother was brought to a crimson-faced standstill by her little daughter's horrified whisper: "Oh, mamma!" as she pointed to a counter full of pictures, "What is God doing in the ten-cent store?"

Governor Deneen, of Illinois, owns a section of land in Saskatchewan, Canada. He has said in an interview:

"As an American I am delighted to see the remarkable progress of Western Canada. Our people are flocking across the boundary in thousands, and I have not yet met one who admitted he had made a mistake. They are all doing well. There is scarcely a community in the Middle or Western States that has not a representative in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta."

POLITICS

J. W. Knadler this week announces his candidacy for the office of Clerk of Courts on the republican ticket. Joe is widely and favorably known over the county, he for several years being one of the publishers of the Garner Signal, later being employed on the Britt Tribune, and at present being foreman of the Corwith Hustler. Those who are well acquainted with him and know the misfortunes that have been his through sickness and death in his family, are strong in their endorsement of his candidacy. Joe is honest and straightforward and we believe thoroughly capable of filling the position to which he aspires, and his candidacy merits the careful consideration of the republicans of the county.

J. O. Lewis, of Garner, places his announcement in our paper this week. He is a republican candidate for the office of County Treasurer and at present is the deputy in that office. While we are not personally acquainted with Mr. Lewis, we do know of him. He was formerly a resident of Woden, where he published the Watchman and also filled the position of Postmaster of that town some years. He has a host of friends throughout the county who will be glad to support him for this office. For the past year or more he has been deputy treasurer and has thoroughly versed himself in the duties of the office.

I think that every farmer should put in 20 or 30 acres of sugar beets in and around Klemme this year. The average yield per acre is ten tons. Good ground will do better. The expense to raise the beets will be about six tons per acre with all your labor figured in. The company will furnish seed, fertilizer, help to take care beets and look after so it is done right, furnish seeder and plow to plow out in fall and pay $5 per ton on track.

Last week was a stormy period for the country in general and many of the railroads were badly tied up by the heavy snow. In many of the Iowa towns the coal shortage threatened to be a serious matter and the governor urged upon the railroads to haul coal. For a few days it looked like Klemme would be suffering from a coal famine, but each of our dealers got in a car the last of the week, so no one suffered. The way freight on the Rock Island was unable to run for a few days and the stocks of groceries in some lines got down pretty low. Arthur Wellemeyer had a corner on the yeast cake market in Klemme last Saturday afternoon and at supper time he had just one package left. The weather has moderated greatly this week and the usual January thaw is expected.

The subject matter was logical, persuasive, strengthened with illustrations and seasoned with good wit and humor. He spoke distinctly, to the purpose, and with earnest fire. This lecture is specially beneficial for young people.- Cushing Correspondent.

Rev. Keck will lecture at the Klemme opera house on Wednesday evening, Feb 2nd.

Some of our Klemme business firms have been on the changing order. This week Mr. Griewe turns the meat market over to Chas. Busch, who has already received his degree as "Butch." We wish him success in this new venture

A number of Germantown farmers have been busily engaged the past few weeks, shelling corn and drawing it to market. Though the kernel is of fair quality the cob is so soft that it would mould in warm weather.

The year just closed has certainly been fruitful along the line of great movements in cleaner politics, purer food and temperate living. In the battle with rum, only four states in the Union are left with the saloon in full sway. Nine states have prohibitory laws and thirty-five states control the liquor traffic by local option. 750 cities voted out the saloon during 1909 and 180 counties went dry during this time. Forty saloons are being voted out of existence daily in local option territory. In Michigan 900 saloons and 10 breweries were closed by one day's vote, and in Illinois breweries with 1500 dependent saloons were put out of business in one day. This means more comfortable homes and happy families. Who is not gratified with the pure food law? The result is that the producer is realizing far better prices for his products.

WHAT BECAME OF THE BUTTON

Naive Confession of Little Girl Proved Her to Be True Daughter of Eve.

Loie Fuller, the noted dancer, told at a luncheon a story about her class of dancing children.

"I gave the children a Christmas party last year," she said, "and when the pudding came on I said to them:

"'I have put in this pudding a coin, a little china doll and a button. Whoever gets the coin will be rich. Whoever gets the doll will be married before the year is out. But whoever gets the button will be an old maid.'

"Well, the pudding disappeared rapidly, and the little girls soon found the coin and the china doll. But the button did not turn up. No one got the button. This amazed me.

"That night I said to my favorite little girl, as we sat alone by the fire in my room:

"'I can't understand what became of that button. I put it in the pudding myself.'

"'I'll tell you,' the little girl confessed, turning rosy with confusion. 'I dot the button. But I didn't want everybody to laugh at me—tho I thwallowed it.'"

A WOMAN DOCTOR
Was Quick to See that Coffee was Doing the Mischief.

A lady tells of a bad case of coffee poisoning and tells it in a way so simple and straightforward that literary skill could not improve it.

"I had neuralgic headaches for 12 years," she says, "and suffered untold agony. When I first began to have them I weighed 140 pounds, but they brought me down to 110. I went to many doctors and they gave me only temporary relief. So I suffered on, till one day a woman doctor told me to use Postum. She said I looked like I was coffee poisoned.

"So I began to drink Postum and I gained 15 pounds in the first few weeks and continued to gain, but not so fast as at first. My headaches began to leave me after I had used Postum about two weeks — long enough to get the coffee poison out of my system.

"Since I began to use Postum I can gladly say that I never know what a neuralgic headache is like any more, and it was nothing but Postum that made me well. Before I used Postum I never went out alone; I would get bewildered and would not know which way to turn. Now I go alone and my head is as clear as a bell. My brain and nerves are stronger than they have been for years."

AMES SHORT COURSE

Five Hundred and Seventy-Five Enrolled on Second Day.

MANY ENTRIES FOR THE SHOW

Nearly 450 Exhibitors Are Participating in the Corn Exhibition and Trying for the Cash Prizes Offered.

Ames, Ia., Jan. 10.—The total enrollment at the short course at the opening was 575. This is considerably better than was expected, considering unfavorable conditions of the weather. The notable feature this year is the increased number of boys who are in attendance. A number of these are enrolled in the special work that is given for boys and girls under 18 years of age.

The combined entries at the senior and junior corn shows are greater than the total number of entries at the Iowa corn show at Des Moines. Two hundred and fifty exhibitors are represented in the junior show and nearly two hundred in the senior show. The entries will average nearly two to each exhibitor. The gratifying feature of these corn shows is the large number of new exhibitors that have been brought out.

At one of the sessions of the short course Mr. Tavener, city superintendent of schools at Coin, Page county, Iowa, told something of their plans of education at that place. Sewing, nature study and gardening are taken up in the grades, leading to a four years' course in agriculture in the high school. This work is correlated as much as possible with the regular studies. About two-fifths of the time is given to the new studies, the remaining three-fifths being taken up with the regular work. The teachers find that so much more enthusiasm is created by this new method that more can be accomplished along regular lines in the three-fifths of the time given to them than could be done in the entire time before the new lines of work were introduced.

The high school has four acres of ground which are to be used next spring for school garden work and corn raising. Manual training work is made a part of the course. Nearly all the tables and furniture for the domestic science and other departments were made by the boys in the manual training rooms. The work of cementing and finishing many of the rooms was also done by the boys. A special attempt is made to interest parents in the work by getting them to visit the school frequently.

The entire plan on which the work is carried on is to work with real things as much as possible.

Mr. Tavener paid high tribute to Miss Field, the county superintendent of schools, who has placed Page county on such a high plane educationally. "Miss Field," he says, "has Page county walking on air."

Mr. Morrison of Des Moines, gave a short but extremely interesting talk on "Some Traits of Character in Successful Men I Have Met."

Miss Field of Page county has the entire exhibit which won the grand championship for county school exhibits at the corn show at Omaha on exhibition here. This exhibit is attracting a great deal of attention. The nine boys from Page county whom Miss Field brought with her are among the most enthusiastic "Short Horns" to be found on the campus.

Pioneer Minister of Iowa is Dead.

Big Engines Are "Balky."

Belle Plaine.—It is claimed that the new large engines lately put in service on the Chicago & Northwestern railway on the Iowa and Galena divisions are not giving satisfaction, and have been causing trouble on account of "burning out," which is supposed to be due to there being too little boiler capacity for water above the crown-sheet. Twenty-five of these new monster engines were lately put into service on these two divisions, and many of them are now in the shops for repairs. These engines cost about $8,000 each, and instead of relieving the congestion of freight and keeping the passenger and mail trains on schedule, they seem to perform less satisfactorily than the overworked smaller engines.

Little Lad Has Ten Grandparents.

Corning.—The young son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bohanan, born recently, has the distinction of having ten living grandparents. On the father's side is William Bohanan of Corning, great grandfather; Mr. and Mrs. Larry Jackson of Colony township, great grandparents, and Mr. and Mrs. James Bohanan of Prescott, grandparents. On the mother's side are Mrs. Enos Fowler of Streator, Ill., great grandmother; Mr. and Mrs. Martin Riley, Sr., of Mercer township, great grand parents, and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Fowler of Prescott township, grandparents.

Interurban Man Makes Offer.

Sioux City.—Declaring that a survey had been made and a proposition fully financed to build an interurban from Parkston, S. D. to Sioux City, C. A. Magee says he has asked the city cuncil to call a special election to vote the company right-of-way in the city streets. Magee says his company has on hand $600,000 cash. The whole proposition was a surprise here and doubtless will put several local interurban schemes out of commission. The line is planned to run through Sioux Falls, Freeman, Yankton, Centerville and Elk Point, S. D.

Drainage Ditch Will Cost $101,561.

Forest City.—Drainage district No. 3, which is to be laid out on the line between Winnebago and Kossuth counties, will cost, according to the estimates of the two boards of supervisors of the two counties, a total of $101,561.63. At the meeting of the boards an agreement was reached by which Winnebago county will pay $97,753.07 and Kossuth $3,808.55. This is one of the big districts of this part of the state.

Iowa Faces Coal Famine.

Des Moines.—Numerous Iowa cities, like Des Moines, face coal famines. The situation in the capital city is growing desperate, though mines are being worked to their full capacity. It is impossible to secure prompt delivery of coal owing to lack of cars, and many residents of the city report that they have been trying unsuccessfully to secure coal for more than a week.

Farmer Nearly Frozen.

Mason City.—Escaped from his burning home in night clothes John Petznick, a farmer north of here, ran a mile in the bitter cold to the home of a neighbor for help. The hired man, Alfred Wolt, sought shelter in the barn with scarcely no clothing. Both men were frost bitten. The family was away from home. The building was completely destroyed.

Foster Once Lived in Mason City.

Mason City.—William Foster, who recently died in Des Moines was a former resident of this city having laid out one of teh large additions to the city which bears the name of Foster's addition, and built the Parker opera house which stands on Main and Sixth streets. He was a resident here for ten years during the early years of the city.

Why He Got Married.

A $900-per-annum clerk in one of Uncle Sam's departments at Washington was recently approached by a coworker, who asked if it were true, as rumor had it, that the $900 person was about to marry.

"It is," was the laconic response.

"Surely, old man," said the other, with that freedom permitted an intimate friend, "you don't think that your present income would justify you in taking a wife?"

"To be perfectly frank," said the other, "I do not."

"Then what on earth can be your reason for taking this serious step?"

"I have no reason," was the calm response. "I am in love."—Lippincott's Magazine.

A FINE STOCK SHOW

Excellent Animals Shown at Ames Short Course.

ATTENDANCE UP TO AVERAGE

Cattle, Sheep and Hogs Selected for Carcass Test, Best Ever Used, and Show Difference in Animals to Produce Choice Meats.

Ames, Ia., Jan. 10.—The most complete and the best display of live stock ever used for short course instruction is now at Ames. The attendance is fully up to the standard of past years in spite of the stormy weather. The cattle, sheep and hogs selected for the carcass demonstrations are the best ever used and are especially valuable because of the fitness to bring out actual differences in the ability of various animals to produce choice beef, mutton and pork.

The first four days—Jan. 3 to 7 inclusive—of the short course were devoted to a study of beef and dairy cattle. Interest was never keener, and the Shorthorn cattle from the show herd made a special hit with the classes.

The animals intended for slaughter were brought before the class and reviewed by John Gosling of Kansas City, who is the foremost meat demonstrator in America. Roan Jim, a pure bred Shorthorn steer with an enviable show record, received much attention. He was reserve grand champion steer at the international in 1908. Mr. Gosling commended the excellent type and conformation shown by this steer, but criticised him for being overdone. He stated frankly that the bullock had been carried a year too long and emphasized the folly of holding steers after they are ready to go to slaughter.

First Choice, a junior yearling grade Angus, afforded a splendid object lesson in that he represented a choice bullock, just ripe enough to make the best quality of meat. A short fed steer, canner cow, and veal calf completed the beef cattle.

In the sheep the champion Shropshire wether of the recent international live stock show afforded the assembled students an excellent opportunity to see what the market demands in sheep that are to produce choice mutton. A choice Southdown yearling and a canner ewe were his companions. A slashing good fat back barrow and a prime bacon barrow gave opportunity for contrasting the bacon and fat hogs. All the carcass stuff was killed Jan. 9, and today was given up to the most popular feature of the short course, the carcass demonstration. One of the most expert meat cutters in the United States, Louis Young of Chicago, assisted Mr. Gosling.

BARNEY SUCCEEDS WRIGHT

Hampton Man Named by Governor Carroll as Food and Dairy Commissioner.

Des Moines, Jan. 10.—W. B. Barney of Hampton has been appointed state food and dairy commissioner by Governor Carroll to succeed H. R. Wright, the present incumbent, whose term expires April 30.

The announcement of Mr. Barney's appointment was made public by Governor Carroll.

The new commissioner is president of the Iowa State Dairy association, has been in the dairy business for years, is the owner of a large plant at Hampton, has one of the largest herds of Holstein milk cows in the state, and in every way is a dairyman. He has also been engaged in the hardware business, and as such has a wide acquaintance over the state among the business men and merchants with whom he will have to deal in his new office.

"The governor will never make a better appointment," said Commissioner Wright in commenting upon the appointment of his successor. "I have known Mr. Barney for years and he is admirably fitted for the place. I believe the appointment will meet with favor all over the state."

BACKACHE—A SIGNAL OF DISTRESS

A WARNING THAT MUST NOT BE IGNORED

Pain in the back is the kidneys' signal of distress. If this timely warning is ignored, kidney disease silently fastens its deadly grip—for kidney sickness first shows itself in pains and disorders in other parts, and the real cause is too often hidden until fatal Bright's disease or diabetes has set in. Suspect the kidneys if you are rheumatic and nervous or have lame back, painful, too frequent or scanty urination, weak heart, dizzy spells, headaches, bloating or neuralgia. What you want is a special kidney medicine — not an experiment, but one that has stood the test for years. Doan's Kidney Pills relieve weak, congested kidneys—cure backache—regulate the urine.

A KIDNEY REMEDY OF 75 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS began curing lame backs and sick kidneys 75 years ago. The demand lead a nearby druggist, James Doan, to prepare it for sale. From him the magic formula passed to the present proprietors. Now, as in those early days, Doan's Kidney Pills are made from only the purest drugs and are absolutely non-poisonous. They are used and praised all over the civilized world.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS MAKE LASTING CURES

J. R. Black, 1005 E. Sixth street, Topeka, Kansas, says: "In the spring of 1899 Doan's Kidney Pills brought me such great relief that I did not hesitate to make the fact known and give this remedy my most earnest endorsement. In my statement I said that for three years I had suffered from kidney complaint. I had a dull grumbling ache across the small of my back that greatly inconvenienced me when reaching and straining in doing my work. An annoying kidney weakness was also in evidence and it was out of the question for me to sleep well. In the morning I was all tired out and it can be seen that I was in bad shape. The use of Doan's Kidney Pills quickly and surely drove away these symptoms of kidney complaint and I have since been in good health.

The foregoing statement was given in March 1905, and when Mr. Black was interviewed on Nov. 12, 1908, he said: "I have never had a return attack of kidney complaint and I know that my cure is a permanent one. My faith in Doan's Kidney Pills is stronger than ever.

Mrs. James Crooks, First St., N. W., American Fork, Utah, says, "I had kidney complaint for ten years or more. Sometimes a twinge darted through the small of my back and I often became so helpless that I was compelled to go to bed with my clothes on. The attacks often lasted for days at a time and I could not even stoop to put on my shoes. My condition was certainly alarming. The secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and contained a heavy sediment after standing. I well know what the misery kidney complaint causes and I can therefore appreciate the merits of a remedy that cures this disease. Doan's Kidney Pills lived up to the claims made for them in my case and effected a cure. My kidneys were restored to a normal condition and my health greatly improved." (Statement given Aug. 22, 1907.)

On Aug. 24, 1909, Mrs. Crooks was interviewed by one of our representatives and she said: "It gives me pleasure to reendorse Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured my backache and my health is now good. Other members of my family have taken this remedy with decided benefit."

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Picking and Packing Apples.

The harvest of the apple is here and will continue for some weeks. Here are some suggestions that may assist the growers:

Pick into baskets. They should be about half bushel and round, with drop handles. The baskets should be smooth on the inside—that is, free from strips around the inside or bottom, lined with burlap to prevent bruising, and a short iron hook should be attached to the handle to suspend the basket from the limbs, so as to enable the picker to use both hands.

The great advantage in using the basket lies largely in the fact that if the apples are carefully placed in the same they are not bruised

Apples packed from the table and immediately placed in cold storage (if they are to be put into cold storage) will give by far the better results. This method adds two to four months to the keeping qualities of the fruit. You cannot afford to let your fruit lie under the trees or in a building for two or three weeks before you barrel.

Fruit grown in a warm latitude or harvested during a warm September or October must be quickly handled. But when properly handled at picking time there will not be much room for complaint. A good barrel is essential if you wish to store your fruit, have it keep well and sell. A tight barrel is the best, and the better it is made the better results you will have. There will be less loss from shrinkage of fruit, from rats and mice and other causes.

In hauling barreled apples to the car and in shipping lay the barrels on the side. Never stand them on end if you wish the fruit to remain tight in the barrels.

Rheumatism

Nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp or chronic rheumatism. In such cases no internal treatment is required. The free application of Chamberlain's Liniment is all that is needed and it is certain to give quick relief. Give it a trial and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain and soreness.

Lame Shoulder.

This is a common form of muscular rheumatism. Apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely four times a day and a quick cure is certain.

Lumbago.

When muscular rheumatism attacks the muscles in the small of the back it is called lumbago. It is usually quite severe and every movement adds to the pain, and especially when one attempts to straighten up. No internal treatment is required. Keep quiet, as every movement aggravates the disease, and apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely, and you will soon be well again.

Sprains and Bruises are cured by the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment in about one-third the time required by the usual treatment.

"THE ESSENTIALS TO SUCCESS"

Comments on Lecture to be Given by Herbert A. Keck in the Klemme Opera House on February 2nd.

On account of the last two numbers of the regular lecture course coming so far apart, the committee has made arrangements with Rev. Herbert A. Keck of Garner to give his celebrated lecture on "The Essentials to Success" on the evening of February 2nd. As this is an extra number, holders of season tickets will be charged an admission fee of 25 cents; all others 35 cents. This charge is made to defray the expenses incurred. Mr. Keck comes very highly recommended and you should hear him. Following we give a few press comments on Mr. Keck's work on the platform:—

A large crowd turned out Friday evening at Braig's Hall to hear Rev, H. A. Keck in his lecture on "Big Blunders." The speaker held the close attention of the audience from start to finish. The sly hits of humor were greeted with loud applause. This lecture will only serve to strengthen the record Rev. Keck made during the two years he was pastor at this place.—Danbury Review.

The lecture by Rev. H. A. Keck in the M. E. church Tuesday night was very good. His idea of finding a life work and sticking to one purpose, combined with a hearty, wholesouled enjoyment of ones surroundings, are very commendable. It was deserving of a larger audience. —Ute Independent.

The Onawa Democrat says of Rev. Keck's lecture: "It is not often a lecture contains so much good sense and down right solid advice and is delivered in so pleasing a manner. It was witty, eloquent and woven in with anecdotes illustrating his subject in such a pleasing and laughter-provoking way that his audience wished there was more of it."

The lecture last evening by Herbert A. Keck at M. E. church was quite well attended and the audience was not disappointed. Mr. Keck is a bright young man, and his lecture on "Keys to Success" was well given and thoroughly appreciated by his audience.—Schaller Herald.

Rev. H. A. Keck, of Holstein, gave his inspiring lecture entitled "The Keys to Success" to an appreciative audience in the M E. church Tuesday evening. Everyone present speaks in the highest terms of this lecture It showed careful preparation and was highly entertaining. The speaker's delivery was earnest, pleasing and forceful. The subject matter was logical, persuasive, strengthened with illustrations and seasoned with good wit and humor. He spoke distinctly, to the purpose, and with earnest fire. This lecture is specially beneficial for young people.—Cushing Correspondent.

ASKS LAWS FOR CONSERVATION OF OUR RESOURCES

Special Message Is Sent to Congress by President Urging Action by Lawmakers.

CONTROL OF WATER POWER

Executive Recommends Leasing of Valuable Privileges on Government Domain to Private Interests Under Conditions That Would Prevent Monopoly—Question of Fostering Soils Most Important—Reclamation and Irrigation of Arid Lands Also Treated Upon—Preservation of Our Forests.

Washington.—The president transmitted to congress a special message on the subject of the conservation of the nation's natural resources. In substance it was as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

In my annual message I reserved the subject of the conservation of our national resources for disposition in a special message, as follows:

In several departments there is presented the necessity for legislation looking to the further conservation of our national resources, and the subject is one of such importance as to require a more detailed and extended discussion than can be entered upon in this communication. For that reason I shall take an early opportunity to send a special message to congress on the subject of the improvement of our waterways; upon the reclamation and irrigation of arid, semi-arid and swamp lands; upon the preservation of our forests and the re-foresting of suitable areas; upon the re-classification of the public domain with a view of separating from agricultural settlement mineral, coal and phosphate lands and sites belonging to the government bordering on streams suitable for the utilization of water power.

In 1860 we had a public domain of 1,055,911,288 acres. We have now 731,354,081 acres, confined largely to the mountain ranges and the arid and semi-arid plains. We have, in addition, 368,035,975 acres of land in Alaska.

Disbursement of Public Lands.

The public lands were, during the earliest administrations, treated as a national asset for the liquidation of the public debt, and as a source of reward for our soldiers and sailors. Later on they were donated in large amounts in aid of the construction of wagon roads and railways, in order to open up regions in the west then almost inaccessible. All the principal land statutes were enacted more than a quarter of a century ago. The homestead act, the pre-emption and timber-culture act, the coal land and the mining acts were among these.

Fraudulent Titles.

The truth is that title to millions of acres of public lands was fraudulently obtained and that the right to recover a large part of such lands for the government long since ceased by reason of statutes of limitations. There has developed in recent years a deep concern in the public mind respecting the preservation and proper use of our natural resources. This has been particularly directed toward the conservation of the resources of the public domain. A vast amount of discussion has appeared in the public prints in generalized form on this subject, but there has been little practical suggestion. It has been easy to say that the natural resources in fuel supply, in forests, in water power, and in other public utilities, must be saved from waste, monopoly, and other abuses, and the general public is in accord with this proposition, as they are with most truisms. The problem, however, is how to save and how to utilize, how to conserve and still develop, for no sane person can contend that it is for the common good that nature's blessings are only for unborn generations.

Noteworthy Reforms.

Among the most noteworthy reforms initiated by my distinguished predecessor were the vigorous prosecution of land frauds and the bringing to public attention of the necessity for preserving the remaining public domain from further spoliation, for the maintenance and extension of our forest resources, and for the enactment of laws amending the obsolete statutes so as to retain governmental control over that part of the public domain in which there are valuable deposits of coal, of oil, and of phosphate, and, in addition thereto, to preserve control, under conditions favorable to the public, of the lands along the streams in which the fall of water can be made to generate power to be transmitted in the form of electricity many miles to the point of its use, known as "water power" sites.

The present statutes, except so far as they dispose of the precious metals and the purely agricultural lands, are not adapted to carry out the modern view of the best disposition of public lands to private ownership, under conditions offering on the one hand sufficient inducement to private capital to take them over for proper development, with restrictive conditions on the other which shall secure to the public that character of control which will prevent a monopoly or misuse of the lands or their products. The power of the secretary of the interior to withdraw from the operation of existing statutes tracts of land, the disposition of which under such statutes would be detrimental to the public interests, is not clear or satisfactory. This power has been exercised in the interest of the public, with the hope that congress might affirm the action of the executive by laws adapted to the new conditions. Unfortunately, congress has not thus far fully acted on the recommendations of the executive, and the question as to what the executive is to do is under the circumstances, full of difficulty. It seems to me that it is the duty of congress now, by a statute, to validate the withdrawals which have been made by the secretary of the interior and the president and to use the secretary of the interior temporarily to withdraw lands pending submission to congress of recommendations as to legislation to meet conditions or emergencies as they arise.

Public Land Along Streams.

With respect to the public land which lies along the streams offering opportunity to convert water power into transmissible electricity, another important phase of the public land question is presented. There are valuable water power sites through all the public land states. The opinion is held that the transfer of sovereignty from the federal government to the territorial governments as they become states, included the water power in the rivers except so far as that owned by riparian proprietors. I do not think it necessary to go into discussion of this somewhat mooted question of law. It seems to me sufficient to say that the man who owns and controls the land along the stream from which the power is to be converted and transmitted, owns land which is indispensable to the conversion and use of that power. I cannot conceive how the power in streams flowing through public lands can be made available at all except by using the land itself as the site for the construction of the plant by which the power is generated and converted and securing a right of way thereover for transmission lines. Under these condition, if the government owns the adjacent land—indeed, if the government is the riparian owner—it may control the use of the water power by imposing proper conditions on the disposition of the land necessary in the creation and utilization of the water power.

Value of Water Power.

The development in electrical appliances for the conversion of the water power into electricity to be transmitted long distances has progressed so far that it is no longer problematical, but it is a certain inference that in the future the power of the water falling in the streams to a large extent will take the place of natural fuels. In the disposition of the domain already granted, many water power sites have come under absolute ownership, and may drift into one ownership, so that all the water power under private ownership shall be a monopoly. If, however, the water power sites now owned by the government—and there are enough of them—shall be disposed of to private persons for the investment of their capital in such a way as to prevent their union for purposes of monopoly with other water power sites, and under conditions that shall limit the right of use to not exceeding thirty years with renewal privileges and some equitable means of fixing terms of rental and with proper means for determining a reasonable graduated rental, it would seem entirely possible to prevent the absorption of these most useful lands by a power monopoly. As long as the government retains control and can prevent their improper union with other plants, competition must be maintained and prices kept reasonable.

Soils Must Be Conserved.

In considering the conservation of the natural resources of the country, the feature that transcends all others, including woods, waters, minerals, is the soil of the country. It is incumbent upon the government to foster by all available means the resources of the country that produce the food of the people. To this end the conservation of the soils of the country should be cared for with all means at the government's disposal. Their productive powers should have the attention of our scientists that we may conserve the new soils, improve the old soils, drain wet soils, ditch swamp soils, levee river overflow soils, grow trees on thin soils, pasture hillside soils, rotate crops on all soils, discover methods for cropping dry land soils, find grasses and legumes for all soils, feed grains and mill feeds on the farms where they originate, that the soils from which they come may be enriched.

A work of the utmost importance to inform and instruct the public on this chief branch of the conservation of our resources is being carried on successfully in the department of agriculture; but it ought not to escape public attention that state action in addition to that of the department of agriculture (as for instance in the drainage of swamp lands) is essential to the best treatment of the soils in the manner above indicated.

The act by which, in semi-arid parts of the public domain, the area of the homestead has been enlarged from 160 to 320 acres has resulted most beneficially in the extension of "dry farming" and in the demonstration which has been made of the possibility, through a variation in the character and mode of culture, of raising substantial crops without the presence of such a supply of water as has been heretofore thought to be necessary for agriculture.

No one can visit the far west and the country of arid and semi-arid lands without being convinced that this is one of the most important methods of the conservation of our natural resources that the government has entered upon. It would appear that over 30 projects have been undertaken, and that a few of these are likely to be unsuccessful because of lack of water, or for other reasons, but generally the work which has been done has been well done, and many important engineering problems have been met and solved.

Funds Inadequate for Service.

One of the difficulties which has arisen is that too many projects in view of the available funds have been set on foot. The funds available under the reclamation statute are inadequate to complete these projects within a reasonable time. And yet the projects have been begun; settlers have been invited to take up and, in many instances, have taken up, the public land within the projects, relying upon their prompt completion. The failure to complete the projects for their benefit is, in effect, a breach of faith and leaves them in a most distressed condition. I urge that the nation ought to afford the means to lift them out of the very desperate condition in which they now are.

This condition does not indicate any excessive waste or any corruption on the part of the reclamation service. It only indicates an over-zealous desire to extend the benefit of reclamation to as many acres and as many states as possible. I recommend, therefore, that authority be given to issue, not exceeding $30,000,000 of bonds from time to time, as the secretary of the interior shall find it necessary, the proceeds to be applied to the completion of the projects already begun and their proper extension, and the bonds running ten years or more to be taken up by the proceeds of returns to the reclamation fund, which returns, as the years go on, will increase rapidly in amount.

New Law Requisite.

Respecting the comparatively small timbered areas on the public domain not included in national forests because of their isolation or their special value for agricultural or mineral purposes, it is apparent from the evils resulting by virtue of the imperfections of existing laws for the disposition of timber lands that the acts of June 3, 1878, should be repealed and a law enacted for the disposition of the timber at public sale, of lands after the removal of the timber to be subject to appropriation under the agricultural or mineral land laws.

What I have said is really an epitome of the recommendations of the secretary of the interior in respect to the future conservation of the public domain in his present annual report. He has given close attention to the problem of disposition of these lands under such conditions as to invite the private capital necessary to their development on the one hand and the maintenance of the restrictions necessary to prevent monopoly and abuse from absolute ownership on the other. These recommendations are incorporated in bills he has prepared, and they are now in the disposition of the congress. I earnestly recommend that all the suggestions which he has made with respect to these lands shall be embodied in statutes and, especially, that the withdrawals already made shall be validated so far as necessary and that doubt as to the authority of the secretary of the interior to withdraw lands for the purpose of submitting recommendations as to future disposition of them where new legislation is needed shall be made complete and unquestioned.

Disposition of Forest Reserves.

The forest reserves of the United States, some 190,000,000 acres in extent, are under the control of the department of agriculture, with authority adequate to preserve them and to extend their growth so far as that may be practicable. The importance of the maintenance of these forests cannot be exaggerated. The possibility of a scientific treatment of forests so that they shall be made to yield large return in timber without really reducing the supply has been demonstrated in other countries, and we should work toward the standard set by them as far as their methods are applicable to our conditions.

Improvement of River.

I come now to the improvement of our inland waterways. He would be blind indeed, who did not realize that the people of the far west, and especially those of the Mississippi valley, have been aroused to the need there is for the improvement of our inland waterways.

The Mississippi river, with the Missouri on the one hand and the Ohio on the other, would seem to offer a great natural means of interstate transportation and traffic. How far, if properly improved, they would relieve the railroads or supplement them in respect to the bulky and cheaper commodities is a matter of conjecture. No enterprise ought to be undertaken the cost of which is not definitely ascertained and the benefit or advantage of which are not known or assured by competent engineers and of high authority. When, however, a project of a definite character for the improvement of a waterway has been developed that the plans have been drawn, the cost definitely estimated, and the traffic which will be accommodated is reasonably probable I think it is the duty of congress to undertake the project and make provision therefor in the proper appropriation bill.

One of the projects which answers this description I have given is that of improducing dams into the Ohio river from Pittsburg to Cairo, so as to maintain at all seasons of the year, by slack water, a depth of nine feet. Upward of six of these dams have already been constructed and six are under construction, while the total required is 50. The remaining cost is known to be $63,000,000.

It seems to me that in the development of our inland waterways it would be wise to begin with this particular project and carry it through as rapidly as may be. I assume from reliable information that it can be constructed economically in ten years. I recommend, therefore, that the public lands, in river and harbor bills, make provision for continuing contracts to complete this improvement and I shall recommend in the future, if it be necessary, that bonds be issued to carry it through.

What has been said of the Ohio river is true in a less complete way of the improvement of the upper Mississippi from St. Paul to St. Louis to a constant depth of six feet, and of the Missouri, from Kansas City to St. Louis to a corresponding depth of six feet and from St. Louis to Cairo of a depth of eight feet. These projects have been pronounced practicable by competent boards of army engineers, their cost has been estimated and the work is business which will follow the improvement.

As these improvements are being made and the traffic encouraged by them assumes itself of sufficient importance, the improvement of the Mississippi from Cairo down to the gulf, which is now going on with the maintenance of a depth of nine feet everywhere, may be deepened to another and greater depth if the necessity for it shall appear to arise out of the traffic which can be delivered on the levee at Cairo.

Cheap Rail Rate Necessary.

I am informed that the investigation by the waterways commission in Europe shows that the existence of a waterway by no means assures traffic unless there is traffic adapted to water carriage at cheap rates at one end or the other of the stream. It also appears in Europe that the depth of the streams is rarely more than six feet, and never more than nine. But it is certain that enormous quantities of merchandise are transported over the rivers and canals in Germany and France and England, and it is also certain that the existence of such waterways of traffic materially affects the charges which the railroads charge, and is the best regulator of those rates that we have, not even excepting the governmental regulation through the interstate commerce commission. For this reason I hope that this congress will take such steps that it may be called the creator of the new system of inland waterways. For reasons which it is unnecessary here to state, congress has not seen fit to order an investigation into the interior department and the forest service of the agricultural department. The results of that investigation are not necessary to determine the value of, and the necessity for, the new legislation which I have recommended in respect to the public lands and in respect to reclamation. I earnestly urge that the measures be taken up and disposed of promptly, instead of awaiting the investigation which has been determined upon.

One Way of Love

SYNOPSIS.

Richard Derring, returning from a winter in the woods to his mother's farm home, is overtaken by his uncle, accompanied by his eccentric wife, coming to pay a visit at the farm. Aunt Jerusha's questions about Emily Hutton, supposed to be Derring's sweetheart, reveal the fact that she is to marry another. Disappointment stimulates Derring's ambition, and under the advice of Seth Kinney, a hermit of the woods, he resolves to fit himself for college. Kinney teaches him Greek and he passes his entrance examinations triumphantly, winning the approval of the professor. Four years in college obliterates the memory of Emily. Derring begins journalistic work in Chicago, where he meets Helen Gordon, an artist. Derring is promoted to art critic on his paper. Helen refuses to marry him and hamper both their careers, but they enter into a companionship compact. Helen suffers ill effects from sketching on the lake shore in January. Illness brings her into closer relationship with Richard.

CHAPTER XIII—Continued

The good Dutchwoman appeared, bearing a large bottle of ammonia. She figured in Derring's eyes as a ministering angel and the bottle as a heaven-sent chalice. But it brought tears to Helen's eyes and she pushed it away with the assurance, half-laughing, half-tearful, that she should be all right in a minute.

Derring lifted her to an improvised couch and she lay, with eyes like stars, looking about the little room. He held one of the hands in his and chafed it gently now and then, under the pretence that it was still cold. Her brown hair had escaped from its fastening and was pushed carelessly back. Against the dark covering of the couch it formed a halo about her face. Derring had always fancied that the Madonna might have been at home in such a room as this. It was a Holbein face.

The old woman had lighted the candles on the low table and was spreading the table for supper. She entertained her guests by leaving them free. The two candles gave out a dull glow and completed the effect of an old Dutch interior.

Helen and Derring exchanged glances of appreciation.

"Think of finding it within five miles of Washington street! I am going to sketch it some day. She has promised to sit for me and it will be nice and warm." She shivered a little.

Derring suddenly held fast in both his hands the one he had been idly stroking. "You must never do such a foolhardy thing again."

"Not even for a success? But I am glad I did it. It is a success." Her eyes rested lovingly on the sketch on the floor by the wall.

She was still looking at it when he left the house to telephone for a carriage. But when he returned, half an hour later, she was seated at the table laughing and talking with her hostess. She declared she had never felt better in her life, and she started out bravely to walk to the carriage, which could not drive down to the beach, but was waiting on the road above. Before they had gone half the distance she found that she was very tired. With a sigh of relief she sank back in the corner of the carriage as the door was slammed after them.

Derring reached over promptly and drew her to him, placing her head against his shoulder and holding her close to protect her from the jar of the carriage.

"Rest here," he said quietly, as she made a half protest. "I should care for my mother or a sister. Why not you—dear one?"

She did not protest again, but yielded to the protecting arms like a child. He watched her face as they whirled into the light of the street-lamps and out again into the shadow. It was still pale, but full of content. They flew through the park and down the long avenue beyond. Never were two miles traversed so quickly. Not a word was spoken. It was as if the time were too precious for speech. Once she raised her face with a contented sigh and breathed his name softly, more as if to herself than to him.

As for Derring, he dared not realize his happiness. Underneath its pulsing was a half superstition. Fate would not allow a man to be so happy. But she had been given back to him from the dead. She rested close to him. That could not be taken from him. He held her closer—defying an unseen fate.

CHAPTER XIV.

The winter continued cold and blustering. Helen sketched no more out of doors. But she did the interior of the Dutch house and both sketches were sold on the opening day of the spring exhibition. Whenever Derring chided her for careless disregard of her health, she would meekly call his attention to this very pleasant and tangible result of the North Shore expedition.

Derring gradually became conscious of another result—less palpable, but no less real. Since their first acquaintance he had known that her presence had a marked effect on him—soothing and quieting him if he were tired, and quickening his fancy and imagination if he were in good spirits. He was always conscious of her presence in a room, even before his eyes had testified it. Soon he became aware that a new and more subtle communication had been established between them. He continued to feel an added sense of well-being in her presence; but he discovered that this power of her personality had escaped the bonds of space, and that wherever she might never dreamed I should slip, though. It hurts so that I can't bear my weight—oh!" She lifted it carefully. "And the ladder shakes so I don't dare hop down. I am sure I hope you have sense enough to know what to do—I haven't."

He lifted her carefully from her insecure seat and placed her on the very hard divan that ran the length of the room.

"You have to spend most of your time rescuing me, don't you?" she said, laughing. "How did you happen to come over so early? I had made up my mind to sit there till six o'clock. Tom has to come for some pictures then."

How had he happened to come?—In a flash he saw it all—and told her. She laughed a little at the explanation. But he recalled to her other times when he had unconsciously been warned of her danger or discomfort. They discussed the situation with analytic appreciation. At least, if not true, it was interesting.

A few experiments convinced them that it was true as well as interesting.

It was evidently an uncertain communication, however. Several times when he yielded to the feeling of disquiet and sought her out he found her working, serenely unconscious of danger and ready to laugh at his fears. Moreover, it was a one-sided communication. Helen, as he reproachfully pointed out to her, was never conscious of danger to him, while he had a headache if she so much as scratched her little finger.

But, although Derring jested, he rejoiced in this new power. It deepened their relation. He might be disquieted without cause; but at least no harm would come to her without his knowing it.

But as the spring came on a new dread assailed him. Soon it would be summer. She would go home for the vacation. Would this power extend over the thousand miles? And would he have, as now, the presience of danger without the power to go to her?

He grew to dread the summer.

But it was destined that he should be the first to go away. Early in be, his spirit was conscious of her. The first sign of this was a vague restlessness and foreboding which came to him, now and then, without apparent cause.

Since she was always in his mind, it did not occur to him as strange that his thoughts of her should take a gloomy turn when this humor was on him. Nor did he guess the secret of the strange mood till a day when the feeling became too strong to be resisted, and he sought her in the studio. He found her sitting on the top of a tall step-ladder, a comical picture of despair.

Her face brightened as he appeared in the doorway. "Oh, I am so glad! Do you suppose you can get me down?"

"Of course. Come on." He held out his hands.

"I can't. I have sprained my foot. It was silly to try to hang a heavy picture on this rickety old thing. I

April a letter came from his mother. Seth Kinney was very ill and asked continually for him.

As he packed his traveling-bag and prepared to go, he was conscious of mixed motives. He was fond of Seth. He would have gone to him in any case. But, with a little sense of shame, he found himself thinking that the trip would give him a chance to test the communication. He would be gone only a few days. Nothing could happen. But at least he should know what he had to expect during the long weeks of vacation. So anxious was he to make the experiment that he almost forgot the dread of separation.

"Be as happy as you can—for my sake," he said laughingly as they parted. "Don't run any more risks than you can help."

The morning train was full of the hum of life. People seemed to be letting off superabundant vitality. Behind Derring a child was humming contentedly to herself. Her mother was talking in a loud voice to a man across the aisle. "You have to look after the seed, praise the Lord! If we don't gather a sheaf in this life, it's no matter" Farther to the front of the car two business men were talking.

As the day wore on, each person in the car assumed for Derring a distinct individuality. The sense of isolation deepened. He entered into conversation with no one, but sat idly listening to the flow of talk.

At times he watched the changing landscape. Along the margin of each little stream the willows grew yellow in the sunshine. Across the plain a mass of low crimson marked where the sap crept up at the touch of spring. As they approached the woods, the crimson faded to a soft, feathery gray. Then they were among the trees themselves, and the sunshine, slanting across the great trunks, hung, caught in tangled underbrush, or rested lightly on some tuft of moss or dark, shining pool.

Derring was impressed with the incongruity of it all—his solitude in the midst of the life that pressed so close about him, the hum of busy talk and the shriek of the engine deep in the woods where one never goes except alone or with some congenial soul. With one glance he caught the freshness of the spring, and with the next, the commonplace face and striped trousers of the passenger across the aisle.

His thoughts went to Helen and their love, to the happiness of the past year and the days that were before them. The car and its occupants faded from sight. He brooded on the beauty and mystery of their relation—the foreboding of danger—the necessary accompaniment of love. Great happiness—deep suffering. Sunlight and shade. The capability of sin in man—at once the mark of the beast and the promise of a divinity within him. He had drifted far into metaphysical speculation before he reached the New England hills. But whatever foreboding the future might hold for him, he no longer dreaded its power. He saw deep into its nature. He who loves much will suffer much.

Ring Off, Please.

They were seated by the fireside dreaming of the future when they would be one; a winsome telephone girl and her fiance. The small talk finally drifted to the question as to who should light the fire in the morning. It was his opinion that it was the wife's place to get up and start the fire, and let the poor, hard-worked husband rest.

After this declaration there was silence most profound, but only for the space of about half a second; then the girl thrust out her finger encircled by a ring, and murmured sweetly but firmly: "Ring off, please; you have connected with the wrong number."

Apropos of Taxes.

Apropos of New York's 1909 assessment rolls, Lawson Purdy, president of the department of taxes, told a reporter a story about Gladstone.

"Gladstone had no great scientific knowledge," he said, "and at a dinner, when Faraday described an important new scientific discovery, the premier showed indifference.

"'After all,' he said, hiding a yawn behind his hand, 'what use will it ever be?'

"'Why,' said Faraday, 'there's every probability, sir, that some day you'll be able to tax it.'"—Washington Post.

A WOMAN'S WOMAN.

By ALMA SWARTZ.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"If I were thinking of marriage," I said to Edith, "I would not trust to my own judgment of the girl of my choice. I would discover if she stood well with members of her own sex."

"If I were thinking of marriage," replied Edith, "I would go to the mother of the man I thought of marrying and ask her if she could recommend h'm."

I could not say whether Edith was speaking ironically or not. I dropped the subject.

I had gone to Florida, where Edith was spending the winter, to ask her to be my wife. Since we did not reside in the same place when at home I had had no opportunity of knowing how she stood with any one except myself. Therefore before making her aware of my intentions I resolved to covertly draw forth the opinions of certain members of her own sex. There were a number of girls at the same hotel with her, and I thought I might gather evidence from them. But after a couple of days' stay among them it seemed to me that Edith either kept herself voluntarily aloof from them or had been left out of their little coterie. I soon became good friends with them and proceeded to elucidate the matter. What was my surprise to discover that not one of them would speak well of her, and many of them spoke ill of her.

This was a shock. I had supposed that good opinions of one who seemed to me to be so deserving of them would come merely for the asking. But no. If I were to sum up her character upon the evidence of those who must know her, rather than marry her it would be better for me that I had never been born. One declared that she was vain, another selfish, another untruthful. Indeed, every one attributed to her some fault. Not willing to condemn her without a hearing, I asked her why she did not make companions of the other young ladies in the hotel.

"Oh," she replied disdainfully, "they've got up a mutual admiration society and have no use for any girl except themselves."

The reply was not satisfactory. I was bitterly disappointed. The only thing for me to do was to go back north and drop Edith from my mind. But she was attractive to me—very attractive. She was pretty and engaging. I didn't wish to give her up. I made up my mind, however, to be true to the principle I had enunciated to Edith herself at the beginning of this story. I packed my trunk and paid my bill at the hotel. Then I did what men are constantly doing when they apply principles to their love affairs. I subordinated my judgment to my inclination. Here were six girls, some of whom refused to speak well of Edith, while the rest condemned her. Her own testimony in her own behalf would on principles of evidence be worthless. Nevertheless, on the evening before my departure I walked with her into an orange grove and asked her how she had come to antagonize so many girls of her own age.

Her reply was that if I declined to consider her superior to every one of them she had no further use for my acquaintance.

I confess I was taken aback by this illogical method of handling the subject. Take the evidence of one against six! If I were to make the most important decision of my life on such evidence, heaven help me! I called her attention to the fact that all these young ladies were her peers and their concurrence in condemning her was not to be put aside by her bare assertion. She replied that if our acquaintance were to continue it must be upon the condition she had stated.

We walked back to the hotel in silence, and at parting Edith didn't even look at me. I went to my room and wrestled with myself. That night I slept but little and the next morning awoke with a languid feeling, not only of body, but of mind. All day I struggled to prevent myself from marrying a girl condemned by her associates. I went to the railroad station, but saw the train leave without me. Edith when I met her on the tennis court took no notice of me. She seemed to have forgotten me over the net. In the afternoon when she appeared, beautifully appareled and with a rose in her hair, I raised the white flag. I asked her to walk with me in the orange grove. Once there I told her that if all the saints in heaven condemned her I would feel honored to kiss the hem of her garment.

"You told me," she replied, "that if you meditated marriage you would discover if the girl of your choice stood well with her own sex. You know what the girls here think of me."

"They are unworthy to express an opinion of you."

She laughed.

"I admit," I stammered, "that I have gone back on my principle. Perhaps I have been a fool, but I can't help it."

"Yes, you have been very stupid. In the first place, I knew what you came down here for. Any girl would have known that. In the second place, you should not have told me that you were going to ask my friends their opinion of me."

"Your friends!"

"Yes. All these girls are my friends. I told them if you asked their opinion of me to condemn me."

"What in the name of conscience did you do that for?"

"Do you suppose I would marry a man who would go to some other woman for an opinion of me?"

Vinegar Season Is Near.

Bulletin No. 258 of the New York experiment station recommends the following as one of the most satisfactory methods of making vinegar: When the cider is pressed from the apples the barrels should be piled about two-thirds full and the bung replaced by a loose plug of cotton, which will lessen evaporation and keep out bugs and dirt. Where the quantity of vinegar to be made is considerable the barrels should be placed in a room where the temperature can be kept from 70 to 80 degrees during the fall and early winter months. If the batch is small the barrels may be left out of doors while the weather is warm and then placed in the warmest room convenient and later placed in a dry cellar.

If the temperature of the storeroom does not fall below 45 degrees the conversion of the sugar into alcohol will require about six months, but the process of fermentation may be hastened by an addition of fresh commercial yeast. When the cider has quit working the clear portion should be drawn off, the barrel rinsed out and the liquid replaced, with the addition of from two to four quarts of good vinegar containing some mother. The next process, the change of the alcohol into acetic acid, may be effected in three months and may require two years. In any event, it will take place most rapidly in a temperature ranging from 65 to 76 degrees. When the vinegar has reached the proper strength, which should be 5 per cent of acetic acid, the barrels should be filled full and tightly corked. This will prevent other changes and will cause the vinegar to keep its strength. If one has considerable vinegar to make it would be well for him to secure the bulletin referred to.

Keep Celery Growing.

Celery should be kept growing rapidly and without interruption. A check in growth will often make the plant go to seed instead of producing edible stalks.

The Bug Nuisance.

Dr. H. T. Fenald of the Massachusetts Agricultural college says that five-sixths of all the living creatures of the globe are insects and that not more than one out of ten is friendly to man. He estimates that $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 worth of damage is annually wrought by insects and that known means of protection, properly used, could prevent two-thirds of this loss. He is therefore impressing the necessity of a close study by all classes of people of this question with the hope of saving forest and shade trees and crops.

How to Exterminate Fleas.

The following directions are given to those who are annoyed by fleas: Insect powder used freely in the house and about the clothing is recommended by one who tried it. For all outdoor buildings use air slaked lime. Scatter the lime about freely.

A surer way is first to clean all the loose rubbish out and burn, then take one quart of crude carbolic acid, four gallons of water and a spray pump and spray house and barn two or three times and you will get rid of them.

Your attention is respectfully directed to the announcement of Hon. A. C. Ripley, of Garner, as a republican candidate for the office of Representative of this district, a place which he is now filling to his credit and to the honor of the people he represents. Mr. Ripley is serving his first term and it goes without saying that he will be re-elected. His constituents are satisfied with the record he is making and will see to it that he is returned to the legislature for another term. We may say more later regarding his candidacy.

Stockholders Meet

The regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the State Savings Bank of Klemme was held at the bank building on January 18th, and they appeared well satisfied with the condition of the bank, the business done and the services rendered by the officers.

The stockholders recommended that the directors pass $4,500 from the accumulated profits to the surplus fund, which makes a surplus of $15,000 or equal to the capital stock. This is certainly a flattering condition and so far as we know is not equalled by any other bank in the county. We are also advised that under the rules of the State Banking Association each bank whose surplus equals or exceeds its capital, is entitled to a place on what is known as the "honor roll" and if true, this action entitles the State Savings Bank to this honor and entitles it to rank among the solid financial institutions of the state.

All the old directors were re elected for the ensuing year.

More snow Monday.

The weather is inclined to be blizzardy again today.

The Stille sale yesterday was very well attended and everything sold at top-notch prices.

A basket social will be held in the Katter school house on Friday evening, January 21. Everybody come and hear Jumbo Drum and Hans Don Smash. Helen Spayde, Teacher.

That was a stem winder of a blizzard we enjoyed (?) last week Thursday. It snowed and it blowed, and then it blowed and snowed some more. Sure, and we are experiencing what they call the old fashioned winter.

Everybody is invited to a program and basket social at the Stone school house on Friday evening, January 21. Ladies please bring baskets. There will be room in neighboring barns for several teams. Grace Miner, Teacher.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the First National Bank of Klemme was held on January 11th. All the old officers and directors were re-elected. The report submitted showed a very prosperous business the past year.

Harry Burman drove down from Garner last Friday and while here he favored this office with a pleasant call. Harry was our Ell Center correspondent eight years ago and he was a good one too. He is now holding down a claim in South Dakota, and has been visiting his folks in Garner for some time.

C. C. Suckow returned home from Tokio, Mo., yesterday. He tells us that he has decided to locate in that place and will move there as soon as he can get a car to ship his goods in, but this may take some little time. Charley will work there at his trade of painting and paper hanging.

The Kluckhohn boys have been doing some good work with their team and snow plow in the south part of town, and are deserving of a substantial token of appreciation from those who travel the walks in that part of town. The editorial "we" is in the affected territory, so this may cost us something.

The Times is pleased to announce this week the candidacy of O. F. Missman for the republican nomination for County Attorney of Hancock county. He is a graduate from the Drake University College of Law at Des Moines and has been admitted to the Iowa bar. Being a new member of the Hancock County Bar he is entitled to the office by custom of rotation in this county, and it is highly probable that he will have no opposition. Mr. Missman has had three years' experience with a law firm in Des Moines and he is now serving his second term as county clerk. He is fully qualified for the position he seeks and we expect him to be nominated and elected and to preside over the destinies of the office with justice and dignity.

From friends in the eastern part of the state we learn that the snow there is about three feet deep on the level and roads are badly drifted. Old settlers claim that for many years they have not had so much snow and severe floods are feared when the snow leaves.

Elmer Ludeke is utilizing his spare time selling lamps with which he is meeting a ready sale among the farmers. The lamp burns common kerosene, which is turned into gas like a gasoline lamp. It is a great improvement over the old lamps in giving much more light.

John Josten and family have quit housekeeping for a few weeks, possibly a month. Mrs. Josten and Earl have gone on a visit to Mrs. Josten's mother who lives at Monona, Iowa, and John has gone to Kirksville, Mo., to try the osteopath treatment for the improvement of his health.

The frequent snow storms have not been favorable to our revival meetings in Germantown. When the weather is good the attendance has been large and in spite of the drifted roads and disagreeable nights, some have been out every evening. The meetings will be continued this week and next.

90,000 AMERICAN SETTLERS GO TO CANADA

THE YEAR 1909 HAS SHOWN AN INCREASE OF OVER EIGHTY PER CENT IN AMERICAN SETTLEMENT.

Recent advices from Canada, our next door neighbour, the neighbourly country across the boundary line, are that upwards of ninety thousand settlers from the United States went into Western Canada during the past year, most of them for the purpose of taking up and settling upon the vacant lands, 160 acres of which are given free by the government, and lands adjoining held by railway and land companies are selling at from nine to fifteen and twenty dollars per acre. Even if thirty and forty dollars per acre were paid, the price would be low, as the lands produce wonderfully, and at these higher figures there is a large interest on the money and labor invested. The ninety thousand settlers of last year, followed about sixty thousand of the previous year, and for several years the number has been running into these large figures. There must be a reason for it. It may be found in the single phrase, "they are satisfied." Nothing attracts people more than the success of others, and the news of this reaching other thousands, causes them to investigate. The investigation in this case is always satisfactory. The splendid land of Iowa, of Indiana, of Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio and other States has risen to a high value, and it is worth every dollar asked for it. But there is not room now for all on these lands. With the ever increasing demand for grain, there comes the ever increasing demand for land. Canada is the only country on the continent in a position to supply it. Land there that costs, say fifteen dollars an acre, produces on a reasonable calculation, 25 bushels of wheat to the acre, or about $20.00. The most liberal calculation as to cost makes the cost to produce $7.50 per acre, leaving a balance of $12.50 per acre. The $7.50 carries good wages for the farmer, and all other conceivable contingencies. With conditions like this, covering the entire area of about 500,000 square miles, it is readily understood why 90,000 Americans should follow the sixty thousand of the previous year. Canadian Government Agencies at different points in the Union are always ready to give information regarding the free homestead lands, ready to advise the settler as to the districts which would suit him best.

After the Hunt.

Provided with some trophies of the chase in the shape of rabbits, Rev. Sanford C. Hearn, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Yonkers, proceeded to dress them for dinner in the parsonage cellar. His small son watched the father's work with interest. Going upstairs, the youngster called his mother.

"Oh, mamma," said he, "what do you suppose papa is doing?"

"I can't guess, child. What is he doing?"

"Well, he's just skinning, shaving and cutting up cats."

Spend an hour or two in the country. Chewing WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT is like visiting the green fields.

A Question of Time.

"How much does it cost to get married?" asked the eager youth.

"That depends entirely on how long you live," replied the sad-looking man.

ANSWER QUESTIONS

Aspirants for Census Work Must Take Examination.

PAPERS MUST BE IN FEB. 1

Cam Culbertson, Supervisor of the U. S. Census in Seventh Iowa District, Prepares List of Questions to Be Answered.

Knoxville, Jan. 17.—Cam Culbertson, supervisor of the United States census in the Seventh Iowa district, has announced that applications for positions as enumerators, together with the answers to the examination questions, must be in his hands by Jan. 31. The examinations will be held six days later.

The examination questions follow:

Are you a citizen of the United Stated? If naturalized citizen, when and where were you naturalized?

Of what state or territory are you a legal resident? How long have you been a legal resident thereof? Of what county and of what town or city and ward are you a resident? How long have you been a resident thereof?

What is your sex and color? What was your age at last birthday? Where were you born?

What is your education? (Give the principal facts).

What is your present occupation?

What is your professional or business experience? (Give the principal facts, and if at present an officeholder, name the office you hold.)

Have you ever been employed on census work, either national or state? If so, in what capacity and for how long a period? If an enumerator, for what territory or district? (Describe as accurately as possible.)

Are you physically capable of a full discharge of the duties of a census enumerator? Have you any defect of either sight, hearing, speech or limb? If so, state nature of defect.

Do you speak English? Do you understand any language other than English? If so, what language? (Specify language as Bohemian, Chinese Danish, French, German, Greek, Hungarian, Italian, Japanese, Lithuanian, Magyar, Norwegian Polish, Portugese, Russian, Slavic, Spanish, Yiddish, etc.)

Are you a member of a political committee of any party? (Answer "Yes" or "No" but do not indicate what party.)

In view of the fact that you may be required to take a test before a postmaster, state what postoffice would be most convenient to you for this purpose.

(This test is of a practical character, consisting chiefly or wholly of the filling out of a sample schedule of population from information furnished regarding typical families, and, in the case of enumerators whose work will be in rural districts, the filling out of a sample schedule of agriculture.)

Are the answers to each of the foregoing questions true to the best of your knowledge and belief? Are they in your own handwriting?

Indorsements of each applicant must be secured from two representative citizens of the community in which the applicant resides. They must be at least 21 years of age and acquainted with the applicant not less than one year. Indorsements will not be accepted from any person who is in any way related to an applicant. The indorsement certifies that the applicant "is a thoroughly trustworthy and honest person, of good habits, and, in my opinion, is fully capable of discharging the duties of a census enumerator, if appointed."

Pension for Road Veteran.

Indianola.—C. B. McLaughlin, agent for the Rock Island here, has been retired by the company and given a pension. He says he is in Jamestown, N. Y., and that his mind has been a blank since he left home until recently.

More School Room Needed.

Mason City.—With the public school buildings of the city taxed to the limit the school board are planning on providing more room the coming year. May be Obtained in One Night.

For preserving the hands as well as for preventing redness, roughness, and chapping, and imparting that velvety softness and whiteness much desired by women Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, is believed to be superior to all other skin soaps. For those who work in corrosive liquids, or at occupations which tend to injure the hands, it is invaluable.

Treatment.—Bathe and soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of Cuticura Soap. Dry and anoint freely with Cuticura Ointment, and in severe cases spread the Cuticura Ointment on thin pieces of old linen or cotton. Wear during the night old, loose gloves, or a light bandage of old cotton or linen to protect the clothing from stain. For red, rough, and chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, and shapeless nails with painful finger ends, this treatment is most effective. Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world, Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole proprietors, Boston, Mass.

Fight Against Plague Goes On.

Although the survey of the past year's anti-tuberculosis work shows that much has been done, the reports from all parts of the country indicate that this year the amount of money to be expended, and the actual number of patients that will be treated will be more than double that of the past year. For instance, special appropriations have been made in the various municipalities for next year's anti-tuberculosis work, aggregating $3,976,500. In addition to these appropriations over $4,000,000 has been set aside by the different state legislatures for the campaign against tuberculosis this year. Besides these sums, a large number of the present existing institutions and associations are planning enlargements of their work, and new organizations are being formed daily.

She Wants a Bonnet.

The manager of a department store received the following order from one of his out-of-town customers, who wanted a bonnet:

"Mazure of head from ear to ear over top of head 12 inches; from ear to ear under my chin nine and one-half inches; from forehead to back hair, seven inches. I want a black lase bonnet with streamers and rosette of red or yaller satting ribbon and would like a bunch of pink Rozes or a blue plume with a black jet buckel. If artifishels air still the stile I want a bunch of grapes or a bird's tale somewhere. I do not want anything to fansy, but if you think a wreath of pansies would look good why put one on. I have some good pink ribbon here at home so you need not put on strings."—Lippincott's Magazine.

WHEN DINNER COMES

One Ought to Have a Good Appetite.

A good appetite is the best sauce. It goes a long way toward helping in the digestive process, and that is absolutely essential to health and strength.

Many persons have found that Grape-Nuts food is not only nourishing but is a great appetizer. Even children like the taste of it and grow strong and rosy from its use.

It is especially the food to make a weak stomach strong and create an appetite for dinner.

"I am 57 years old," writes a Tenn. grandmother, "and have had a weak stomach from childhood. By great care as to my diet I enjoyed a reasonable degree of health, but never found anything to equal Grape-Nuts as a standby.

"When I have no appetite for breakfast and just eat to keep up my strength, I take 4 teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with good rich milk and when dinner comes I am hungry. While if I go without any breakfast I never feel like eating dinner. Grape-Nuts for breakfast seems to make a healthy appetite for dinner.

"My 13-months-old grandson had been very sick with stomach trouble during the past summer, and finally we put him on Grape-Nuts. Now he is growing plump and well. When asked if he wants his nurse or Grape-Nuts, he brightens up and points to the cupboard. He was no trouble to wean at all—thanks to Grape-Nuts." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

I. S. T. M. A. ELECTS

Gunn, Thomas, St. John, Ward and Barrowman Get Places.

GUNN POLLED LARGEST VOTE

Traveling Men's Association Passed Resolution Endorsing Governor Carroll's Action in Calling Good Roads Convention.

Des Moines, Jan. 17.—J. A. Gunn, Al Thomas, Walter St. John, Milo Ward and Robert A. Barrowman were elected members of the board of directors of the Iowa State Traveling Men's association at the twenty-ninth annual meeting of the association, at the Grand opera house. The first four men named are former members of the board. Mr. Barrowman was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the refusal of Fred McCord to run for office again.

There was a total of 1,075 votes cast for the directors. Mr. Gunn led the slate with a total of 638 votes. Al Thomas was a close second with 607 votes. Walter St. John was third on the list with 498 votes, Milo Ward fourth with 487 votes and Robert Barrowman fifth with 458 votes.

At the beginning of the session the convention passed a strong resolution indorsing the action of Gov. B. F. Carroll in calling the good roads convention, March 8 and 9 and backing the good roads movement generally. President Hill appointed a committee of three members consisting of J. H. Morgan chairman, Lafe Young, Jr., and John Wallace to attend the meeting as the representatives of the association. The traveling men declared good roads one of the most immediate needs of the state and of the country. They urged the governor to take immediate action.

D. L. Clink urged the convention to adopt a resolution indorsing the work of the National Rivers and Harbors congress and pushing the work of conservation of the natural resources. His resolution was adopted unanimously.

"Half of a traveling man's business is the matter of sending the goods he sells to his customers," said Mr. Clink in upholding his motion. "I think that the rivers and harbors movement is bound in time to reduce the freight rates on all kinds of goods and think that the movement should be pushed as fast as the country is able to bear the expense, regardless of politics and of factions."

An attempt to amend the bylaws of the association so as to make it impossible for a man afflicted with ptomaine poisoning to secure any indemnity from the association was badly defeated. Fourteen amendments to the bylaws were passed in compliance with an agreement made with the National Association of Accident Insurance companies. They were all of minor character.

The proposition of the board of directors and of President Hill to build a magnificent $150,000 office building in Des Moines for the use of the association was snowed under. The defeat was due to fears entertained by many of the members that the building would not prove a good investment.

PASSENGER TRAINS COLLIDE

Two Killed as Result of Keystone, Ia., Wreck on the Milwaukee.—Engines Reduced to Scraps.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Jan. 17—Two passengers were killed one instantly, and nine other passengers were seriously hurt in a headon collision between two fast passenger trains on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad at Keystone, tweny-five miles west of here.

The westbound Overland limited on the St. Paul road and the eastbound fast train were ordered to pass at Keystone. A freight train on the siding prevented the eastbound passenger train from pulling on the switch.

The passenger train had run past the station and was ready to back onto the siding when the Overland limited, going at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, crashed into it. Both engines were reduced to scrap iron and the mail, baggage and chair cars of the limited were badly wrecked. The engineer escaped by jumping.

La Porte Woman Is Freed.

La Porte, Ind., Jan. 17.—Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, arrested as the result of a confession of Ray Lamphere to the Rev. Mr. Schell, now president of the Iowa Wesleyan university, was released on a $500 bond. The negress, who was implicated by the confession of the murderer of Mrs. Gunness and her family, denied the charges made by Lamphere.

His Discovery.

The small son of the household had just been initiated into the art of cleaning his own teeth with the soft little brush his mother had bought him.

Hearing the baby cry lustily a few minutes later the mother ran into the nursery, only to find the nursing bottle on the floor and Johnny, toothbrush in hand, leaning over the crib of the screaming infant.

"Oh, muvver!" he cried, anxiously, "baby must have been borned wifout any toofs!"

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Answer This Question

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured numerous cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are two letters which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Fitchville, Ohio.—"My daughter was all run down, suffered from pains in her side, head and limbs, and could walk but a short distance at a time. She came very near having nervous prostration, had begun to cough a good deal, and seemed melancholy by spells. She tried two doctors but got little help. Since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills she has improved so much that she feels and looks like another girl."—Mrs. C. Cole, Fitchville, Ohio.

Irasburg, Vermont.—"I feel it my duty to say a few words in praise of your medicine. When I began taking it I had been very sick with kidney and bladder troubles and nervous prostration. I am now taking the sixth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and find myself greatly improved. My friends who call to see me have noticed a great change."—Mrs. A. H. Sanborn, Irasburg, Vermont.

We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their testimonials, or that the letters are published without their permission, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

What more proof can any one ask?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

WESTERN CANADA

What Prof. Shaw, the Well-Known Agriculturist, Says About It:

"I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. Feed is cheaper and climate better for the purpose. Your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Wheat can be grown up to the 60th parallel (800 miles north of the International boundary). Your vacant land will be taken at a rate beyond present conception. We have enough people in the United States alone who want homes to take up this land." Nearly 70,000 Americans will enter and make their homes in Western Canada this year.

1909 produced another large crop of wheat, oats and barley, in addition to which the cattle exports was an immense item.

When He Courted You

He didn't complain if you were a little despondent or irritable at times. Now he does. He's the same man. He didn't understand then. He doesn't now. Then he thought it was caprice and liked it. Now he thinks it is caprice and doesn't like it. But now he's busy getting money.

If he realized the full truth he would be more than anxious to have the wife he loves take the right remedy to restore her to true womanly health. Most men don't know that when a woman is weak, nervous, irritable and despondent, there is invariably something radically wrong with the delicate feminine organs with which her entire physique is in sensitive sympathy.

There is one, and just one remedy, tried and proven, that will put things right when the feminine organism is weak or diseased. It is

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This medicine restores perfect health to the weakened organs, and makes them strong.

It makes wifehood happy, and motherhood easy. It makes child-birth short and almost painless. It helps to make real "new women." An honest druggist won't urge upon you a substitute.

This "Favorite Prescription" is a pure glyceric extract of native medicinal roots and contains no alcohol, injurious or habit-forming drugs. A full list of its ingredients printed on its outside wrapper and attested as full and correct under oath.

Rheumatism

Nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp or chronic rheumatism. In such cases no internal treatment is required. The free application of Chamberlain's Liniment is all that is needed and it is certain to give quick relief. Give it a trial and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain and soreness.

Lame Shoulder.

This is a common form of muscular rheumatism. Apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely four times a day and a quick cure is certain.

Lumbago.

When muscular rheumatism attacks the muscles in the small of the back it is called lumbago. It is usually quite severe and every movement adds to the pain, and especially when one attempts to straighten up. No internal treatment is required. Keep quiet, as every movement aggravates the disease, and apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely, and you will soon be well again.

Sprains and Bruises are cured by the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment in about one-third the time required by the usual treatment.

BLIZZARDS

If this isn't a timely and up-to-the-minute subject for discussion, then we are surely at fault. As we write this (Wednesday noon) another of those beautiful snow storms is raging—the kind that is making this winter famous. Coal is a luxury all over the country. The railroads just succeed in getting freights to moving in good shape when along comes another blow and snow and blocks them up.

This paper has had an order in Des Moines for a shipment of paper stock for over three weeks and we are still waiting and longing for its arrival upon the scene. Last week's Britt News and Garner Democrat came out without any 'insides" so the Rock Island is no worse than the Milwaukee in handling freight.

If this business keeps up, there will be much corn picking to do in Hancock county next spring, and the candidates for county offices will have a chance to husk corn while interviewing the voters. Meanwhile feed is getting more scarce every day, as the stock has not had access to the fields of corn stalks.

Here's hopin' for good spring weather anyway.

Don't be too much impressed with what "everybody says." Sometimes this "everybody" is nothing more than some neighborhood gossip.

Do not keep the baby and other children in a room where any one is smoking. The fumes of tobacco are bad for the eyes, and injurious when breathed.

When bathing a baby or invalid it is well to have the towels heated. They dry the skin more quickly without the moist, sticky feeling that sometimes follows a bath.

When folks are sick, an old-fashioned candle is a nice thing to have in the room. It gives a nice, soft light, and will not smoke as a lamp does when turned down.

In freezing weather it is impossible to clean windows with water, but they may be made shining thus: Make a thick solution of scouring soap and water. Rub it over the panes evenly and when it is dry rub it off with a dry cloth.

When putting braid on the bottom of a dress, first stitch it double, then hem it on to the facing by the edges with the folded side projecting just a fraction below the skirt, and it will look and wear better than when put on with a single edge below the skirt.

To bake cabbage so that every one in the family will like it: First cook it tender in salted water, changing the water twice. Then chop it, put it into a buttered baking dish, turn a cupful of white sauce mixed with grated cheese over it, cover the top with buttered bread crumbs, and bake until the top is a delicate brown.—From February Farm Journal.

Saved at Death's Door

The door of death seemed ready to open for Murray W. Ayers, of Transit Bridge, N. Y. when his life was wonderfully saved. MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Oronogo, Mo.—"I was simply a nervous wreck. I could not walk across the floor without my heart fluttering and I could not even receive a letter. Every month I had such a bearing down sensation, as if the lower parts would fall out. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done my nerves a great deal of good and has also relieved the bearing down. I recommended it to some friends and two of them have been greatly benefited by it."—Mrs. MAE MCKNIGHT, Oronogo, Mo.

Another Grateful Woman.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered terribly with a female weakness and had backache, bearing down pains and pains in lower parts. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly and used the Sanative Wash and now I have no more troubles that way."—Mrs. AL. HERZOG, 5722 Prescott Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR HARRY

Lucky Bridegroom Had So Many of His Wife Relatives to "Run In" at Any Time.

"It isn't as if the dear child was going away off in some remote place far from all her relatives and friends," said the bride's mother to the caller who had run in the day after the wedding to have a second look at the presents.

"You see, she is going to live right here, so near us that I can run in every day, and her sister, May, will live just across the street and will be running in every day, and her grandmother lives just around the corner, so she can run in every day, and her Aunt Maria lives only four blocks up the street, so she can run in every day, and her Aunt Harriet lives so near that she will probably be running in every day, and she has half a dozen other aunts and cousins right here in town who will be running in at any time; but of course it will be a little hard on poor Harry, for all of his people live miles and miles from here, and the dear boy hasn't a relative to run in, yet with so many of May's relatives to run in the boy can't be very lonesome—dear, good boy!"

Awful Thought.

INSOMNIA

Leads to Madness, if not Remedied In Time.

"Experiments satisfied me, some 5 years ago," writes a Topeka woman, "that coffee was the direct cause of the insomnia from which I suffered terribly, as well as the extreme nervousness and acute dyspepsia which made life a most painful thing for me.

"I had been a coffee drinker since childhood, and did not like to think that the beverage was doing me all this harm. But it was, and the time came when I had to face the fact, and protect myself. I therefore gave up coffee abruptly and absolutely, and adopted Postum as my hot drink at meals.

"I began to note improvement in my condition very soon after I took on Postum. The change proceeded gradually, but surely, and it was a matter of only a few weeks before I found myself entirely relieved—the nervousness passed away, my digestive apparatus was restored to normal efficiency, and I began to sleep, restfully and peacefully.

"These happy conditions have continued during all of the 5 years, and I am safe in saying that I owe them entirely to Postum, for when I began to drink it I ceased to use medicine." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

DO BANKS DODGE TAX

State Auditor Bleakly Intimates that They Do.

PROSECUTIONS MAY FOLLOW

Auditor Has Referred His Findings to Attorney General Byers, Who Is Asked for an Opinion in the Matter.

Des Moines Jan. 22.—Wholesale arrests of Iowa bankers may follow a discovery made by Auditor of State John L. Bleakly that state and savings banks are dodging their assessments by temporarily converting their undivided profits and other taxable property into government bonds.

Mr. Bleakly has consulted Attorney General Byers on the question with a view of determining the legality of the course of the bankers. It is believed in the auditor's office that the method is illegal, and if such is the opinion of Mr. Byers, prosecution will follow.

In reports on examinations of banks all over the state, Mr. Bleakly discovered that many banks, at the close of the year, converted their undivided profits into non-taxable government bonds. These were carried over until after the visit of the assessor, when, it is claimed, they were again converted into money. Many of the bonds are said to have been bought from Chicago bankers who readily turned them again into money, at the demand of the banker.

"I believe that bankers should pay their taxes the same as other people," said Mr. Bleakly. "That they are taking this method to dodge assessments there can be no doubt."

Riggs Would Establish New Office.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction J. F. Riggs is not in favor of abolishing the school board and conferring the powers and duties of that body upon a city commissioned or upon three commissioners.

Mr. Riggs agrees with Homer Miller and Jerry Sullivan of the Des Moines board that the school boards can not look after the interests of the schools as the interests should be looked after, yet he says the abolishment of the board is not the proper remedy.

It is his opinion that the boards should reorganize and should appoint on a good salary a superintendent of buildings and grounds. This man's sole duty should be to look after the buildings and grounds, and in so doing would fill in where the present school board members can not by reason of their business interests outside.

Dr. Mosher is survived by his wife and six children, two of whom, Dr. Gray and Miss Mabel Mosher, live in Des Moines. One of the peculiar instances of Dr. Mosher's life was that he was once robbed by Jesse James, the notorious bandit.

Postal is in no Deal.

The Postal people here, through Manager Patten, vigorously deny the truth of the statement that the change of name of the Postal Telegraph-Cable company to the Transcontinental Telegraph company has any connection with any plan for a merger with the Bell Telephone company or the Western Union Telegraph company.

"Isn't your hat rather curious in shape?" asked the uninformed man.

"Certainly," answered his wife. "It has to be. Any hat that wasn't curious in shape would look queer."

WESTERN CANADA

Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, says:

"The stream of emigrants from the United States to Canada will continue."

Senator Dolliver recently paid a visit to Western Canada, and says: "There is a land hunger in the hearts of English speaking people; this will account for the removal of so many Iowa farmers to Canada. Our people are pleased with its Government and the excellent administration of law, and they are coming to you in tens of thousands, and they are still coming."

Iowa contributed largely to the 70,000 American farmers who made Canada their home during 1909. Field crop returns alone during year added to the wealth of the country upwards of

$170,000,000.00

A NEW TOWN EVERY WEEK

AND A NEW SCHOOL EVERY SCHOOL DAY.

The above caption about represents the growth of Central Canada. The statement was made not long since by a railroad man who claimed to have made the remarkable discovery that such was the case. There is not a district of a fair amount of settlement in any of the three Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, but has its school, and the railways have stations every seven or eight miles apart, around which group the towns, some large and some small, but each important to its own district. Schools are largely maintained by public funds and the expense of tuition is but a nominal sum.

The final returns of the grain production for Central Canada for 1909 is now in, and the figures show that the value of the crops to the farmers of that country is about 195 million dollars, as compared with 120 million last year. American farmers or those who have gone from the United States, will participate largely in these splendid returns, and these comprise those who have gone from nearly every State in the Union.

One of the many proofs that might be put forward showing the immense wealth that comes to the farmers of Central Canada is seen in the sum that has been spent during the past two or three months by the farmers who have for the time being ceased worrying over the reaper and the thresher, and are taking to enjoying themselves for two or three months. It is said that fifty thousand people of these Western Provinces spent the holiday season visiting their old homes. Most of these passengers paid forty and some forty-five dollars for the round trip. Some went to Great Britain, some to the Continent, others to their old homes in Eastern Canada, and many thousands went to visit their friends in the States. The amount paid alone in transportation would be upward of two million dollars. Some make the trip every years. It need not be asked, "Can they afford it?" With crops yielding them a profit of $20 to $25 per acre, and some having as much as twelve hundred or more acres, the question is answered. The Canadian Government Agents at different points in the States report that they have interviewed a great many of those who are now visiting friends in the different states, and they all express themselves as well satisfied, and promise to take some of their friends back with them. There is still a lot of free homestead land in splendid districts, and other lands can be purchased at a reasonable price from railway and land companies.

The Ruling Passion.

An old Irishwoman, in describing a "gone but not forgotten," said: "Mike was the foine man entoirely and he'd be living now, if it wasn't for the dhrink. He had a dog and sure that baste would bring him home from the saloon whin he was so blind wid liquor he couldn't see a shtep before him. And whin he died—'tis the truth I'm shpaking—his ghost walked at night, both back and foorth, betune the saloon and his house—and bedad 'twas so dhrunk his dog knew him!"

Prescription that Cured Hundreds Since Published Here.

"One ounce syrup of Sarsaparilla compound; one ounce Toris compound; Add these to a half pint of good whiskey: Take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bed time; shake the bottle well each time."

Any druggist has these ingredients in stock or will quickly get them from his wholesale house. Good results are felt from this treatment after the first few doses but it should be continued until cured. This also acts as a system builder, eventually restoring strength and vitality.

WOMAN RUN OVER

Mrs. A. H. Groppenhaufer Seriously Injured by Auto.

MAY BE CRIPPLED FOR LIFE

Placed Herself Between Daughter and Rushing Car in Effort to Save Child—Occupants of Automobile Not Identified.

Des Moines, Jan. 24.—In trying to save here 9-year-old daughter, Mary, from being run down by an automobile at Second and Ridge streets, Mrs. A. H. Groppenhaufer received injuries which may make her a cripple for life. The occupants of the car escaped without being identified.

Mrs. Groppenhaufer and her little daughter had just left the Fourth street car and were walking around behind it when a rapidly moving automobile coming from the north bore down upon them. Mrs. Groppenhaufer saw it in time to save herself, but instead placed her own body between the child and the machine. The automobile contained one man and two women, but they made no effort to stop the machine to investigate the extent of the injuries to the woman and her child.

The girl was severely bruised on the head when she struck the ground, but her injury is not serious. The mother received the more severe injuries. The muscles and tendons of the right leg were ground beneath the wheels of the machine and it is feared that amputation will be necessary to prevent blood poisoning.

The injured mother and daughter were taken into a home in the neighborhood of the scene of the accident, where their injuries were given care.

FIRE AT THE STATE CAPITOL

Blaze Discovered in Supply Room After Burning Four Hours—Smoke Fills Halls.

Des Moines, Jan. 24.—Fire from an unknown cause, but presumably from a lighted cigar stub thrown into a waste paper basket, started in the supply room on the first floor of the state house and burned for four hours before it was finally located and extinguished.

As it was the blaze was discovered by employes and janitors who extinguished it with pails of water before it could spread far. A hole several feet in diameter was burned through the floor under the basket and another hole was burned through the desk under which the basket stood.

Had the fire not been discovered when it was it would have gained headway under the floor and could not have been put out without considerable damage to the room and the stock stored there.

Through her attorney, J. M. Parsons, Mrs. Taylor asked to have the date of the hearing made, and Judge De Graff of the criminal division of the district court has set Monday, Jan. 31, as the day on which the trial will begin.

A Modest Doctor.

While on his vacation, a city doctor attended the Sunday morning service at a little country church. When the congregation was dismissed several of the members shook hands with him, and one, wishing to learn if he were a Methodist, inquired: "Are you a professor, brother?"

"Oh, no, indeed," answered the physician, modestly; "just an ordinary doctor."—Lippincott's.

Winter Resorts of Texas

Southern Texas, with its dry and invigorating climate, high elevation and an abundance of sunshiny days, is an ideal Winter Resort section.

Tourists are just beginning to learn that they need not travel across the continent for fine bathing, for gamey fish or tempting waterfowl. On the Texas Coast the tarpon offers more excitement than the Northern muscallonge; bass, trout and dozens of other game fish abound in the streams. In season, ducks and geese flock to the Gulf and inland lakes, literally "by the million", and it is a poor shot who cannot soon "bag" all the law allows. And there's golf, tennis, motoring, bathing, sailing, and countless other ways in which to pass the time. The shore drives and beaches are beautiful and always inviting; the shell roads are as fine motor roads as can be found anywhere.

If you're interested I'll be glad to send you a free copy of "Winter Resorts of Texas" about this splendid resort.

How to go to Texas

Ask your ticket agent to sell you a ticket via either St. Louis or Kansas City and the Katy. It is direct from either point to Galveston and San Antonio, from where you can reach any of the Gulf Coast resorts. Limited trains with Standard Pullman and Observation Sleepers give excellent service and the very best of accomodations.

Winter tourist tickets are on sale daily to many Texas Resorts; good until June 1st, 1910, for return.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

A few years after the civil war two men met on Broadway, New York. The one wore the long hair and sombrero that marked him for a southerner; the other was black as the ace of spades.

"Fo' de Lawd, Marse Geo'ge!" exclaimed the negro, with eyes and mouth open wide.

"Ben, yo' black rascal, what are you doing up here in Yankee land?"

"Wha' I doin' up hyar? I wouldn' be hyar if you war alive!"

"But I am alive."

"Don' know 'bout dat. Spec' yo' may be yo' ghos'. How come yo' be livin' when de fambly all tink yo' was killed at de battle o' Sharpsbu'g? If yo' be livin', how 'bout dat awful rakedown I got from Missy Alice?"

"What rakedown?"

"Mebbe yo' don' know dat when yo' go off to de wah an' I go with you orstensnately to take keer o' yo' hoss I war really set up to go by Missy Alice fo' to take keer o' yo'self, specially if yo' got sick or wounded. De night befo' de regiment marched away Missy Alice she come to my cabin an' she say, 'Ben, yo' infernal niggah'"—

"Oh, no, she didn't."

"Well, enny way, she said: 'Ben, I's mighty glad yo' goin' with yo' Marse Geo'ge. If he sick or wounded yo' write me ebery day.' 'I cain't write, Missy Alice,' I says. And she says, says she: 'Well, get some one else to write fo' yo' or send me word if he needs me and I'll come mighty quick to nu'se him. If yo' stick to him an' bring him back safe an' soun' to me I'll see that yo' git yo' freedom.' An' I says: 'Missy Alice, I don't keer 'bout my freedom. I don' want my freedom. I's allus lived in this fambly an' don' want to live anywhere else. But I'll watch Marse Geo'ge fo' yo' an' let yo' know if he needs nussin'. I don' promise to bring him back safe an' soun' to yo', but if he gits killed or dies o' camp fevah or any o' them sojers' diseases I promise yo' on my wo'd o' honah as a Turnoir nigga' dat hasn't nevah belonged to no udder fambly dat I'll bring his body back fo' yo' to weep ovah an' be buried in de fambly buryin' ground.'

"Den Missy Alice she say, 'Ben, yo's deblish fine niggah'"—

"No, she didn't, but go on."

"She say, says she: 'Ben, I b'lieve you'. If yo' do dat I neber fo'git it. But if yo' don' bring him back either libin' or dead yo'd bettah nevah been bo'n. How come yo' up hyar in New Yo'k, Marse Geo'ge, when yo' war killed—I mean missin'—in de battle o' Sharpsbu'g, an' yo' cunnel said yo' body was throwed into de trench?"

"Go on with your story. Never mind my part of it."

"I hunted dat battlefield all ovah, turnin' ebery man layin' on his face, even de Yanks, and I didn' see yo' nowhar, Marse Geo'ge. Den de cunnel he sent an orderly fo' me an' he say: 'Ben, yo' mastah he been killed, an' he body must 'a' been throwed into de trench. Yo' go home an' tell his people 'bout it. Wha' he know 'bout me an' dat I war a Turnoir niggah?'

"I asked him to do all that. Go on. I'm anxious to hear the rest."

"Yo' tell him to do dat? Wha' fo' yo' do dat, Marse Geo'ge?"

"I'll tell you my story when you get through with yours. Go on, I say."

"My story's nuffin mo' 'n de drubbin' I got from Missy Alice. I went home to de plantation one mornin', and Missy Alice she saw me comin' 'way up de road. She flied out of de house an' run to me, out o' bref, an' she cried out: 'Oh, Ben! Is he dead?' An' I breaked it sof'ly to her. I says, says I: 'Marse Geo'ge, he wha' he don' suffah no mo', Missy Alice. 'Deed he don't.' 'Wha' is he?' she moaned, stagge'n back. 'In de trench,' I say. 'Dey throwed him in befo' I could git him?'

"Fo' de Lawd, Marse Geo'ge, though I broke de news as sof'ly as I knew how, she jis' drop right down wha' she stan' with a shivah. I helped her up an' toted her into de house. Den when she come to herself she said, with a voice dat sounded lak a ha'nt in de tomb: 'Ben, go 'way from me an' doan' let me evah see yo' ag'in. Yo's been onfaithful to de trus' I reposed in yo'. Go 'way, you deblish niggah! Yo'"—

"Hold on, there! Don't put words you said to yourself into her pure mouth."

"Yes, Marse Geo'ge, I said 'em, a heap of 'em—wo'se an' wo'se. An' I turned roun', as de men do when de battery's sendin' out shot an' shell an' grape in their faces, an' I lef' de plantation, an' I hain't nebber been back dar frum dat day to this. An' I suffered all this on yo' account. An' yo' wasn't in de trench after all. Wha' deblish bad luck!"

"Ben," said the other, much affected, "you've hit it exactly. It would have been better if I had been put into the trench. I was stupid enough to become the victim of a diabolical story. There was another girl—well, I was engaged to be married to her long before—who wrote me that a Yankee officer who had come down with the Federal army had taken my place. After Sharpsburg I got my colonel to send you back with the story that I had been killed and thrown into the trench. I wished to be dead to every one I had been brought up with, especially to her."

"It war might' hard on Missy Alice, but I'd rather been Missy Alice than myself. Marse Geo'ge, yo' go right back to de ole plantation an' tell Missy Alice 'twar all yo' fault. Tell her yo' a liar an' I a might' fine niggah."

"I'll do it, Ben, and I'll take you with me."

LECTURE FEBRUARY 2

On account of the last two numbers of the regular lecture course coming so far apart, the committee has made arrangements with Rev. Herbert A. Keck of Garner to give his celebrated lecture on "The Essentials to Success" on the evening of February 2nd. As this is an extra number, holders of season tickets will be charged an admission fee of 25 cents; all others 35 cents. This charge is made to defray the expenses incurred. Mr. Keck comes very highly recommended and you should hear him.

Corwith Hustler: F. A. Beers received a car of hard coal on the 19th inst that was shipped out of Chicago Dec. 4th. Thus it will be seen that it was in transit 46 days, six of which were used in getting the car from LuVerne here. The latter station is eleven miles from Corwith. However this is extraordinary time when compared with the service on the Milwaukee road as Garner reports three cars of coal, three months in transit and they have not received it yet.

Wedding Bells

At high noon yesterday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bredlow, occurred the marriage of their daughter Meta, to Herman Gast, Rev. G. H. Wessel officiating. While the strains of the wedding march were called from the strings of the piano by Lizzie Riemer, the happy couple marched into the parlor where they were greeted by a crowd of faces, who had come from far and near to help make the occasion a happy one. The service was short but impressive, after which the couple was treated to many hearty handshakes and cheerful congratulations. It is needless to say that a royal dinner was in readiness to which all did ample justice. This being the third time in the space of a few years that Mr. and Mrs. Bredlow gave a wedding dinner, the eighty guests who had been invited were not ignorant as to what they might expect. In the evening they gave a reception to which some seventy young people had been invited. Everything passed off lovely except the weather which was anything but agreeable.

A number of our people were justly indignant one evening this week driving home from church, when more than a dozen teams were kept at a snail's pace just because one driver in the lead seemingly thought it smart to drive just as slow as he could. TO IMPROVE ROADS

Mayor Maloney, of Council Bluffs, Would Revive Street Fairs.

Defray Preliminary Expenses of National Horticultural Congress, and Use Balance to Improve the Public Highways.

Council Bluffs, Ia., Jan. 24.—If present plans of Mayor Thomas Maloney and a number of leading citizens of this city are carried out, Council Bluffs will again have an annual street fair and carnival, which will outstrip all previous efforts and be a credit to the city and a substantial aid to the National Horticultural Congress and the good roads movement in this city and county, which laudable enterprises it is designed to advance.

The mayor has had in mind for some time the plan to hold an annual affair of this kind in the month of September. His idea is to use the proceeds to cover the preliminary expenses of the National Horticultural Congress and if there be a balance to devote it to improving the roads in and about Council Bluffs.

The mayor's enthusiasm over the project is so genuine that he issued invitations to three members of the Commercial club, three members of the old carnival committee, three members of the National Horticultural Congress and several other prominent business men to meet with him at the Grand hotel to discuss the proposition and form an organization to carry the project through.

"A street carnival of this nature and with such objects in view would be a public enterprise," said the mayor. "I am quite sure everybody would support it because it would benefit them all, and I feel that it would be a big success. Our street fairs were discontinued several years ago and since then many citizens have expressed a wish that they might have them again. I was in favor of a revival of the street fairs last year, but my suggestions came too late, and I said at the time that I would take the matter up again this year. I am getting an early start and will try and put the matter through."

The mayor has received assurance of support from a number of people who agree with him that the project is a good one. He is of the opinion that the carnival would net annually from $4,000 to $5,000 and possibly more. Of this amount he figures $2,500 to $3 000 would be taken to pay the expenses of the horticultural congress and would give that enterprise a good start each year. Under favorable conditions there should be a substantial balance for use in improving the public highways.

Waterloo.—The city of Waterloo will take over the water works system within a few days, according to the wish expressed recently by the citizens at the polls. Would Test Grain.

Des Moines, Iowa.—Iowa, one of the richest agricultural states in the union, may, in the next few years, become richer by $5,000,000 a year if the plans of the millers are carried out by the farmers.

By action of members of the Iowa Millers' association in convention here $5,000 was appropriated for the establishment of a testing laboratory in Des Moines to chemically determine the relative qualities of wheat grown all over the state.

Data secured by such analytical tests will be sent to every farmer in Iowa and recommendations as to the best kind of wheat and other grains to sow will be made. H. A. McDonald, president of the Iowa Millers' association, expressed great confidence in the plans of the millers to increase both the quantity and the quality of the wheat yield.

"Iowa's annual wheat yield" said Mr. McDonald "is about 7,000,000 bushels. By means of the proposed chemical tests we expect to increase the yield to 12,000,000 bushels a year. That means about $12,000,000 annually in the pockets of the farmers of the state."

Miss Warren Gets Fine Place.

Ottumwa.—Miss Arletta Warren, now at the state normal at Madison S. D., has been elected to the chair of English and literature at Parson's college at Fairfield in place of Miss Cora D. Smiley who resigned. Miss Warren is a graduate of Wooster university and got her doctor's degree from the University of Michigan.

Why does Great Britain buy oatmeal of us?

Certainly it seems like carrying coals to Newcastle to speak of exporting oatmeal to Scotland and yet, every year the Quaker Oats Company sends hundreds of thousands of cases of Quaker Oats to Great Britain and Europe.

The reason is simple; while the English and Scotch have for centuries eaten oatmeal in quantities and with regularity that has made them the most rugged physically, and actually mentally of all people, the American has been eating oatmeal and trying all the time to improve the methods of manufacture so that he might get the desirable foreign trade.

How well he has succeeded may be seen at a glance at the export reports of Quaker Oats. This brand is recognized as without a rival in cleanliness and delicious flavor. 51

EPIDEMIC OF ITCH IN WELSH VILLAGE

"In Dowlais, South Wales, about fifteen years ago, families were stricken wholesale by a disease known as the itch. Believe me, it is the most terrible disease of its kind that I know of, as it itches all through your body and makes your life an inferno. Sleep is out of the question and you feel as if a million mosquitoes were attacking you at the same time. I knew a dozen families that were all affected.

"The doctors did their best, but their remedies were of no avail whatever. Then the families tried a druggist who was noted far and wide for his remarkable cures. People came to him from all parts of the country for treatment, but his medicine made matters still worse, as a last resort they were advised by a friend to use the Cuticura Remedies. I am glad to tell you that after a few days' treatment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, the effect was wonderful and the result was a perfect cure in all cases.

"I may add that my three brothers, three sisters, myself and all our families have been users of the Cuticura Remedies for fifteen years. Thomas Hugh, 1650 West Huron St., Chicago, Ill., June 29, 1909."

Whiskers.

A Roman poet told of the pride one of the late Caesars took in his great whiskers. On some of the wildwood Hill Billies I have seen beards some get long, a switch of the loose ends hanging out from under the waistcoat. Others braided the growth and tied it around the neck, while still others braided it around the waist, tying it behind like apron strings. One told me he combed and plaited his every night, and put it away into a long linen bag or nightgown, so as to keep it from getting all tangled up with his wife and his feet.—New York Press.

What Resinol Accomplishes Is Truly Wonderful.

I frequently have patients who are troubled with skin eruptions, and have taken occasion to recommend Resinol and in some cases the cures have seemed miraculous, and had I not seen them both before and after, would scarcely have believed them true. One lady told me that she had spent over $100 in various remedies, and was cured with one 50c jar of Resinol. It is truly a wonderful cure for eczema and other itching troubles.

One Way of Love

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

SYNOPSIS.

Richard Derring, returning from a winter in the woods to his mother's farm home, is overtaken by his uncle, accompanied by his eccentric wife, coming to pay a visit at the farm. Aunt Jerusha's revelations about Emily Hutton, supposed to be Derring's sweetheart, reveal the fact that she is to marry another. Disappointment stimulates Derring's ambition, and under the advice of Seth Kinney, a hermit of the woods, he resolves to fit himself for college. Kinney teaches him Greek and he passes his entrance examinations triumphantly, winning the approval of the professor. Four years in college obliterates the memory of Emily. Derring begins journalistic work in Chicago, where he meets Helen Gordon, an artist. Derring is promoted to art critic on his paper. Helen refuses to marry him and ruin both their careers, but they enter into a companionship compact. Helen suffers ill effects from sketching on the lake shore in January. Illness brings her into closer relationship with Richard. Derring is called home by the illness of Seth Kinney.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

Throughout the journey the thought stayed with him; and when, once or twice, he felt the dread of danger near, he even rejoiced that distance could not mar the closeness of love. The longing for her safety that stole from his heart would, in another man, have been a prayer.

CHAPTER XV.

Derring found Seth watching for his coming, and saw at a glance that he was very ill. Even a less practiced eye could not have mistaken the signs. The hands that lay outside the faded patchwork cover were yellow and wrinkled; the veins stood out, a network of cords, across the backs. They were the hands of an old man. Richard noted their feebleness as they closed eagerly around his own strong, warm fingers. Seth seemed to him to have aged 20 years since he saw him last.

"I am glad you have come, Dick,. I was afraid you would not get here. I wanted to see you again. My life has been a failure. It's hard to say that when you come to die," he rambled on. "Yours won't be a failure, Dick. And I helped to make it. I thought perhaps I should die easier if I could look at you again and see something that I had helped to do in the world."

After this first greeting he said no more of the comfort of Richard's presence. But it was evident in the glance of his eyes as they followed the young man about the room and in his restlessness when Richard was absent for a time.

Richard saw that his place was here as long as Seth needed him, and he quietly made arrangements to stay for an indefinite time. He established himself as caretaker and nurse. Young as he was, his experience of life had been deep enough for him to understand that it is not often that one man can do for another what his mere presence did for Seth.

The old man did not speak again of himself or of approaching death. But he questioned Richard eagerly about his work and the life he led. Every detail of it interested him. It was as if he were listening to the story of what his own life might have been. And Richard, understanding by a subtle sympathy what it meant to him, gave a minute account of the office and the men, the hurry and rush of the city, and the haste and true hospitality of the social life.

A stranger looking into the room would not have guessed that it was soon to be the chamber of death. Laughter often interrupted the recital. Richard had often fancied that when he came to die he should not want the humor of life taken from him. And the account of his Chicago life was not dehumorized for a dying man. Seth, listening, seemed to gain a quiet strength of soul as his physical strength failed.

The story of Helen and his love for her was too closely interwoven with the life of the year to be omitted, even had Richard cared to do so. Little by little he had told it all. Seth listened eagerly and questioned Dick closely. He made him describe her minutely—her personal appearance, her characteristics, her likes and dislikes, her work—everything that concerned her. As Richard talked of her, the older man would watch his face—seeking something. Then a smile of content would cross his face and he would close his eyes as if asleep. But when Richard stopped he would say, "I'm listening."

One day when they had been talking of her he asked Richard to open a leather trunk that stood at the foot of the bed and hand him a box that he would find there.

As he lifted the lid of the trunk the young man knew that he was looking into the grave of Seth's love. It was filled with letters and old-fashioned trifles, evidently keep-sakes. A long-wristed glove and a riding whip lay across the top of a small box. Carefully Richard lifted it from its place and put it in Seth's hands. Then he turned away to the window and stood looking out while the old man opened it. Richard's eyes were full of tears for a love dead 50 years. But Seth's were clear and tender as he called him to his side.

"Here, Dick, I want her to have this. You must put it on her finger. Tell her it does not bind her to any promise"—for Richard had told him. "It is from me. She is a woman. She will understand that I should like her to wear it," he mused.

It was a diamond in an old-fashioned setting, the stone large and beautifully cut. Richard held it in his hand, surprised by its beauty.

"How dared you keep anything so valuable here?"

"There was no danger. No one would look for brilliants in such a setting." The words were marked by a quiet smile of irony and a glance at the room.

Richard's glance followed his. The bare pine floor with its one strip of carpeting, the few rough chairs, the kitchen stove at one end of the room, and the bed, with its faded quilt, at the other. No, there had been no danger. Only the rows of books, piled two and three deep on the shelves, told that the occupant of the room was other than a rough farmer. A bowl of trailing partridge-berries that Richard had brought from the woods yesterday stood on the western sill. The setting sun fell across them and they lightened the room, giving it a touch of refinement. Otherwise it was unchanged from the room in which Richard had received the Greek grammar six years ago.

Then it had been to him a plain, rough room with a certain homely comfort. Now it was the picturesque setting of a lonely life. The furniture was rough; but the roughness had artistic charm. Seth must have had, consciously or unconsciously, an artist's appreciation of the beautiful. As Richard looked about the room, his sense of the pathos of the life that was passing away here deepened to a feeling of kinship and sympathy. The long years of loneliness that were drawing to a close were his own.

It was Seth who broke the silence—low and half-musingly. "You do well to love her, Dick. And she will be worthy of it. But if she is not—you must not stop loving. Love something—some one—any one. Never stop loving—for your soul's sake. That was my mistake. One woman refused to love me. I shut myself off from all love. That was my mistake. Mistake?" he said slowly. "I wonder if there are such things? Well, it spoiled my life. I didn't know then that the human heart must love—or die. He that would save his life must lose it—in loving."

The twilight settled down upon the room. The old man did not speak again. He lay with half-closed eyes looking across the shining red berries to the western sky.

Richard sat quietly by his side. He did not undress or lie down. He knew, by a subtle intuition, that a guest would come before the morning, and he waited for his coming. But so gentle was his step when he came across the floor in the early dawn that Richard only knew by a slight tremble of the thin fingers resting in his that he had come and gone, bearing with him an immortal soul.

Was it immortal? He stepped out into the cold light of the early morning. He turned to the east, where a faint flush of red was touching the gray sky. "He that would save his life must lose it—in loving," he repeated softly.

Did Not Speak Again of Himself or of Approaching Death.

CHAPTER XVI.

Before Richard returned to Chicago it was found that Seth's liking for him had taken practical form. He had made a will giving to Richard all the property of which he died possessed.

The fortune was not large, but enough to pay his college debt, raise the mortgage, and leave a comfortable sum for his mother—enough, indeed, to make her a woman of importance in the neighborhood.

She protested in a mild way when Richard proposed to settle the money on her. But he had grown too masterful for her. In the end she enjoyed the feeling of importance that an assured income gave her. She refused to accompany him to Chicago. It was all "out west" to her and very far away.

Derring found himself speeding towards Chicago, wondering whether this unexpected turn of fortune would make marriage nearer for him. But when they met he did not ask her. They assumed the old easy relation as if there had been no separation. Life sped on with days too full of content to ask promises from the future.

When the time of parting came in June he found that he could let her go with less dread than he had thought possible. The time would not be long, and with the increased freedom that had come to him in money affairs he could run east during the vacation. If trouble came to her, or harm, he could be with her in a few hours. It was with light heart that he saw her go.

He had accompanied her to the train and provided her with all the comforts for the journey that love could suggest. Between the leaves of one of the books was tucked a letter. He had not told her it was there. She would find it. The train began to move. "Good-by," he said, hurriedly, "I shall come to you if you need me. In any case I shall see you soon."

He sat up late, working on an article for the next day. When at last, tired and exhausted, he threw himself on the bed, he fell at once into a sound sleep. He slept long and heavily. He started up with a sense of suffocation.—Where was he?—What was the matter?—Was the house on fire? Before he was fairly awake he knew that the room was quiet—so quiet that he could hear the ticking of his watch. Then an awful fear came upon him—she was in danger. Great God, how the feeling mastered him! He sprang up and looked at his watch—three o'clock. He dressed quickly and went out-of-doors. He could not stay in the house. It suffocated him. He must move about or go insane.

Instinctively he turned towards the lake. A light, fresh breeze greeted him as he came to the breakwater. He lifted his face to meet it. It would blow these foolish notions out of his brain. He had been dreaming and had been frightened by his own fancies.

He slackened his pace, listening to the soft lapping of the water against the breakwater, and looking up to the stars. Then again fear took possession of him and he quickened his step until at last he broke into a run, driven by an awful, nameless dread.

Thus he alternated between hope and fear until the first faint line of dawn appeared across the water. As he stood looking at it, longing for day to break, a sudden peace came upon him. He drew a quick breath as the tension gave way. She was safe once more. This time he did not question his mood. He knew with quiet certainty that all was well with her.

UNCERTAIN WHAT WAS WRONG

Nervous Man Worried Whether the Clock's Works or His Own Required Attention.

A nervous little man stepped briskly into a jewelry store with a medium-sized clock under his wing. He placed the chronometer on the counter, turned the hands around to about one minute of 12 o'clock, and told the expert behind the counter to listen.

"It keeps perfect time," the customer said, "but I want to find out if you notice anything wrong with the way it strikes."

The jeweler listened. "There's nothing wrong," he replied with a grin, after the clock had struck, "except that she strikes thirteen instead of twelve. That can easily be remedied."

The customer looked as relieved as if he'd just awakened from a bad dream.

"That's just what I've always thought ever since we've had the clock," he burst forth. "I've always felt sure it struck thirteen. But no one else in the family ever spoke of it, and I was afraid to say anything about it for fear there was something wrong with my own works. Well, it's worth the price of having the thing repaired just to find out I was right."

Wonderful Clocks.

Five wheels and a small battery virtually consitute the mechanism of a wonderful clock just invented in England. It will run three years without attention, and at the end of that time all that is required is to attach a new battery.

Another new English clock enables the possessor to ascertain at a glance the mean time, the meridian and relative position of every part of the empire, besides being able to witness the actual speed and direction of the earth's rotation. The motive power is a clock in the base of the stand, and the apparatus requires winding only once a week.

Favors High-Neck Gowns.

The duchess of Fife, better known as the princess royal, who is a daughter of King Edward, has started an earnest campaign for high-neck evening dresses. The duchess has been appearing in court and at the opera in gowns unusually high, and her example is being followed by many women in London, including Americans

OMAHA PEOPLE GREATLY EXCITED

THE GREAT COOPER AS HE IS CALLED HAS STIRRED UP THAT CITY TO A REMARKABLE DEGREE.

Omaha, Nebraska, January 26.—This city is at present in the midst of an excitement beyond anything that it has experienced in recent years.

Old and young, rich and poor, all seem to have become beside themselves over an individual who was a stranger to Omaha up to two weeks ago.

The man who has created all this turmoil is L. T. Cooper, President of the Cooper Medicine Co., of Dayton, Ohio, who is at present introducing his preparations in this city for the first time.

Cooper is a man about thirty years of age and has acquired a fortune within the past two years by the sale of some preparations of which he is the owner.

Reports from eastern cities that preceeded the young man here were of the most startling nature, many of the leading dailies going so far as to state that he had nightly cured in public places rheumatism of years' standing with one of his preparations. The physicians of the East contradicted this statement, claiming the thing to be impossible, but the facts seemed to bear out the statement that Cooper actually did so.

In consequence people flocked to him by thousands and his preparations sold like wildfire.

Many of these stories were regarded as fictitious in Omaha and until Cooper actually reached this city little attention was paid to them. Hardly had the young man arrived, however, when he began giving demonstrations, as he calls them, in public, and daily met people afflicted with rheumatism, and with a single application of one of his preparations actually made them walk without the aid of either canes or crutches.

In addition to this work Cooper advanced the theory that stomach trouble is the foundation of nine out of ten diseases and claimed to have a preparation that would restore the stomach to working order and thus get rid of such troubles as catarrh and affections of the kidneys and liver, in about two weeks' time.

This statement seems to have been borne out by the remarkable results obtained through the use of his preparation, and now all Omaha is apparently mad over the young man.

How long the tremendous interest in Cooper will last is hard to estimate. At present there seems to be no sign of a let-up. Reputable physicians claim it to be a fad that will die out as soon as Cooper leaves.

In justice to him, however, it must be said that he seems to have accomplished a great deal for the sick of this city with his preparations.

President Taft on Discontent.

President Taft, in one of his addresses to the farmers of Florence, N. C., told a story about discontent.

"No man," he said, "can really understand chronic discontent after having eaten one of those famous pine stews of North Carolina. Chronic discontent does, however, exist. Now and then we find a case or two among farmers when the weather goes wrong.

"'Ah, yes, Joseph, you have cause to complain,' a lawyer said to a farmer. 'The harvest has been very bad, no doubt of that. But you should remember that Providence cares for all, and even the birds of the air are provided for.'

"'Yes,' said the discontented farmer, so they are—off my potatoes.'"—Washington Post.

He Asked Too Much.

They had been engaged for exactly 47 seconds by the cuckoo clock.

"Clara, dear," queried the happy youth, who had a streak of romance running up and down his person, "will you promise to love me forever?"

"I'd like to, George," replied the practical maid, "but I really don't expect to live so long."

College to Test Seed Corn Free for Farmers

The loss to Iowa, farmers from planting poor seed corn will be greater the coming season than in many years, unless active measures are taken to prevent it. The poor condition of seed corn is due largely to the heavy rains in the fall which filled the ears with water, and then the early hard freeze which followed. Tests made at the State Corn Show held at Des Moines, and at the College Corn Show held at Ames a few weeks ago, show a startling condition. Samples which were the very best in appearance and which often came from our best seed corn men, were entirely dead; and very many were weak and unreliable for seed purposes.

In order to help Iowa farmers to secure good seed corn, the Agricultural College is offering to test free of charge, all samples of corn sent them thereby making it possible for every farmer to know definitely whether or not his corn is safe to plant. Care should be taken in the selection of this sample for test, in order that it may represent accurately the true condition of the seed supply.

Make up the sample as follows: Select average ears at random from the entire lot of seed, or at least in-so-far as this is practicable. From each of the ears so selected, remove with a knife two kernels, one from each side of the ear. Place all of these kernels in a strong envelope or small sack, and mail to the Farm Crops Department, Ames, Iowa, for a germination test. Send with this corn a statement of the amount of seed you have, when it was gathered and how it was stored.

It is quite probable much of the corn from the 1908 crop will be better for seed than that grown in 1909. Those who have any old corn should send samples of this also, picking out the sample as already indicated, and accompanying it with a statement of the amount, condition, etc.

As there will be a large amount of this work to be done, the samples should be sent as soon as possible to the Farm Crops Department, Ames, Iowa. The Department will mail a report of each test at the earliest date possible.

SCRATCHED SO SHE COULD NOT SLEEP

"I write to tell you how thankful I am for the wonderful Cuticura Remedies. My little niece had eczema for five years and when her mother died I took care of the child. It was all over her face and body, also on her head. She scratched so that she could not sleep nights. I used Cuticura Soap to wash her with and then applied Cuticura Ointment. I did not use quite half the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, together with Cuticura Resolvent, when you could see a change and they cured her nicely. Now she is eleven years old and has never been bothered with eczema since. My friends think it is just great the way the baby was cured by Cuticura. I send you a picture taken when she was about 18 months old.

"She was taken with the eczema when two years old. She was covered with big sores and her mother had all the best doctors and tried all kinds of salves and medicines without effect until we used Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. H. Kiernan, 663 Quincy St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 27, 1909."

IOWA LED IN TILING

First Among all the States in Producing Drain Tile.

GEOLOGICAL REPORT FIGURES

The Mineral Products of the State Increased in Value and Coal Alone Went Up in Price, Report Shows.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—Iowa held her position as first among all the states in producing and using drain tile during the year 1908, according to "Mineral Production in Iowa," by S. W. Beyer of Ames, which is a part of the Iowa geological report for that year just sent to the state bindery by State Printer Emory H. English. During that year the output of sewer pipe was doubled, and Mason City, with eight completely equipped, monster plants, became the greatest drain tile manufacturing center in the world. Webster county also came to the front as a drain tile producing center during the same period. The gain in the value of clay products for the entire state was 10 per cent.

Mineral products of all kinds for the year had a value of $18,090,447 as compared with a total of $17,627,925 in 1907. The total value of coal mined in the state was $11,772,228 as compared with $12,258,012 in 1907, and the total value of clay products was $4,-$78,627 against $3,733,476 in 1907. Since there was a loss in the value of the coal produced, the total was due to the opening of the Northwestern States Portland Cement company's plant at Mason City.

All prices were lower than in 1907, except that of coal, the price of which averaged 3 cents a ton higher, breaking the record for high coal prices since 1880. The loss in coal production was nearly 6 per cent, and the largest falling off was in Monroe county. Polk and Mahaska were the exceptions and showed a gain in the amount of coal mined. The number of men employed in the mines was the largest and the number of days of work the lowest since 1897.

Because of the manifold uses of cement introduced and generally practiced, and because of the movement for bettering the highways and roads of the state there was a decided increase in the sand and gravel production. The amount of gypsum produced was less than in 1907, and its total value was $564,688. Pottery showed little change from 1907, the total value being $18,710, while the production of raw clay was less than in the previous year, with a value of only $3,690. Stone production fell off 12½ per cent, and the quarry output was worth only $569,775.

Big Gain In Insurance In 1909.

There was an enormous increase in the amount of insurance written in Iowa during the year 1909, according to a statement made by Auditor Bleakly in reference to the insurance securities now on file in his department. He states that the increase of these securities amounted to $5,000,-000 for the past year. This, he says, gives some idea of the growth of the business during the year, for in proportion to the increase in the business written the amount of securities filed is increased.

His statement shows that at the beginning of the present year there was on file in his office insurance securities aggregating $37,772,203.62, while at the end of the year 1908 there was on file in his office securities amounting to $32,881,310.33.

Auditor Bleakly predicts that if the present ratio of increase in the insurance written continues for two or three years that at the end of that period the securities on file in his office will reach the enormous sum of $50,000,000. In no one year has there ever been an increase of $5,000,000 in the securities filed.

Press Club Will Move.

Definite steps were taken by the Press club of Des Moines at its special meeting in considering a removal to the new Younker building between Seventh and Eighth streets on West Locust street. By a unanimous vote of the club, the matter was referred to the executive committee of the organization and that body has signed a lease for the rooms for five years.

When club moves to the new building, the structure will be named the Press club building by its owner, Falk Younker. The Press club will occupy the entire third floor of the building which will be turned into one of the most modern suites of club rooms in the city.

Following the business meeting of the club, an informal reception was held in honor of the Indiana editors who were in the city studying the Des Moines plan of government.

May Raise Peanuts.

S. Carter Livingston, a Philadelphia capitalist and promoter, was in Des Moines investigating the prospects of locating a large peanut farm and salting factory in Polk county near Des Moines. Mr. Livingston left the city well satisfied with the results of his trip and stated that it is probable that the farm will be established shortly.

Mr. Livingston stated that he has spoken to several persons in the country who have raised peanuts as a private venture and that he is well pleased with the results reported by them.

"I think that Iowa should be an ideal place for peanut farming," he said. "Warmth is not necessary and fertile land is far more important. This is found in abundance in the state and I think that all conditions are ideal for such a farm."

Bleakly Divides Funds for Schools.

State Auditor Bleakly has completed the work of apportioning the interest on the permanent school fund for 1909 to the various county auditors to be distributed by them to each school district in their county.

The sum available for distribution is $215,831.94. The county auditors distribute on the basis of 31.52 cents for each child of school age. Under this plan Polk county gets the biggest sum. The largest sums are paid as follows: Polk county, $9,619.93; Woodbury, $7,060.48; Linn, $5,564.22; Scott, $5,525.14; Dubuque, $5,486.06; Pottawattamie, $5,062.12, and Clinton county, $4.514.24.

"The Blood is The Life"

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgement are effected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood.

Foul, impure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It enriches and purifies the blood thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by inclosing fifty cents in postage stamps to Dr. R.V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

A BRUTAL MURDER

Body of Mrs. Alice Van Zandt Burned to a Crisp.

FOUND ON TOP OF GAS STOVE

Was Bound Hand and Foot and Gagged—Flesh Charred to Cinders—Murdered Woman's Husband Held.

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 31.—Bound hand and foot and gagged, the body of Mrs. Alice Van Zandt, burned to a crisp, was found lying on top of the gas stove in her kitchen. The woman had met her terrible death while her three young children were playing unconscious of the tragedy in the adjoining room.

Jesse A. Van Zandt, the murdered woman's husband, is being held as a witness by the police. The man admits that he quarreled with his wife all Friday night and up to the time he left the house an hour, he claims, before the discovery of the murder.

According to the coroner's inquest, Mrs. Van Zandt was first choked into unconsciousness, then bound and gagged with strips torn from a lace curtain, and placed across the stove with her head in the flames of the burner. The horror of the crime is increased by the coroner's statement that the woman must have recovered consciousness before death. When found all the clothes had been burned off the body and the flesh charred to cinders.

The police have discovered that Van Zandt had been paying marked attention to a young girl for some time. The father of this girl had protested strongly against his daughter's conduct and had finally brought her before the police magistrate, who, after committing her to the house of refuge, consented to allow her to enter a convent.

Kretchmer says that the fellow, a stranger about 30 years old, entered the saloon, leveled a revolver at his head and after locking him up, rifled the cash box of $17 and fled. No arrests have been made. Kretchmer was almost frozen when released.

The window was pried open and before them lay the baked remains of the old man. The relatives are at a loss to account for the accident.

UNCOOKED MEAT VERY DANGEROUS

FEARFUL SUFFERING CAUSED BY EGGS OF PARASITE WHICH IT MAY CONTAIN—STATEMENT BY A PRIEST.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 2.—Probably the most unusual feature of the excitement that has been created by L. T. Cooper's visit to this city is the removal of parasites or tape worms by his preparations.

During the early part of Cooper's stay in Omaha individuals who were taking "New Discovery," as it is called, brought either to himself or to physisians throughout the city immense parasites that had left the system after using the medicine.

Many of these people were frightened, and cases of this sort became so numerous that Cooper finally made the following statement for publication:

He said: "In every city I visit these things are brought to me within a few days after my medicine is sold in the city. They are what is known as the tape-worm, and grow to an enormous size.

"Few, indeed, realize how prevalent these creatures are. I think I have been the first to demonstrate what a large factor they are in the poor health of this generation. I believe that fully one-half of the chronic stomach trouble now so universal is caused by these parasites.

"Individuals may have them for years and not be aware of the reason for their continued ill-health, but attribute it to many different diseases, when in reality one of these creatures is robbing them of their vitality.

"These parasites are taken into the system in uncooked food or raw meat, in the form of an egg, which hatches almost immediately. People suffering from them experience a feeling of lassitude and are extremely nervous. The action of Cooper's 'New Discovery' seems to be fatal to these great worms, and in most cases a few doses of the medicine drives the creatures from the system. I will have hundreds of them brought to me before I leave the city."

This grewsome prophecy has been amply verified, for not only hundreds but thousands of Omaha people have been relieved of some of these fearful parasites since taking Cooper's preparation, and the entire city has been aroused by the fact.

Some of these parasites are of such enormous size as to startle the imagination. The statement of Father John Baptist Arnolis, one of the best known and best beloved priests in this section of the country verifies this. His statement, among others given to a reporter, was as follows:

"For years I suffered from what I thought was a general run-down condition of the system caused by stomach trouble. I felt extremely tired all the time, and it was a great effort to attend to my duties. I would wake up in the morning feeling as worn out as when I went to bed. If I stood for any length of time I would have pain in the lower part of my back, and would have to sit down.

"I was very nervous and depressed in spirits, and was troubled with dizzy spells. I would see spots before my eyes when I stooped over and raised up quickly. I had a very irregular appetite, and would have palpitation of the heart after ascending the stairs.

"The talk about Cooper's preparations was so universal that I decided to try some, although I do not take patent medicines as a rule. I took four doses of the 'New Discovery' as it is called, and a tape-worm about sixty feet in length left my system.

"I am very thankful for this great relief, and now I know what has been the cause of all my suffering."

The story of Father Arnolis is a fair sample of the experience of an astonishing number of Omaha people, and Cooper's preparations are selling here in immense quantities. It is now estimated that he has sold one hundred thousand bottles to date in this city alone, and the sale is still increasing.

Rather Tall.

"That," said Senator Tillman of an opponent's argument, "is an amusing exaggeration."

He smiled.

"In fact," he continued, "it is as bad an exaggeration as the story about Ben Johnson's height. They said of Ben, you know, the candidate for sheriff, that when he made a stump speech, instead of getting a stump ready for him to mount, they would, because he was so tall, dig a hole for him to stand in."

Better make your digestion better. The real mint leaf juice of WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT does that better than anything else.

We would all write our names on the scroll of fame but for the innumerable tribe of elbow joggers.

This $400.00 SEGERSTROM PIANO if you send us the best answer to the following rebus. Also $14,500.00 in other cash value prizes to advertise our factory and the fastest growing piano manufacturing business in the United States, as follows:

FIRST PRIZE—ONE $400.00 SEGERSTROM PIANO to the one who sends in the best answer.

THEN—$14,500.00 will be divided in amounts from $25.00 to $150.00 according to merit. These awards are good just the same as so much money towards the purchase of any new piano in our store.

IMPORTANT—No one who has been awarded a prize in any of our former contests will be illegible to compete in this contest. Only one answer will be received from any one family, otherwise the contest is free and open to anyone in the United States.

We are spending a fortune each year in advertising the SEGERSTROM PIANO direct from the homes of satisfied customers which, after all, is the very best advertisement and we intend to accomplish in one year what other manufacturers have taken fifty years to do.

Lipton spent a million dollars in advertising the products of his manufacture. Wise guys pronounced him a lunatic. Today he is heralded by the crowned heads of Europe, proclaimed the King merchant. It pays to advertise when your goods are right. We sell more pianos wholesale and retail than any other manufacturing concern in the country and our plan appeals to the thinking buyers on account of our system of selling pianos direct from factory to home which eliminates all middleman's profits.

Every contestant will be answered by mail, but be sure and enclose a self addressed envelope to assure that your award will not be missent or lost in the mail.

AN ELUSIVE MISSION.

By WINSLOW HUNT.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

It was I who, after the assassination of the Grand Duke Sergius, was sent to catch Vera Treperhoff, a young girl whom the police knew to have concocted the murder. I will omit how I tracked her to the border and take up the story after she had passed it. She made directly for Austria and thence for Venice. This indicated that she would go to America rather than England and that she would probably sail from one of the two principal Italian ports—Genoa and Naples. Genoa being the shorter distance, I took the train for that city, hoping to head her off before she left the port.

The reason for my being chosen for this work was that I had seen the girl quite often during her trial on a charge of having been implicated in another political crime. Having boarded the train at Venice soon after its departure, thinking there might be one chance in a dozen that Vera Treperhoff would be aboard, I walked through the side aisle, looking into every compartment. In the middle compartment of the third car I noticed a youth with the light hair and eyes of the north, and in a twinkling spotted my quarry. Not wishing to make myself known, I passed on.

I concluded not to make any attempt at arrest till the girl left the train. This would necessitate my watching the departures at every station and the risk that she might elude me. But I knew the stops and kept my eye on her as soon as we slowed up until we were again well on the way. My intention was to have her arrested at Genoa or wherever she alighted, since I could better fulfill the legal conditions at a definite point. Besides, I did not believe she knew her danger.

The last time I saw Vera Treperhoff was in leaving Alessandria. The compartment in which she sat had been emptied except by herself. I kept my eye on her till the train had reached a pace of some forty miles an hour. There would be no further stop till we arrived at Genoa, and I felt confident that I should take the girl back to Moscow and gain the commendation of the government, also a handsome reward.

Just before reaching Genoa I took my hand baggage to the compartment where Vera Treperhoff sat, with the intention of remaining there till the train pulled up at the station. She was not in the compartment. She was not in the car. I went through the train from front to rear, opening every closet, but nothing could I find of the girl I wanted. I scrutinized every passenger, man and woman, boy and girl, but Vera was not among them. Shortly before we slowed up for Genoa I made up my mind that she had, after all, recognized me and preferred death by jumping from the train to the horrors of Siberia.

At Genoa I engaged a special locomotive to go over the route to find the body or any trace of the culprit. I investigated every kilometer of the track between the terminus and Alessandria, but found nothing to give me the slightest clew. I was informed that the rate of travel over the section where I had missed the girl was fifty miles an hour. No one could have jumped from the train and retained sufficient life to crawl away. I offered a reward of 10,000 rubles to any one in the vicinity who would give me any information whatever leading to a clew. The offer brought many reports of a girl limping through the country, but they all proved to have been made up.

Never in all my official experience have I been so utterly incapable of forming a theory as to any escape from my clutches. Familiar with every device that could have been adopted, I went over them carefully and eliminated all of them. That a young girl not over twenty years old could have left a train going at a rate of fifty miles an hour seemed incredible. To assume that she could have passed from it later in disguise would be an insult to my professional skill.

I feared to return to Russia and tell the truth lest I should be accused of conniving at Vera Treperhoff's escape, and if I lied I would be detected. I chose the alternative of going to America to make a new home. I sailed from Genoa, and, going on deck one morning, there in a steamer chair in excellent health was Vera Treperhoff. Approaching her, I informed her that she had nothing to fear from me and asked her how she had left the train. This was her reply:

"I recognized you the moment I saw you and knew your errand. Between Alessandria and Genoa is a Y in the railroad connecting it with the road to Piacenza. I knew from my time table that there was no further stop till Genoa and you would arrest me there. While on this Y a train going in the same direction and nearly at the same speed occupied the next track. In a twinkling I was out through the window on the footboard and stepped to the footboard of the other train. Passing over it till I came to a vacant compartment, I climbed in. The train I was on soon stopped. I alighted and took a later one to Genoa."

This may all seem very strange, but there is one thing stranger still. Vera Treperhoff converted me to the revolutionary cause, and within a few weeks of our landing the girl whom I had so nearly taken to Russia to endure the tortures of Siberia became my wife. I never awake in the morning and look at her and our little ones sleeping peacefully without a groan at what might have been.

DOINGS IN GARNER

The writer was at the county hub on business last Friday. There didn't seem to be much doing in our sister town in the way of excitement. Politics are getting just a trifle warm and the board of supervisors have created some little talk here and there on account of their grand stand play to probe the county officers for graft—not that they expect to unearth anything of any importance—but just to satisfy their constituents that they were living in an age of investigations. In fact, the January meeting of the board was a foxy affair as we hear it, the enforced absence of our member and chairman Andrew Anderson, giving some others the chance to run things on a wonderful reform basis. The general public awaits the results of these investigations with bated breath—we don't think.

Then there's the revival meetings, which will no doubt purify the morals of Garner. We hope the editors there will absorb a little of the atmosphere from these meetings. Bro. Kluckhohn practically admitted that he thought Bro. Brackett might get a little religion without hurting him any, while Bro. Brackett in turn is hoping that Bro. Kluckhohn may get the spirit and mend his ways. A spiritual awakening might help Garner and great interest is already being manifested in these meetings.

Farm For Sale

OBITUARY

Charles Ludwig Stroemer died last Saturday, January 29, 1910, at 4:30 p. m., at the home of his son Henry in German township, aged 78 years. The funeral was held from the Klemme German Reformed church Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Achtermann officiating, and interment was made in Klemme cemetery.

Charles Ludwig Stroemer was born on October 18, 1832, in Carzin, District Stolp, Pommerania. At the age of seventeen he became a carpenter and when twenty he went on the sea as a sailor. Then for ten years he was ship carpenter. At the age of thirty-two he came to America, working as ship carpenter for two years on a ship running between New York and New Orleans. He then went to Connecticut working one year in a factory. In 1868 he went to Chicago and was married in that city on December 3, 1868, to Anna Schlichting. Six children were born to this union, but only two are living, viz: Henry Stroemer and Mrs. Julius Priebe. While in Chicago, deceased was employed as a railroad bridge builder.

On May 15, 1878, he and his family came to Garner, and bought the farm in German township where he has since resided, farming and also building many houses in that vicinity. His wife died July 6, 1906. About two years ago he lost the use of his eyes. Some eight weeks ago he caught a severe cold and owing to his advanced age and enfeebled condition, he was unable to rally, passing away on January 29th.

The bereaved relatives wish to thank the many kind friends who gave them help and sympathy in their hour of affliction.

Did any speaker ever tell a more pointed truth than when he asked the farmers to make their homes just as good in the country as the man has in town. With modern equipment the farmer can have all the moderness in his home that any city man can have, and much more cheaply, too.—Mason City Herald.

The state board of railway commissioners will close their docket February 15th and will again meet in session next March to take up the reduction of the coal tariff. The state mine inspectors issue a warning to all the people of the state to lay in a sufficient supply of coal as all the miners in the state have agreed to strike in April. All the railroads in the state have already commenced putting in their reserve supply.

A GOOD LECTURE

Rev. Herbert A. Keck, of the Garner M. E. church, gave his popular lecture "The Essentials to Success," in the Klemme opera house last evening. His audience was appreciative, but very small, and our people who did not turn out, missed as good a lecture as we have had on our course this winter. Mr. Keck is an able speaker and he has the power of keeping his audience in the very best of humor throughout his discourse. His sense of wit and humor is very keen and his audience appreciated his efforts along this line very highly. His advice to young people concerning the essentials necessary to a success in life, was practical, and no one could hear his lecture without getting some good from it.

Garner people are to be congratulated on having in their town so able a man, and it is to be regretted we didn't give him a better turn-out.

GENERAL NEWS.

Paris is saved. The Seine has ceased to rise. Its tributaries are slowly falling.

This bulletin brought relief at the end of a day of greater suffering, more desperate fighting than any since the inexorable river began to send its waters through the streets of the city.

Despite a bitter fight led by Senators Gore and Burkett the disposal of public lands by lottery won out in the senate. The bill opening up the Rosebud lands in South Dakota was attacked as a form of gambling, but was passed after a filibuster which halted the passage of a companion bill disposing of the Pine Ridge agency lands.

A new light was shed on the federal inquiry into the activities of the Chicago packers. Coincident with the statement by Assistant Attorney General Wade H. Ellis that the government has been investigating the fresh meat industry for six months, it became known that it was information given to Judge Landis by members of a former grand jury which participated the jurist's sensational charge to the present inquisitorial body.

The specter of pestilence is the great haunting fear of Paris. It almost overshadows the present peril of destruction by flood. A commission of doctors was summoned to perfect plans to avert what they fear will be an epidemic of plague when the waters subside. Countless dead cattle have been swept along in the current and the great sewerage systems are dammed. This dreadful burden has been borne into the great underground passages which underlie Paris, and with this situation the city will have a dread accounting to make. The stage of waters caused by the floods has exceeded all records back to 1615.

On his protest by wire and mail, Glavis said the clear listing was revoked.

This was the request of the girl in a note found pinned to her clothing by the grief-stricken parents.

A double funeral in the Monroe Methodist church was held. There was but one service. Rev. Mr. Altman of the Lutheran church of Kellogg, conducted the last sad rites.

The refusal of the youthful sweethearts' parents to allow them to wed has been assigned as the motive for the double suicide.

The girl and boy attended a dance together at the hall in Monroe. SYNOPSIS.

Richard Derring, returning from a winter in the woods to his mother's farm home, is overtaken by his uncle, accompanied by his eccentric wife, coming to pay a visit at the farm. Aunt Jerusha's questions about Emily Hutton, supposed to be Derring's sweetheart, reveal the fact that she is to marry another. Disappointment stimulates Derring's ambition, and under the advice of Seth Kinney, a hermit of the woods, he resolves to fit himself for college. Kinney teaches him Greek and he passes his entrance examinations triumphantly, winning the approval of the professor. Four years in college obliterates the memory of Emily. Derring begins journalistic work in Chicago, where he meets Helen Gordon, an artist. Derring is promoted to art critic on his paper. Helen refuses to marry him and imperils both their careers, but they enter into a companionship compact. Helen suffers ill effects from sketching on the lake shore in January. Illness brings her into closer relationship with Richard. Derring is called home by the illness of Seth Kinney. Seth dies, leaving Derring a small fortune. Derring returns to Chicago.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued

He turned away from the dawning sky and walked home. Throwing himself once more on the bed, he slept soundly until the breakfast hour. As he entered the dining-room, his heart gave a sudden leap and stood still. He thrust something far down below his consciousness. It was not a thought, it had not shape enough for that, it was formless, unrecognized.

The two young men bending eagerly over the morning paper looked up as he came in. "Have you seen the paper?—Awful accident—Miss Gordon's train."

He reached out his hand for the paper. They gave it to him and left the table. Their departure left him alone. But he gave no sign. He unfolded his napkin and spread it across his knees before he took up the paper. He opened it and glanced down the column.—He had known before he looked.—In the list of those killed—"Helen Gordon, Chicago."

He did not read the details of the accident. He merely noted the place where it occurred. Then he folded the paper and gave his order for breakfast. If he ate little, no one knew it. He took plenty of time for it. He listened to the discussion of the accident that went on as the boarders, one after another, came in to breakfast.

When he left the house he knew that he had exactly half an hour to report his absence at the office and catch the east-bound express. It was more than enough. He did not want even to be alone and think. He saw before him long years in which he would have time to think. To-day he must go to her. He might be needed. He had said that he would come if she needed him, and that he should see her soon—"I shall see you soon." Now the wheels caught up the words and tossed them back to him. They reiterated with clanking monotony—I shall see you soon—I shall see you soon." Underneath the rattle and roar, between the shrieks of the engine, in the midst of the conversation around him, he heard them with awful distinctness, and wondered vaguely if he should go mad before he reached her.

He found her after a short search. He was directed to a small house, a little distance from the scene of the wreck. When he announced his errand the woman of the house looked at him closely.

"If your name is Derring, I have something for you," she said. She disappeared for a moment and returned with a small parcel. She handed it to him.

He turned it over in his hand. There was no writing on it. "Are you sure it is for me?" he asked, doubtfully.

"She was not strong enough to direct it. But she told me your name just before she died at daybreak. She said you would be sure to come, and I must give it to you."

That he would be sure to come. Yes, she had known. He turned abruptly to the window and looked out across the flat, monotonous country. He could not trust himself to open it yet. He held it in his hand. "She was not able to direct it." The first tears filled his eyes.

When at last he undid the parcel Seth's ring flashed in the sunlight. Underneath it was a small folded slip of paper. His fingers trembled a little as they smoothed the crumpled lines. "Loved-One,—be brave. I would gladly have lived for you. But it was not to be. I shall come back to you if I can. But if not—" The last words straggled down the page and were lost.

"But if not." Derring crushed the paper in his hand and turned to leave the house.

"Don't you want to see her, sir?"

He looked at the woman blankly, stupidly. Without a word he turned towards the door she indicated. It closed behind him and they were alone together once more. He had not thought her face would be so peaceful—nor so far away. He could not understand how she could seem so far away. She was here, close beside him. He could touch her. He put out his hand and softly stroked her cheek. He did not bend to kiss the quiet face. She was too far away for kisses. "She would come back to him if she could—But if not—" Good God! How was he to bear it? ? He turned swiftly away. He could not stand there—near her—with that mocking, immeasurable distance between them.

He went straight from the house to the office of the superintendent and offered his services in caring for the injured. A surgeon was about to start on his rounds. Derring had been detailed to help him. The first patient was a young man about his own age. The leg was to be amputated just above the knee. Derring held his hand while the operation was preparing, speaking to him now and then and wiping the perspiration from his forehead. When all was done and the white sheet was being drawn smoothly in place once more, he struggled to consciousness, reaching out his hand for Derring and begging him not to leave him.

But the surgeon interposed promptly. "No, I can't spare him. He is too valuable. You would have had a tougher time if he had not been here. He shall come back to you by-and-by. Drink this and go to sleep."

So Richard spent the day in the midst of suffering. Everywhere the magnetism of his touch soothed restlessness, and his personality put courage into faint hearts. No one guessed that he was carrying a hurt deeper than any he looked on or that his heart was wrung by keener suffering than any that he soothed.

Twice during the day he stole into the room where she lay, and, standing by her side, tried to span the infinite distance between them by the inspiration of love. But it was hopeless. Always he saw before his eyes a high, cold wall of darkness and at its foot a crouching figure with fingers creeping here and there to find some opening or crevice, and, failing in this, beating itself till the blood trickled down. He knew that it was only his diseased imagination. But always the figure was there, and close at hand was the quiet face with its tranquil smile—so far away and indifferent to pain.

At night her brother came—a frank, manly young fellow, with her eyes. Derring explained his presence briefly. "I loved your sister. She never promised to marry me. But she knew I loved her."

"She wrote about you. She said—" He stopped abruptly. Their hands met in the grasp of sympathy, and then Derring left the house for the last time. He did not go again to the quiet room. She was not there. She was nearer his own heart than that.

An hour later he watched—until it was out of sight—the train that bore her away. He turned his face once more towards Chicago.

CHAPTER XVII.

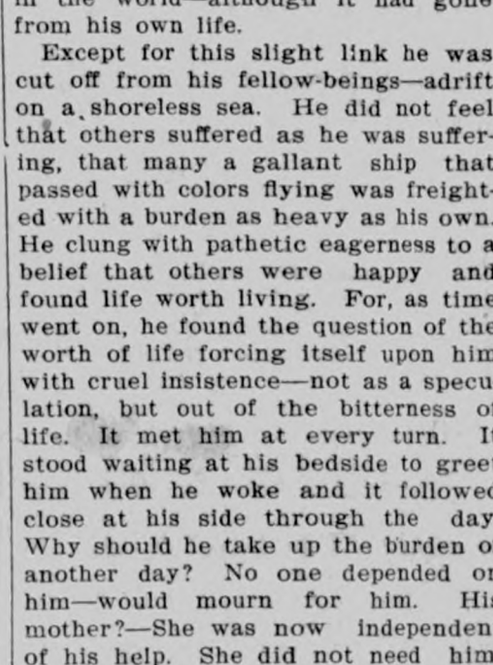
Derring threw himself into work with the intensity of despair. He worked early and late. He dared not give himself time to think. Beauty had gone from the world—interest from life. Work was the only thing left. He plodded on in a dull, monotonous fashion. It served to kill time, and there was the chance of losing himself, for a little while, in his task.

He would work for days with feverish eagerness, for the sake of these few minutes of working oblivion, in which he could lose himself, until the dull pain that always preceded his return to consciousness became too strong to be ignored. When he turned to question its meaning, memory stood always at hand to place the burden once more on his shoulders.

Except for these brief minutes there was not an hour in the day when his loss did not press upon him. To his tortured imagination he was like a man torn in two, one-half to be buried out of sight, the other to live on, suffering and enduring, till the jagged wound should heal. At every turn his thoughts went out to her—only to be met by the hopeless blank of her death. For months the thought of her had been the last in his mind at night, the first to greet him on waking. Now he sat up until worn out with work and loss of sleep. And if then sleep would not come, he counted sheep jumping over a wall, watched water falling from a high precipice down—down—or reached out his hand for the opiate that stood always at hand. Anything was better than the hopelessness of memory.

Perhaps the hardest part was the uttter loneliness of it all. He had turned to Helen with every pleasure or sorrow. Now he was called upon to face the greatest sorrow of his life alone—absolutely alone. He seemed to have lost the sense of human kinship.

Sometimes a sudden sight would touch his heart—two lovers walking together. He would follow them as long as he dared, noting every glance and gesture between them. It comforted him to feel that love was still in the world—although it had gone from his own life.



Sometimes a Sudden Sight Would Touch His Heart—Two Lovers Walking Together.

Except for this slight link he was cut off from his fellow-beings—adrift on a shoreless sea. He did not feel that others suffered as he was suffering, that many a gallant ship that passed with colors flying was freighted with a burden as heavy as his own. He clung with pathetic eagerness to a belief that others were happy and found life worth living. For, as time went on, he found the question of the worth of life forcing itself upon him with cruel insistence—not as a speculation, but out of the bitterness of life. It met him at every turn. It stood waiting at his bedside to greet him when he woke and it followed close at his side through the day. Why should he take up the burden of another day? No one depended on him—would mourn for him. His mother?—She was now independent of his help. She did not need him. No one needed him. One plunge and he would know whether death ends all, or whether in a new life one may meet or make new happiness.

PROPER WAY TO DRIVE NAIL

Expert Carpenter Gives Some Pointers as to This Seemingly Simple Proceeding.

"It takes an apprentice a full year to learn that he does not know how to drive a nail," said an expert carpenter. "When once he has realized this it is only a matter of a few minutes to learn how it should be done. The commonest mistake is the belief that a hard blow with the hammer is more effective than several little taps, and the learner is inclined to admire the man who drives a nail all the way in with but one blow. This is where he is wrong; four or five blows are much better than one. The reason is that one hard blow inevitably makes the nail rebound, ever so slightly, it is true, but enough to make it hold less firmly than it would if driven in gradually. The nail may be driven almost all the way with one blow, but several lighter taps are necessary to finish the job.

"Another thing," continued the old carpenter, "the beginner generally tries to drive his nails as perpendicularly as possible. This is another error, for a nail driven a little diagonally holds the parts together much more firmly than one driven perpendicularly. And in driving a nail diagonally it is even more necessary to proceed with gentle taps, for hard blows inevitably displace the surfaces that are to be held together."

Cardboard Takes Qualities of Metal.

An eighth-inch disk of cardboard revolved on the shaft of an electric motor of highest speed gets stiff, owing to the rotary tension, which makes it behave like metal, and it can no longer be bent. If struck with a hammer a sound emits like that from bronze. It easily saws a cigar box in two, similarly as a disk of soft iron, when rapidly rotated, cuts through heavy armor plate. Centrifugal force does many other strange things. Among others, when a small chain is looped around a high-speed rotary drum the chain can be shoved off the drum to the ground, where it bounces up and when struck acts like a ring of solid metal.

What J. J. Hill, the Great Railroad Magnate, Says About its Wheat-Producing Power:

"The greatest need of this country [United States] in another generation or two will be the providing of homes for its people and producing sufficient for them. The days of our prominence as a wheat exporting country are gone. Canada is to be the great wheat country."

This great railroad magnate is taking advantage of the situation by extensive railway building to the wheat fields of Western Canada.

FORESTS FOR UNCLE SAM.

Gifts to Enable the Government to Save Big Trees.

One of the most public spirited gifts ever made to the government came during the year from William Kent of Chicago, who has deeded to the United States 295 acres of primeval redwood forest on the southern slope of Mount Tamalpais, about six miles from the city of San Francisco. This grove is one of few remaining tracts of redwood forest to be found in its natural state in California. At the request of Mr. Kent it will be called the Muir woods, in honor of John Muir, the noted naturalist. The destruction of redwood by lumbering has been very rapid during the last decade. The large timber in the Muir woods has escaped the ax partly because of its location and partly because the former owners of the tract have protected it. Now that the gift has been accepted by the government under authority of the law which provides that objects of scientific interest may be declared national monuments the woods will be perpetuated. No other redwood tract in the state of California is so easily accessible to so many people. Its great educational value, together with the fact that it is a pleasure ground for all those who live in or visit this part of California, makes the woods an ideal national monument.

By an act of congress passed Feb. 18, 1909, a way was found to save for all time one of the most famous groves of trees in the world—the Calaveras big tree grove of California. For more than nine years the people of California, particularly the 500 women of the California club, have been working to interest the government in protecting the big trees from destruction. The act finally passed by congress provides for the acquisition of the grove by an exchange which will give its former owner stumpage or other forest lands owned by the government in place of the timber in the grove. No appropriation is needed to carry out the act.

The land to be acquired under the act includes 4,000 acres, of which 960 acres, known at the north grove, are in Calaveras county, and 3,040, known as the south grove, are in Tuolumne county. There are 1,380 big trees in the grove, not counting specimens less than six feet in diameter. Besides the big trees, whose scientific name is Sequoia washingtoniana, there are hundreds of sugar and yellow pines ranging to the height of 275 feet and often having a diameter of eight or ten feet, as well as many white firs and incense cedars.

In the north grove there are ten trees each of which is over twenty-five feet in diameter and more than seventy from fifteen to twenty-five feet in diameter.

Attorney General Byers Talks of High Prices.

TRADESMEN ARE GUILTLESS

Says Boycott Will Not Produce Results—Tariff, Transportation Charges and Stock Gambling Important Factors.

Des Moines, Feb. 7.—Persons seeking to reduce the cost of living by hitting at the grocer and the butcher and the little dealers are missing their mark, according to Attorney General Byers.

He states that the meat boycott and the boycott against other articles of high price will not produce permanently the desired low prices.

The remedy, he says, must be worked out in Washington by national legislation.

"The responsibility of the price that is too high rests almost wholly upon the trust, the excessive tariff, the exorbitant transportation charges, the stock and grain gambling," he asserted, "and if one is any more to blame than the other of these, I would fix their responsibility about in the order I have named.

"When men fight in the dark they always hit the man nearest to them, no matter whether it be friend or foe. It seems to me that is just what we are doing in the campaign that is on just now against "high prices." Everybody who works for a living feels a hurt—he feels it in the home, in the office, in the shop, in the mill, in the mine, in the business house and on the farm—the blow is from behind and in the dark, and in a sort of blind frenzy we are striking not at the right man, but at the one nearest to us. The man in town strikes the butcher, the grocer, and the other retailers, and they in turn strike at the wholesalers and the farmer. It must be evident to all thoughtful people that in such a fight there will be many innocent victims—that we are all likely to have our eyes blackened without touching the right man."

There is a remedy for this, he says, but it must be worked out in Washington, by the amending of the Sherman anti-trust law, the creation of a permanent nonpartisan tariff commission, the amending of the Hepburn act giving the interstate commerce commission more power over transportation companies, and the prohibiting of stock and grain gambling in Wall street and great market centers of the country.

The Sherman law should be amended, he says, by defining anew what are combinations in restraint of trade and then make membership in any such trust or combination a felony and punishable by imprisonment.

The permanent non-partisan tariff commission which he advocates as part of the remedy should have, he states, the power to ascertain the necessary information upon which an intelligent readjustment of tariff rates may be based.

The Hepburn law should also, he believes, be so amended as to give the commerce commission power to ascertain the physical value of railroads.

Paper Replaces Lumber.

Boone.—The question of boxes for shipping purposes got to be quite a serious one with L. and H. Goeppinger, and something new had to be taken up. Wooden boxes were hard to get and the matter of cost was also considered, as lumber seemed to advance in price with every order of boxes. A large amount of work is sent out from this city in boxes and many of them were needed. The firm decided to try paper boxes and so far the experiment has proven highly successful.

Sheriff May Not Get Junkin Reward.

Ottumwa.—The claim of Sheriff W. B. Griffin of Albia for the reward of $1,000 for the capture of John Junken, slayer of Clara Rosen, heard before Judge W. A. Roberts here on demurrer was thrown out because his evidence was brought forward after Junken was captured. J. Redman, who produced the diamond pawned by Junken, looks like the winner of the reward. Griffin is given two weeks to amend his papers.

To Teach in Indian School.

Corning.—Miss Edith Kennon has been appointed to a position as teacher in the government school for the Indians at Pipestone, Minn. Miss Kennon took the civil service examination at Omaha last October and got the best grade of any applicant in the large number examined. She left for her new position. Her place in school work here will be filled by Miss Merle Jackson of Carbon.

Corn Fails Under Test.

Lake City.—That the question of seed corn for the 1910 crop is a serious one for Calhoun county farmers cannot be disputed. For example, after the first freeze last fall, Thomas Melody of Center township who is known as one of the best farmers of the county selected and stored away thirty-five bushels of corn for seed. This corn was given the best of care and placed in warm, dry quarters. Recently five bushels of this amount was selected from the lot and tested in one of Professor Holden's ideal testers by Mr. Melody and P. C. Holdoegel of Rockwell City. Before making the test about one-third of the poorest ears were excluded, and from the balance six grains were taken from each ear. These grains were placed in the tester and given the best possible care ,the temperature being kept even. The surprising result is that only about 18 per cent of the tested grains sprouted.

Centenarian to be Made an Elk.

Marshalltown.—Being made an Elk shortly after his 100th birthday is to be the novel experience of Joseph Tuffree, the oldest man in this city, who will pass the century mark on February 10. Within a few weeks after his birthday, orw hen the Elks take charge of their new $40,000 building, Mr. Tuffrer will be a member of a large class that is to be initiated. Without doubt he will become the oldest Elk in the world.

She Originated the "Taft Smile."

Boone.—Jesse Tarbox Beals, famous newspaper and magazine photographer of New York City, is visiting her brother, a local photographer here. She was the original Taft smile artist, "shooting" Taft when this smile was first taken and given to the public. She also has been commissioned to do special work for Roosevelt, Mark Twain, Sir Thomas Lipton and many others.

Breaks Arm; Finishes Examination.

Mason City.—Refusing to follow the advice of her friends, and go home after she fell on the icy court house steps and broke her arm, Olive Golling, a Falls township school teacher, returned to Superintendent Manahan's office with her arm in splints, and in spite of the pain she suffered, finished writing a teacher's examination.

Missing Man Reappears.

Denison.—Julius Riner, the young man living at Ute, who disappeared the 16th of January with $1,800 belonging to his fiancee, Miss Dora Henderson of this city, was arrested at Ute. Riner stated that he had been robbed while asleep on his way from Sioux City to Chicago, of the $1,800 belonging to Miss Henderson, and also $700 of his own money.

Surgeons Elect Officers.

Clinton.—The Iowa Clinical Surgical Society met here and elected the following officers: President, Dr. Cottam of Rock Rapids; vice president, Dr. Evans of Fort Dodge; secretary, Dr. Bond of Dubuque; counsellors, Dr. Sawyer of Sioux City, Dr. James of Centerville, Dr. Hancock of Dubuque and Dr. McRae of Council Bluffs.

Grandma Cole is Dead.

Audubon.—"Grandma" Cole is dead at the ripe old age of 97 years. She was born in 1812. She had been a member of the Baptist church over half a century. She was a prominent member of the Women's Relief Corps and of the Daughters of Rebekah. Her funeral took place from the Christian church.

Barn and Stock Burn.

Grundy Center.—The barn on the Springer farm was completely destroyed by fire. Harry Morrison losing seven head of horses, fourteen cattle and hay, grain, buggy and farm machinery. His loss was about $2,500, partly covered by insurance.

Wants New School Building.

Allison.—The school board has under consideration plans for the enlarging, remodeling and modernizing of the school building. The proposition may be submitted to the voters at the coming election.

Farm House Burns.

Creston.—A house on the farm of Thomas Cort, in Platte Township was burned to the ground the loss entailing about $500. There was $350 insurance.

Psychologists of Iowa to Organize.

Iowa City.—Psychologists in the state of Iowa will meet here March 25 and 26, and it is probable that a state organization will be effected at that time.

Maquoketa Pioneer Celebrates.

Maquoketa.—Royal L. Goodenow, a pioneer resident of this locality, celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday with his wife and children about him.

This Contractor got results.

He knew how to feed his men.

Some years ago a contractor building a railroad in a warm climate was troubled a great deal by sickness among the laborers.

He turned his attention at once to their food and found that they were getting full rations of meat and were drinking water from a stream near by.

He issued orders to cut down the amount of meat and to increase greatly the quantity of Quaker Oats fed to the men.

He also boiled Quaker Oats and mixed the thin oatmeal water with their drinking water.

Almost instantly all signs of stomach disorders passed and his men showed a decided improvement in strength and spirits.

This contractor had experience that taught him the great value of good oatmeal. 53

On Ghosts.

James H. Hyslop, the brilliant psychologist, narrated, during a discussion of the Paladin case in New York, an original old lady's opinion of ghosts.

"Ghosts!" exclaimed the old lady, scornfully. "I don't take any stock in them. If you die and go to the good place it isn't likely that you'd want to waddle back to this poor vale of trouble, while if you go to the bad place you'll be kept there."

HAS TO HAVE THE KLONDIKE.

Mr. L. A. Engle of Georgetown, Mo., says: "I bought a No. 7 Klondike Incubator of Mr. Guy Briggs at Red Oak, Iowa, June 7, 1909. My first hatch came off June 29. I got 186 chicks from 200 eggs. The second hatch came off July 24. This time I got 202 chicks from 224 eggs. The third hatch came off August 17th. This time I got 207 chicks from 229 eggs. I wouldn't be without the Klondike for anything." This is certainly very good work and speaks well for the Klondike. It is made in Des Moines. You can have one of their catalogues by asking for it.

Teamster's Punishment Earned.

Apparently it pays not to be cruel to horses out in Chicago. A teamster who admitted abandoning his horses for six hours on a recent stormy day was fined $50 by a magistrate. The humane society prosecuted the case vigorously and promised to report the matter to the driver's employers. Presumably he will lose his job, as he was unable to pay the fine and will have to serve a jail term.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Attention Sick Women

If you had positive proof that a certain remedy for female ills had made many remarkable cures, would you not feel like trying it?

If during the last thirty years we have not succeeded in convincing every fair-minded woman that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands and thousands of women of the ills peculiar to their sex, then we long for an opportunity to do so by direct correspondence. Meanwhile read the following letters which we guarantee to be genuine and truthful.

Hudson, Ohio.—"I suffered for a long time from a weakness, inflammation, dreadful pains each month and suppression. I had been doctoring and receiving only temporary relief, when a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and wrote to you for advice. I have faithfully followed your directions and now, after taking only five bottles of the Vegetable Compound, I have every reason to believe I am a well woman. I give you full permission to use my testimonial." —Mrs. Lena Carmocino, Hudson, Ohio. R. F. D. No. 7.

St. Regis Falls, N. Y.—"Two years ago I was so bad that I had to take to my bed every month, and it would last from two to three weeks. I wrote to you for advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in dry form. I am happy to say that I am cured, thanks to your medicine and good advice. You may use my letter for the good of others." —Mrs. J. H. Breyere, St. Regis Falls, N. Y.

There is absolutely no doubt about the ability of this grand old remedy, made from the roots and herbs of our fields, to cure female diseases. We possess volumes of proof of this fact, enough to convince the most skeptical.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

COOPER'S SALES ARE ENORMOUS

HIS PREPARATIONS LEADING TOPIC IN OMAHA—CALLERS AT YOUNG MAN'S HEADQUARTERS INTERVIEWED.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 9.—The most interesting feature of the enormous sale of the Cooper preparations, now going on in this city, is what the medicines are actually accomplishing among the people of Omaha.

At the commencement of his visit here Mr. Cooper prophesied that during the later part of his stay he would receive hundreds of callers daily who came simply to thank him for what the preparations had done. He also stated that stomach trouble is the foundation for a great many diseases and that his New Discovery, as it is called, would prove very effective in all cases of rheumatism simply by getting the stomach in working order.

That this prophecy has been fulfilled cannot be doubted after a half-hour spent at the young man's headquarters listening to what his callers have to say.

A reporter, who watched to ascertain, if possible, some light on the reasons for the immensity of Cooper's success, interviewed about twenty of his callers yesterday afternoon. The statements made by those seen indicate that physicians who claim that Cooper is merely a passing fad, have not looked into the facts.

Some of these statements were as follows:

W. J. Grant, a popular cigar dealer at 508 South Sixteenth street, upon being questioned, said: "After a most remarkable experience with the Cooper remedies, I cannot refrain from saying that anyone who is suffering in any way from stomach trouble, and who does not give this Cooper medicine a trial, is passing up a golden opportunity for restoration to good health.

"For three years I was troubled with my stomach, and what little I did eat gave me distress. Nothing tasted right. I felt weak and bad nearly all the time. I was nervous and allowed matters of small importance to worry me. I treated with two different physicians, but received no benefit. I had about reached the conclusion that medical science had not yet produced anything that would help me.

"However, a number of friends urged me to try Cooper's New Discovery, and they were so persistent that I finally took new hope and got a bottle of the Cooper medicine. After I had begun to take it I wondered why I had not taken it long ago. Its effect was marvelous—brought me right out. I regained my appetite, took on new strength—in fact, began to feel like a different man altogether. I would not have believed there was a medicine on earth that could do so much in so short a time. I have good reason to be grateful for what Cooper's New Discovery has done for me, and cannot praise it too highly."

The statement of Mr. William Kennedy, advertising manager of the Bennett Company, at Sixteenth and Harney streets, was as follows:

"Long and tedious hours of hard work, and continuous confinement in a stuffy office tended to put my stomach in a condition that has for many months made my life miserable. There is no need of my going into detail, for anyone who has ever had stomach trouble knows the suffering to be endured. I became weakened and run down, and life began to be a drag.

"A personal friend persuaded me to give the Cooper medicine a trial. I procured a bottle of the New Discovery preparation and began taking it. Relief came quickly, and in a short time I was feeling like a new man. I developed a splendid appetite, could eat anything I wanted with no ill effects, and it all tasted good. My strength returned and once more work became a pleasure.

"I have taken four bottles, and shall continue its use until I am fully recovered, which I am confident will not take long. This is a remarkable preparation for any one who is 'all in' as a result of close confinement and overwork. I earnestly recommend it to anyone in this condition."

Other statements taken from those who had previously used the medicines seem to prove that Cooper's success throughout the country is genuine.

Young America.

The H.'s lived in the country, kept chickens and lived the simple life. One of their daily diversions was to sit on the front veranda and watch the sunset and Roberta, aged four, sat and watched with them, but it was a rather tedious as well as solemn occasion for her and one day, after watching in silence for quite a while, an explanation of the whole thing suddenly dawned upon her and with the delighted enthusiasm of a discoverer she exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, I know now why it takes the sun so long to set. It has to hatch out so many little stars!"—Los Angeles Times.

Old-Time Love Missives for the Day

PEPYS, that delightful old gossip of the reign of Charles II., enters in his diary on Valentine's day, 1667: "This morning came little Will Meiser to be my wife's valentine, and brought her name written upon blue paper in gold letters, done by himself. Very pretty, we were both well pleased with it. But I am also this year my wife's valentine, and it will cost me five pounds; but that I must have laid out if we had not been valentines."

Two days later Pepys says: "I find that Mrs. Pierce's little girl is my valentine, she having drawn me, which I am sorry for, it easing me of something more that I must have given to others. But I do first observe the fashion of drawing mottoes as well as names, so that Pierce, who drew my wife, did also draw a motto, and his girl drew another for me. What mine was, I forget, but my wife's was 'Most courteous and most fair,' which, as it may be used as an engagement upon each name, might be very pretty."

But fully as interesting and much more strange were the St. Valentine's customs among the common people. Many of the observances were singularly like those of Hallowe'en. They were not so grewsome, but the resemblance is unmistakable. For instance, a pert miss, who lived in the 1750's, writes: "Last Friday was Valentine's day and the night before I got five bay leaves and pinned four of them to the four corners of my pillow and the fifth to the middle, and then if I dreamt of my sweetheart, Betty said, we should be married before the year was out. But to make it more sure I boiled an egg hard and took out the yolk and filled it with salt and ate it shell and all without speaking or drinking after it. We also wrote our lovers' names upon bits of paper and rolled them up in clay and put them into water and the first that same to the surface was to be our valentine."

There have been endless devices for valentines, but perhaps the queerest on record is that described in the following little story. One St. Valentine's morning an English gentleman remarked to his pretty daughter that on that day 200,000 more letters than the average passed through the London twopenny post.

"Why, papa," replied the girl, "that's just the number of young folks that must be in love with each other—that's the way to reckon."

At that moment a bachelor friend of the family came in and learning the subject of their talk, drew a small package from his pocket.

"Here's my valentine," he exclaimed, and presented it to the young woman.

It contained a small rib, carved of ivory and covered with white satin and ornamented with true lover's knots. There were also some verses, of which this is one:

Till Adam had a partner given,
Much as fair Eden bloomed like Heaven,
His bliss was incomplete.
No social friend those joys to share
Gave the gay scene a vacant air.
She came—'twas all replete.

"Well, now, I call that capital," cried the lively lass. "After such a valentine you must take the hint, my dear sir. It's settled, you must get married."

"Will you marry me?" he asked.

"I marry you? No. You are too old. But there are many women of your age. Why don't you ask one of them?"

He had to be contented with this sorry consolation, though he deserved a better fate for the ingenuity of his valentine.

St. Valentine's day has always been a favorite with the poets. It is mentioned by Chaucer, Shakespeare, Goethe, Donne, Gay, Lydgate and others, and many first-class versifiers have written valentines. Of these none is more remarkable than Macaulay. That renowned scholar and historian never missed giving a St. Valentine's tribute to his favorite nieces and his valentine to the Countess Beauchamp, daughter of the earl of Stanhope, ranks with the most admirable of his compositions.

It is a pity that the fine old festival of St. Valentine's day is not made more of by this generation. Something should be done to bring back to it the charm, the romance, the poetry of other times.

Happily, in the last few years the comic valentines have been more humorous and less vulgar.—The Sunday Magazine.

NOT WHAT HE HAD PICTURED

Athletic Girl Hardly the Domestic Jewel That Fond Fancy Had Pictured.

Not long ago a man married an athletic girl, thinking how fine it would be to have a wife who would be able to wait on herself and build the fires, if necessary, and keep the dust demon on the jump without bringing on an acute attack of nervous prostration. Said he to himself: "A girl who swims and rows and plays a rattling good game of tennis, not to speak of her fondness for walking and driving, is sure to be a domestic jewel. If we happen to be without a servant, she can keep the household machinery humming." Somebody must have told that girl she was marrying a man with money. Anyhow, she hasn't been able to dress herself without the assistance of a maid, and the only time she has ever had the broom in her hands was one day when she picked it up to hit the cat with. If she'd clean house for as much as half an hour she'd have to go away to some fashionable springs to recuperate. And yet, to look at her, you wouldn't think she was so delicate.—Exchange.

Why His Mother Mourned.

William M. Fogarty has a story about a good old Irish woman whose son was about to start for a trip around the world.

She had watched him prosper with pride. To her he was a great man. In her fond vision she could see all sorts of terrible tidings coming to him but she held her peace until he had started for the journey. Then she began to cry. A neighbor tried to console her, but to no avail.

"I'm afraid he hasn't the money to get back," said the mother, weeping. "He's got the money to go round the world all right, but how will he ever get back?"—Indianapolis Star.

Rough on "Rats."

"How do you like the way she does her hair?"

"I think she mistreats it shamefully."

He had been here only about a week when he met us one day and said: "I hold a church letter from my home town and I should like to join your church if you will accept me." FROM NORTH DAKOTA

Larrabee, North Dakota.

Friends and All—When I received the Klemme Times today was surprised that there is so much snow in Iowa. In Foster county, North Dak., we haven't hardly any snow, about six inches on the level, and not many drifts. The plowed ground is all bare. We have had splendid sunshiney weather here, the snow is nearly all melted.

I am in a fine country. In places it is a little hilly—in others it is nice and level; no ponds to be seen. The country is so level that you can see thirty miles on a nice clear day. No corn is raised here, but only wheat and oats. Not very many cattle and hogs—mostly horses. Every farmer has from 15 to 50 horses. The smallest farms are about 600 acres, and some farm as high as 1,000 acres. There is lots of state land that will be sold February 2, 3, 4 and 5, and Carrington expects lots of visitors.

Yours respectfully,
JOHN E. GRIEWE.

Saved From Awful Peril

"I never felt so near my grave," writes Lewis Chamblin, of Manchester, Ohio, R. R. No. 3, "as when a frightful cough and lung trouble pulled me down to 115 pounds in spite of many remedies and the best doctors. And that I am alive today is due solely to Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. Now I weigh 160 pounds and can work hard. It also cured my four children of croup." Infallible for coughs and colds, its the most certain remedy for la grippe, asthma, desperate lung trouble and all bronchial affections, 50c and $1.00. A trial bottle free. Guaranteed by the Old Reliable Drug Store.

Watchman Properly Incensed.

When the bell rang in hook and ladder No. 22 at Ninety-eighth street and Amsterdam avenue, New York, early the other morning, the man on the desk yelled, "Hurry up, boys; it's the big hotel just around on Broadway, I think!" The firemen hustled into place, and the big triple team of blacks dashed to the scene of the blaze. It was dark and the flames were visible a block off. Driver Veith lashed the horses, and they were on the spot in a jiffy.

"Gee!" howled Fireman Muir, "it's only the watchman's shanty; but I'll bet he's asleep."

Sure enough, the fat old man who is looking nights to see that the water pipes, each of which weighs half a ton, are not stolen, was dragged out in the open air.

"I'll have the law on you," he cried, "wakin' me up. I'm the watchman on the job."

Rip's Little Joke.

Rip Van Winkle awoke and found himself surrounded by a crowd of reporters.

"Did you really sleep 20 years in these mountains?" queried the men of the press.

"Sure thing!" yawned Rip as he lit his pipe.

"Well, how on earth did you keep warm during the bitter winters. There are no steam radiators up here?"

Rip laughed.

"Ah, no, my friends," he chuckled, "but there are plenty of mountain ranges."

And picking up his stick the old man started out to hunt up a vaudeville manager.

BEING A COUNTY OFFICER

Last week's Garner Signal had a half-column exertion with the caption "Being County Supervisor," in which that paper tried to portray the hardships connected with that office and to give reasons for the shortage in the county fund—and at the same time trying to excuse the shortage by the silly tactics of laying the blame on the democratic members of the board.

We wish it distinctly understood that when we refer to the board of supervisors in this article, no reference is made to our efficient member from this district, Andrew Anderson, who was unable to be present at the January meeting, owing to the serious illness of his wife.

In serving the people in the capacity of a county officer. it matters not whether a man be a republican or a democrat, if he does his duty, and the Signal knows it is silly to draw the line as it does.

We want to present the case of the County Officer in a few words, as we see it. If there is a shortage of funds, it cannot be said that the county officers are to blame and yet it seems to us that the package handed to our county officers by the board at its January session tended to place blame on them, and not in a very courteous way either—but you don't hear any of the official papers saying a word about this. Why?

We will wager that in no county in the state is there any better or more efficient set of public servants than we have right here in Hancock county. It is better to pay for a little extra clerk or deputy hire than to put more work onto the officers than they can attend to and do it well—and it is sure to save trouble in the future. If the board really wants to "investigate," all well and good, but to play grand-stand to the voters by publishing slams at the officers in the board proceedings, don't look good to us.

Hancock county has had good painstaking officers in late years and this, together with able deputies, has given our county a good set of records.

Harry Sweely, from Waukonda, So. Dak., is visiting here with his uncle, Byron Sweely.

Fred Arnold, Clarence Wiles and Lawrence Larsen left Sunday night for Chicago to take in the big auto show.

The Meservey Messenger was eleven years old last week. Few towns as small as Meservey have as good a newspaper as is the Messenger.

Mrs. John Gruetzmacher and daughters, Misses Hulda and Esther, visited relatives at Garner over Sunday and attended the revival meetings in progress at that place.

Carl Busch lost a yearling colt last week. He tied him up in the barn and the colt not being used to a halter, succeeded in committing suicide by the hanging route. It was a good colt and a big loss for Carl.

Fred Ridder is the latest Klemmeite to get the auto fever—or at least to get a machine. His arrived Saturday night and is a Buick Ten touring car. Klemme people will have to learn to dodge quickly or keep off the street when all our autos get to buzzing next summer.

THE KENTUCKIAN WAS PLEASED

HE SECURED A GOOD HALF-SECTION IN CENTRAL CANADA.

It is not only from Kentucky, but from thirty-five to forty different States that there comes the expression of satisfaction from those who have taken up lands in Central Canada as a free homestead or have purchased lands.

Mr. E. K. Bell, of Frankfort, Kentucky, writes to a Canadian Government Official, and says: "I have just returned from Alberta, overjoyed with my trip. Your literature was very flattering, but not half what I found it. I bought a half section between Calgary and Edmonton, one mile from railroad, near a good town. This is the best country I ever saw or ever expect to see. I will go in the spring and get to work on my place. I think it is the coming Country of the World." Some of the papers describe the settling of the Canadian West as "becoming a fever with a great many people. The lure of its golden promises is creeping into their hearts and many are they who are answering the call of that unsettled territory." This paper editorially cautions its readers to exercise care and thought before moving to a distant country. This would be a wise precaution, and is exactly what the Canadian officials ask.

The success of the settler who has made Canada his home for years is the best evidence that can be offered. And of the large number of Americans who have made their homes in Canada, very few have returned. All are satisfied.

Practical Christianity.

"On behalf of the sewing circle of this church," said the pastor at the conclusion of the morning service, "I desire to thank the congregation for 57 buttons placed in the contribution box during the past month. If now the philanthropically inclined donors of these objects will put a half-dozen undershirts and three pairs of other strictly secular garments on the plate next Sunday morning, so that we may have something to sew those buttons on, we shall be additionally grateful."—Harper's Weekly.

The girl who says she wouldn't marry the best man living will probably live to have the satisfaction of knowing she didn't.

GET POWER.
The Supply Comes From Food.

If we get power from food, why not strive to get all the power we can. That is only possible by use of skillfully selected food that exactly fits the requirements of the body.

Poor fuel makes a poor fire, and a poor fire is not a good steam producer.

"From not knowing how to select the right food to fit my needs, I suffered grievously for a long time from stomach troubles," writes a lady from a little town in Missouri.

"It seemed as if I would never be able to find out the sort of food that was best for me. Hardly anything that I could eat would stay on my stomach. Every attempt gave me heartburn and filled my stomach with gas. I got thinner and thinner until I literally became a living skeleton and in time was compelled to keep to my bed.

"A few months ago I was persuaded to try Grape-Nuts food, and it had such good effect from the very beginning that I have kept up its use ever since. I was surprised at the ease with which I digested it. It proved to be just what I needed.

"All my unpleasant symptoms, the heart-burn, the inflated feeling which gave me such pain disappeared. My weight gradually increased from 98 to 116 lbs., my figure rounded out, my strength came back, and I am now able to do my housework and enjoy it. Grape-Nuts did it."

A ten days' trial will show anyone some facts about food.

THE WONDERBERRY OR SUNBERRY

Has Proved a Great Success—Thousands Say It's the Best Thing They Ever Grew.

The Wonderberry or Sunberry, the marvelous garden fruit originated by Luther Burbank, and introduced by John Lewis Childs, the well-known Seedsman of Floral Park, N. Y., has proved a great success all over the country. Thousands of people say it is the best thing they ever grew.

Mr. John Burroughs, the well-known author, Naturalist and bosom-friend of Theodore Roosevelt, says it is the most delicious pie berry he ever tasted, and a marvelous cropper.

A Director of the New York Agricultural Experiment Station says it fruits abundantly even in pure sand. In the short season of North-western Canada it is a godsend, and fruits long after frost has killed most garden truck.

D. S. Hall, Wichita, Kan., says thirty people grew it there last season with perfect satisfaction.

K. S. Enochs, Hammond, La., says it yields $250 worth of fruit per acre with him. Mrs. J. H. Powers, 4732 Kenwood avenue, Chicago, raised enough berries on a space 4x10 feet to supply herself and friends.

J P. Swallow, Kenton, Ohio, says its equal for all purposes does not exist.

Rev. H. B. Sheldon, Pacific Grove, Cal., says he likes the berries served in any and every way.

W. T. Davis, Enon, Va., says it is true to description in every way, and fruits in three months from seed.

Judge Morrow, of U. S. Circuit Court, says the Wonderberry is simply delicious raw or cooked.

Mr. Childs exhibited one plant five months old bearing 10,375 berries which measured about eight quarts.

Mrs. Hattie Vincent, Hayden, New Mexico, says it stands the long, hard droughts of that climate and fruits abundantly all summer.

It is certainly the most satisfactory garden fruit and the greatest Novelty ever introduced.

A man can be so proud of getting down to breakfast nearly on time that he can get mad with his wife for not saying it's because he's so smart she had to call him only three times.

RAW ECZEMA ON HANDS

"I had eczema on my hands for ten years. I had three good doctors but none of them did any good. I then used one box of Cuticura Ointment and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent and was completely cured. My hands were raw all over, inside and out, and the eczema was spreading all over my body and limbs. Before I had used one bottle, together with the Cuticura Ointment, my sores were nearly healed over, and by the time I had used the third bottle, I was entirely well. To any one who has any skin or blood disease I would honestly advise them to fool with nothing else, but to get Cuticura and get well. My hands have never given me the least bit of trouble up to now.

"My daughter's hands this summer became perfectly raw with eczema. She could get nothing that would do them any good until she tried Cuticura. She used Cuticura Resolvent and Cuticura Ointment and in two weeks they were entirely cured. I have used Cuticura for other members of my family and it always proved successful. Mrs. M. E. Falin, Speers Ferry, Va., Oct. 19, 1909."

One Way of Love

SYNOPSIS.

Richard Derring, returning from a winter in the woods to his mother's farm home, is overtaken by his uncle, accompanied by his eccentric wife, coming to pay a visit at the farm. Aunt Jerusha's questions about Emily Hutton, supposed to be Derring's sweetheart, reveal the fact that she is to marry another. Disappointment stimulates Derring's ambition, and under the advice of Seth Kinney, a hermit of the woods, he resolves to fit himself for college. Kinney teaches him Greek and he passes his entrance examinations triumphantly, winning the approval of the professor. Four years in college obliterates the memory of Emily. Derring begins journalistic work in Chicago, where he meets Helen Gordon, an artist. Derring is promoted to art critic on his paper. Helen refuses to marry him and hamper both their careers, but they enter into a companionship compact. Helen suffers ill effects from sketching on the lake shore in January. Illness brings her into closer relationship with Richard. Derring is called home by the illness of Seth Kinney. Seth dies, leaving Derring a small fortune. Derring returns to Chicago. Helen starts on a visit to her home in the east, and is killed in a railroad accident. She leaves a message for Richard, saying: "I shall come back to you if I can. But if not—" Derring throws himself into his work to find forgetfulness. He finds peace in ministering to others with no hope of happiness for himself.

CHAPTER XVII—Continued

Gladly would he have died. In hopeless, desperate fashion he prayed for death. But something—intangible—still held him from taking his own life. He did not perceive that there were depths of misery lower than any to which he had yet fallen. Had he foreseen the trackless country over which he was to wander, he would have laid down his life in despair at the outset. But the sight was mercifully withheld from him, and he pressed steadily on, unloved and unloving, but hugging close to his heart one delusive belief—love was still in the world. Not for him, but for others, life was still worth the living.

How or when this belief escaped him he never knew. He awoke one day to the awful conviction that even this had been taken from him—that nothing remained between him and absolute despair. He had been a fool. How could any love—even as pure as theirs—how could even this make life worth living? It was at best a frail, uncertain thing, liable to snap at any moment and leave life empty, desolate—like his own. No, life was a mistake. Derring could fancy it the gift of some arch-fiend who lay back, laughing in his sleeve, as from afar he watched men rushing here and there, pushing and scrambling, cheating, swearing, dying—for what? For a will-o'-the-wisp, a mirage, a child's fable.

Thus despair took hold on him. But the effect was not what one would have foreseen. It drove him towards his fellow-men. In his first grief he had been moody and reserved, speaking seldom and then only of the most matter-of-fact details of work. Now he sought companionship. He courted conversation. But his conversation was sharp and cynical in tone. No subject was too sacred or too tender for his wit. It was as if the fiend had taken him far above and had showed him that all is vanity and vexation of spirit—transient, fleeting, beginning nowhere and ending in nothing—too trifling to mourn over and surely not worth enthusiasm.

Every one in the office felt the change. Many a young fellow who came under the lash of his tongue wondered vaguely what had come over Derring. But no one guessed the cause. For although he seemed so open and bluff, he was more reserved than ever.

Thus two, three—six years passed. Then a change came over him. The bitterness passed from his heart and left only a great pity for mankind. It was a cruel thing to create a race capable of suffering and condemn it to a life of fruitless striving! The hopelessness and the misery haunted him—day and night. He became very gentle. Even towards sin and vice he showed a leniency that surprised his fellow-workers. His own grief had become to him a very small thing—hardly worth a heart-throb in comparison with the curse under which the human race struggled. He would gladly have died to bring a ray of light to men. He began to understand, dimly, that the sins of the world may be laid on one man. But with the understanding came a conviction of the hopelessness. Every true man must suffer, must stoop to take the burden on his shoulders—some to bear it even to a cruel death—but never must one dare hope that because he suffered another should be free.

For himself, as the years went by, he questioned no more. Life and its meaning had reduced itself to this—to help those that are in trouble—this much he had gathered from the wreck. He knew that it was only a fragment, a negative sort of comfort. But it was better than the blank apathy of indifference. It was something to live for.

But happiness—living, thrilling happiness—was for him a thing of the past. That it could ever come to him again he did not for a moment dream. Life was upon him. He must endure it as bravely, as helpfully as he might. But never might he hope for a joy that should make it perfect, or for a reason that should justify the suffering.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The day had been unusually warm in the office, but otherwise no different from other days.

When Derring came home at night he threw himself on the bed to rest before dressing for dinner. It had become a common thing for him to stop to rest now and then during the day—how common, even he himself did not realize. He was less introspective than formerly. He worked instead of speculating or dreaming. When he found himself too tired to work he rested for a little, as he was doing now.

It Seemed to Stretch Away Into Space.

It had taken him long to learn the art of resting. But he had at last gained the power to turn aside at any moment from the rush of life and yield himself, body and mind, to a quiet restfulness.

As he lay in the half-darkened room, his eyes closed, his breath coming and going lightly between parted lips, it was easy to see that the past ten years had not all been as peaceful as this. The thick hair, pushed carelessly back, was streaked with gray. The exuberant vitality of the face and frame had given place to a worn look of passive strength. Ten years should not so change a face were it not that ten years, as men count time, are sometimes a cycle.

Derring was not thinking of the past, however, nor of himself. He was resting, gaining strength for the next work that lay before him.

At last he rose and began to move about the room, making ready for dinner. Suddenly he stopped, bewildered, putting his hand to his head. What had happened? A change too subtle to be put in words had come over him while he rested. He looked at his face in the mirror, half expecting to see some sign. It was not there. But deep in his heart he felt it throbbing—thrilling. Life was, after all, worth living! Nay, more, it was a wonderful, beautiful thing. The feeling did not take words. It was too pervasive, too complete, for that. No mere thought could have carried such weight of conviction. It was too simple for a chain of reasoning. Yet it carried belief. He had reasoned carefully and logically to the opposite conclusion. How was it?—Life could not be worth living. Since there is no permanent happiness, existence has no reason for being rather than for not being, and no certainty of an outcome that shall justify suffering. He smiled at his careful logic, swept away by the force of pure conviction—Life was worth living!

It lay before him simple as daylight, and as clear. His mind ran ahead. He must find the work he could do well, and do it. Herein lay happiness. Then let him help others to find their place. He would have joy of heart and the purpose that makes life reasonable. It mattered little about the immortality of the soul. Three-score years and ten was immortality. The structure of the universe betrayed a master plan. To live in unison with this plan, to aid in its execution—if only for a few years—was enough.

He turned to the window and, drawing up the shade, looked across the broken lines of chimney-pots and roofs to the western sky. His heart leaped to meet it. Beauty had come back to the earth. He stood drinking it in with the eagerness of a traveler who sees home at last. He had not known how his artist nature had hungered for it through the years. The tears came into his eyes as he looked. A tangle of chimneys and gables against a twilight sky, but full of subtle beauty. Would it stay with him?—Where had it been? There in the outer world—but hidden from him because he was unworthy? Or in his own soul languishing with its sickness? Then in a moment it came to him—it was not in the world, nor in his soul. It was the soul itself coming to consciousness, recognizing itself, beholding its own features, as in a glass—existence reaching its highest form in the consciousness of the soul. He stood awed before it. It seemed to stretch away into space, wonderful, lofty, but close about him.

He went down to dinner with an eager interest. Everything had become transformed. Men and women were no longer machines wound up to run through a definite term of pain, and calling on his sympathy and help. They were divine—capable of the highest happiness. He felt like leaping, exulting, crying aloud in fulness of joy at the beauty of life and human kinship.

"Derring was more like himself tonight than he has been for years," remarked an elderly man to his companion as Derring passed from the room where they sat smoking after dinner.

The speaker was a quiet, thoughtful man with observant gray eyes. He was the only one left of those who had been in the house ten years before. "He always used to be like that," he went on, "full of life and a kind of magnetism. He drew you."

Derring passed out of the house and down the street, walking with swift, eager feet. He felt cords of sympathy drawing him to those he met. He walked until late at night, seeking out the busiest streets and pressing in close among those who thronged them. He was intoxicated with humanity and the joy of life. He must come close to it. He was thrilling with a sense of exultation—all this living, surging crowd, capable of perfect development of the divinest joy!

When he returned to his room, he did not retire immediately. There were letters that must be written before he slept. He had thought, as he walked, of two or three young men whom a word from him might help to better positions. He must not miss his opportunity. Life was short. He longed to bring happiness to the world.

He fell asleep, planning for the coming day. It seemed strange to look forward to the morrow with anything except a sense of dull endurance.

When he wakened he could not, for a moment, account for the feeling that wakened with him. Like a child, half awake, he groped in memory to recall the gift that yesterday made him so happy. Then it came to him. It had not failed him. It was not a passing mood. He was awake, alive, in a world full of beauty and love.

CHAPTER XIX.

The morning sun was streaming into Derring's private office. Two young men were waiting for him. They had come to consult him about a piece of work in the slums.

Derring himself kept out of slum work. He always answered, when pressed to give himself to it, that he had no call that way—and a man needed a very strong call or a great deal of cheek to thrust himself unasked into a man's home—even though the home happened to be a poor one. A man's castle might be only one corner of a room, but it was his castle still, fortified by all the laws of identity and individuality. For himself, Derring declared, he had not the courage to invade it. If a man had a genuine call to the work, let him do it and thank the Lord that called him.

TO MEET IN ACTIVE VOLCANO

Crater of Kilauea Will Be Scene of Initiation Ceremonies of the Mystic Shrine.

One of the most unique initiation ceremonies ever attempted by the Mystic Shrine is being arranged to be held in the crater of the active volcano, Kilauea, on the Hawaiian islands, by Aloha temple in November, when the ceremonial session of the temple will be held, says the San Francisco Chronicle. The significant feature of the occasion will be that the candidates will nearer approach the real walk over "hot sands" than any of the initiates on previous ceremonies of the lodge.

Potentate Charles G. Bockus of Aloha temple, arrived in the city on the liner Manchuria for the purpose of making arrangements for the local Islam temple, of which William Crocker is potentate, to be present at the ceremonies.

The ceremonial session will be held on Saturday morning and afternoon. An immense tent will be erected on the edge of the volcano to accommodate the guests. The party, with the candidates, will descend into the pit of the volcano, where the ceremonies will be held in view of the seething mass of burning lava below.

France's New Glory.

In this conquest of the air France has earned a glory of which nothing can deprive her. After all the foolish talk about French decadence it is refreshing to see the aspiring germs of France soaring triumphant into untraveled heights. Only America contests her supremacy in a domain which she has made her own. France may be proud of what is happening at Betheny. The spectacle is one full of reproach to ourselves, but we do not grudge France her glory. We rejoice in her renaissance. She has resumed her role as a pioneer of humanity.—London Chronicle.

FARM LANDS BOUGHT

DIVIDED INTO TRACTS TO SUIT THE CONVENIENCE OF HOME-SEEKERS OF LIMITED MEANS.

THE INTERNATIONAL FARM LANDS COMPANY, of New York, will assist any man, regardless of color or nationality, to a country home to be paid for on an easy installment plan, if he can prove he is honest, industrious and temperate; not in debt and has money enough to make a small first payment, buy a cow, a pig and a plow, and has a wife who has the sense and disposition to help him on in the world.

It is our contention that a mechanic or a laboring man of any sort, if he is fortunate in possessing a helpful and well regulated family, can cultivate five acres of land, if located within reach, without interfering with his daily work, and he can thus largely solve the perplexing problem of the constantly increasing cost of food stuffs. The industrious family with five acres can raise two or three pigs, keep a cow and some chickens, grow all the vegetables and fruits needed for the table and have a surplus for sale.

For men who are regularly employed, we make a specialty of five acre tracts near the large cities and manufacturing centers, and for those who want small farms, ten, twenty and forty acre tracts in carefully selected localities in all parts of the United States, Canada and Mexico. Although we are advocates of the French system of a smaller acreage with better care of the land and more intensive cultivation than is now in vogue in this country, yet we are willing to help competent men to larger farms, when they can convince us that it is to our mutual advantage. We believe worthy young men, who have been brought up in the country and understand the cultivation of the soil, may find it to their advantage to consult us before deciding definitely upon life in the city.

In no sense are we colonizers, but in the event we have a call for homes in a locality where we do not own land, we will, upon the application of ten or more persons, secure the best obtainable land there, if we can be convinced that the conditions in such locality are a guarantee of success for our customers and for ourselves as well, because this is not a charitable institution, but a company organized and doing business for profit.

Write and tell us what you are and what you want, but do not waste your time writing us unless you can meet the aforesaid requirements, as we have no time to spend on worthless families since there are so many deserving people in the world who will appreciate and make the best use of help when placed within their reach on a fair and honest basis.

If the applicant is not a naturalized citizen, he must furnish such references as his Consul will ratify. The International Farm Lands Co., 2 Rector St., N. Y. Leigh Hunt, Prest.

FORESTS FOR UNCLE SAM.

Gifts to Enable the Government to Save Big Trees.

One of the most public spirited gifts ever made to the government came during the year from William Kent of Chicago, who has deeded to the United States 295 acres of primeval redwood forest on the southern slope of Mount Tamalpais, about six miles from the city of San Francisco. This grove is one of few remaining tracts of redwood forest to be found in its natural state in California. At the request of Mr. Kent it will be called the Muir woods, in honor of John Muir, the noted naturalist. The destruction of redwood by lumbering has been very rapid during the last decade. The large timber in the Muir woods has escaped the ax partly because of its location and partly because the former owners of the tract have protected it. Now that the gift has been accepted by the government under authority of the law which provides that objects of scientific interest may be declared national monuments the woods will be perpetuated. No other redwood tract in the state of California is so easily accessible to so many people. Its great educational value, together with the fact that it is a pleasure ground for all those who live in or visit this part of California, makes the woods an ideal national monument.

By an act of congress passed Feb. 18, 1909, a way was found to save for all time one of the most famous groves of trees in the world—the Calaveras big tree grove of California. For more than nine years the people of California, particularly the 500 women of the California club, have been working to interest the government in protecting the big trees from destruction. The act finally passed by congress provides for the acquisition of the grove by an exchange which will give its former owner stumpage or other forest lands owned by the government in place of the timber in the grove. No appropriation is needed to carry out the act.

The land to be acquired under the act includes 4,000 acres, of which 960 acres, known at the north grove, are in Calaveras county, and 3,040, known as the south grove, are in Tuolumne county. There are 1,380 big trees in the grove, not counting specimens less than six feet in diameter. Besides the big trees, whose scientific name is Sequoia washingtoniana, there are hundreds of sugar and yellow pines ranging to the height of 275 feet and often having a diameter of eight or ten feet, as well as many white firs and incense cedars.

In the north grove there are ten trees each of which is over twenty-five feet in diameter and more than seventy from fifteen to twenty-five feet in diameter.

SEED CORN

Prof. Holden, of Ames, says that the seed corn is the worst in years, and urges the testing of every ear. This is a question of vital importance to the whole state. Prof. Holden says:

Test six kernels from each ear intended for seed. Do it the last half of February and the first half of March.

If you must buy seed, get it of a neighbor or as near home as possible.

The seed corn which is to be planted this spring is the worst that Iowa has had for many years. The very hard freezes which came the second week in October killed a large part of the corn then in the field. Many who had their seed saved before the freeze are finding that the vitality is bad.

During the Annual Short Course at Ames all of the 786 samples of corn entered for prizes were tested for vitality. These samples represent the very best seed of the state and are much above the average. The following table shows the results of the test:—

Section of State	Percent Bad	Perc't Weak	Perc't Strong
Northern	27	12	61
N. Central	18	14	68
S Central	21	16	63
Southern	14	15	71
Av. of State	20	14	66

While some samples were very good many others were worthless for seed. The average seed for the state is undoubtedly much below that sent to Ames to compete for prizes.

The necessity for testing six or more kernels from each ear intended for seed was never so great as it is this year.

Many will have to buy the seed they plant this spring. This seed should be purchased as near home as possible. Corn grown from seed brought in from a distance does not yield as well nor mature as well as that from home grown seed.

The Extention Department is already receiving inquiries for seed. In order that such inquirier may be referred to men in their own sections, it will be appreciated if those having seed or cribs of old corn which is in good condition will write to the Extension Department giving the variety, amount, and price of the seed which they have to sell.

Let every man test six kernels from each ear he plants. This should be done during the last of February and the first of March so that those who do not have enough seed of their own may have time to secure it from some of their neighbors.

The Fight Against Tuberculosis.

Interest in the anti-tuberculosis campaign now being waged throughout the United States is evidenced by the fact that in the year 1909 163 new anti-tuberculosis associations were formed, 133 tuberculosis sanatoria and hospitals were established, and 91 tuberculosis dispensaries were opened. Compared with previous years, this is the best record thus far made in the fight against consumption in this country.

During the year 1909, 43 more associations for the prevention of tuberculosis were formed than during the previous 12 months, and 62 more hospitals and sanatoria were established. On January 1, 1910, there were in the United States 394 anti-tuberculosis associations, 386 hospitals and tuberculosis sanatoria and 265 special tuberculosis dispensaries.

Reflections.

The beautiful home was crowded with people assembled to honor the distinguished guest.

But the explorer soon tired of the attentions, and as he leaned his arm against a pillar, he allowed himself to be transported back to the scene of his triumph.

"Such a waste," he mumbled, audibly, staring into space, "such a waste, such a waste."

Why so many stout ladies left the house in indignation, the hostess was unable to learn.—Sunday Magazine of the Pittsburg Dispatch.

Worth Keeping.

"John, do you recognize this hat?"

"No, I can't say that I do. It looks rather dilapidated."

"Yes. I have been keeping it as a dear memento. I was wearing it when you and I first met. That was 11 years ago."

"I hope you'll keep it always. It ought to convince you that you must have been mighty good looking once, seeing that even with that thing on your head you caused me to fall in love with you."

Doubtful.

A teacher was telling a class at school on a recent Sunday about the deluge, remarking:

"And then it rained for 40 days and 40 nights.

Then a little boy asked: "Were the farmers satisfied then, miss?"—Tit-bits.

CLEAR-HEADED
Head Bookkeeper Must be Reliable.

The chief bookkeeper in a large business house in one of our great Western cities speaks of the harm coffee did for him:

"My wife and I drank our first cup of Postum a little over two years ago, and we have used it ever since, to the entire exclusion of tea and coffee. It happened in this way:

"About three and a half years ago I had an attack of pneumonia, which left a memento in the shape of dyspepsia, or rather, to speak more correctly, neuralgia of the stomach. My 'cup of cheer' had always been coffee or tea, but I became convinced, after a time, that they aggravated my stomach trouble. I happened to mention the matter to my grocer one day and he suggested that I give Postum a trial.

"Next day it came, but the cook made the mistake of not boiling it sufficiently, and we did not like it much. This was, however, soon remedied, and now we like it so much that we will never change back. Postum, being a food beverage instead of a drug, has been the means of curing my stomach trouble, I verily believe, for I am a well man today and have used no other remedy.

"My work as chief bookkeeper in our Co.'s branch house here is of a very confining nature. During my coffee-drinking days I was subject to nervousness and 'the blues' in addition to my sick spells. These have left me since I began using Postum and I can conscientiously recommend it to those whose work confines them to long hours of severe mental exertion."

"There's a Reason."

HOLDEN INDORSED

Recommended for Storms' Job at State College by Corn Growers.

FIX DATES FOR CORN SHOW

Exposition Will Be Held in the Coliseum December 9-15—State Board of Education May Ask Pinchot to Take the Presidency.

Des Moines, Feb. 14.—Prof. P. G. Holden, head of the corn extension department of the Iowa State college at Ames, has been indorsed for the position of president of the school to succeed Dr. A. B. Storms by the directory board of the Iowa Corn Growers' association.

Previous to the indorsement of Dr. Storms, the directory board fixed the dates of the eighth annual corn exposition from Dec. 9 to Dec. 15, inclusive, and announced that entries for the show will close on Dec. 5.

The corn growers' indorsement of Professor Holden will carry considerable weight, it is said, for it is the strongest organization of scientific farmers in the state and one of the largest in the country.

The directory board met in the offices of the Des Moines Commercial club and made preliminary preparations for the show to be held in the Coliseum next winter.

"It is with regret that I read in the papers that President Storms has tendered his resignation as president of the Iowa agricultural college," said President Chapman. "If his resignation has been received the thing that the people of Iowa want to concern themselves about is the choosing of the new president. I do not think that there is any question as to who would be selected were this matter left to a popular vote of the farm interests of the state, for which the work of the institution stands, which also necessarily embraces the mechanical and engineering departments.

"It is my judgment that Prof. P. G. Holden would be the choice of the Iowa people. Professor Holden has probably come closer in touch with the people of Iowa and knows more of their wants and their needs than any other living man in the state, and this should qualify him. He has rare executive ability and is a leader among young men and women. This has been thoroughly demonstrated in his educational work before short courses over the state, on seed corn specials, and in his addresses before educational institutions, I sincerely trust that the educational board in their deliberations as to the successor to Dr. Storms will give the greatest possible consideration to Professor Holden in connection with the presidency of the Ames college."

Treasurer Fred McCulloch and special agent for farm management in Iowa of the United States department of agriculture, said, "Personally, I am for Holden, I regard him as the best all around man for this position in the United States and I am convinced that he has done more to deserve this recognition now that the opportunity is at hand, than any name that has been mentioned in connection with filling this position. I believe I know the sentiment of the Iowa people."

Gifford Pinchot, deposed government forester and leader of the conservation forces of the country, is being considered by the sate board of education for the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. Storms.

Larrabee to Speak to Students.

BOY'S WELL-MEANT WARNING

Nautical Call Somewhat Out of Place When Saying Grace Was in Order.

There is a Trenton boy who spends his summers with an uncle, who is an enthusiastic sailor. Last summer the lad was particularly impressed by his uncle's manner of singing out "Hard-a-lee!" as a signal for all hands to put their heads down whenever, in tacking or coming about, such proceeding was necessary to dodge the boom.

Shortly after his return from his uncle's place on the coast, the boy was taken by his parents to visit his grandfather in the south of the state.

Now it appears that the grandfather is a devout churchman, never failing to say grace at meals. It being the lad's first visit, he gazed upon the unusual preliminary with some wonder; and accordingly, after leaving the table, was rebuked for not having bowed his head like the others.

The next morning the boy showed the effects of his rebuke. When all were seated at table and his grandfather inclined his head preparatory to asking the blessing, the youngster caused the utmost consternation by piping out in a shrill voice:

"Hard-a-lee, everybody!" — Sunday Magazine of the Pittsburg Dispatch.

LEG A MASS OF HUMOR

"About seven years ago a small abrasion appeared on my right leg just above my ankle. It irritated me so that I began to scratch it and it began to spread until my leg from my ankle to the knee was one solid scale like a scab. The irritation was always worse at night and would not allow me to sleep, or my wife either, and it was completely undermining our health. I lost fifty pounds in weight and was almost out of my mind with pain and chagrin as no matter where the irritation came, at work, on the street or in the presence of company, I would have to scratch it until I had the blood running down into my shoe. I simply cannot describe my suffering during those seven years. The pain, mortification, loss of sleep, both to myself and wife is simply indescribable on paper and one has to experience it to know what it is.

"I tried all kinds of doctors and remedies but I might as well have thrown my money down a sewer. They would dry up for a little while and fill me with hope only to break out again just as bad if not worse. I had given up hope of ever being cured when I was induced by my wife to give the Cuticura Remedies a trial. After taking the Cuticura Remedies for a little while I began to see a change, and after taking a dozen bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, in conjunction with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, the trouble had entirely disappeared and my leg was as fine as the day I was born. Now after a lapse of six months with no signs of a recurrence I feel perfectly safe in extending to you my heartfelt thanks for the good the Cuticura Remedies have done for me. I shall always recommend them to my friends. W. H. White, 312 E. Cabot St., Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4 and Apr. 13, 1909."

Put a Shirt on Greeley.

The excellent cut of Horace Greeley's birthplace at Amherst, N. H., in the Sunday Herald of recent date suggests this anecdote which may be of interest:

The room in which he was born is now occupied as a sitting room. A visitor some years ago asked a lady living near by if she remembered ever seeing Horace Greeley, and she replied: "Well, yes; I have a very early remembrance of him. I put the first shirt on him."—Boston Herald.

PHYSICIANS OF OMAHA DISAGREE

DIFFERENT OPINIONS ON COOPER'S REMARKABLE SUCCESS HELD BY MEDICAL MEN OF NEBRASKA METROPOLIS.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 16.—The astonishing sale of Cooper's preparations in this city has now reached such immense figures that the medical fraternity at large have become forced into open discussion of the man and his preparations.

The physicians as a whole seem to be divided with regard to the young man's success in Omaha—some being willing to credit him for what he has accomplished, while others assert that the interest he has aroused is but a passing fad which cannot last, and which will die out as quickly as it has sprung up.

The opinion of these two factions is very well voiced in the statements made recently by two of a number of physicians who were interviewed on the subject.

Dr. J. E. Carass when questioned about the matter said: "I have not been a believer in proprietary preparations heretofore, nor can I say that I believe in them at present. But I must admit that some of the facts recently brought to my notice concerning this man Cooper have gone far towards removing the prejudice I had formed against him when the unheard-of demand for his preparations first sprang up in this city. Numbers of my patients whom I have treated for chronic liver, kidney and stomach troubles have met me after taking Cooper's remedy and have stated positively that he has accomplished wonderful results for them. I notice particularly in cases of stomach trouble that the man has relieved several cases of years' standing that proved very obstinate to treatment.

"I am the last man on earth to stand in the way of anything that may prove for the public good simply through professional prejudice, and I am inclined to give Cooper and his preparations credit as deserving to some extent the popular demonstration that has been accorded them in this city."

Another well known physician who was seen took the opposite view of the "Cooper-mania," as he called it, which now has this city in its grip. He said: "I can only liken the present state of affairs to a certain kind of hallucination. For want of a better name, I might call it 'Cooper-mania.' The people of Omaha seem to be firm in the belief that this man Cooper has health corked up in a bottle.

"Some of them imagine that he has completely cured them of various ills, judging from their statements. It is beyond me to say why the city has gone crazy over the man. It may be safely put down, I think, to one of the passing fads that so often attack the American public.

"Sooner or later the people are bound to regain their senses and will then realize that the reputable physician is the one to whom their health had best be entrusted."

In the meantime Cooper meets several thousand people daily, and only smiles when statements of the above character are quoted to him.

Who Are the Elect?

Two modern statements of the doctrine of "election," neither of which would quite satisfy John Calvin or Jonathan Edwards, are given in the Congregationalist.

One was Henry Ward Beecher's epigrammatic and convincing phrase: "The elect are whosoever will; the non-elect are whosoever won't."

Good as this is, there is another explanation that is a star of equal magnitude. It was made by a colored divine, who said:

"Brethren, it is this way: The Lord, he is always voting for a man; and the devil, he is always voting against him. Then the man himself votes, and that breaks the tie!"

All undergraduates are required to qualify as swimmers, as the exercise is one of the most popular of the college sports.

HISTORIC HOUSES Associated with Washington

ANYTHING that pertains to the life of Washington is interesting and particularly so the houses he occupied during his military career. There are standing at this day three historical houses which mark as many important epochs in the career of the great Liberator.

Washington, as we all know, was initiated into military life by the breaking out of the French and Indian war, which culminated in the ascendency of British rule in Canada. The march of Braddock through the wilderness to the bloody gorges of the Monongahela stands out as the most tragic event of that struggle.

On one of the back streets of Frederick stands the headquarters of Washington, a rather dilapidated building, with quaint little windows and narrow doors, the whole forming to-day a tout ensemble of loneliness and dilapidation. The owl and the bat make it their abode, the roof is sadly in need of repairs and the only evidence of modernism that prevails about it is the little cabbage garden between it and the street. A movement has been started looking to the restoration of this historical house, which at one time sheltered our first president and it is possible that some day it may be restored to its original appearance.

The city of Winchester, Va., holds within its keeping on the corner of Cork and Braddock streets a small stone house which represents another phase of Washington's career. He was then the idol of the colonies, for his gallantry during the Braddock campaign had brought him prominently into the limelight of the day.

The little house which he occupied during his stay at Winchester has of late fallen into the hands of the corporate authorities, which insures its preservation for years to come.

It is a far cry in Washington's life from Winchester to the final campaign at Yorktown, where the American revolution met with its crowning success. Washington was now at the pinnacle of his fame as a soldier and the star of hope for the colonies was brightening the heavens. The long roll of English supremacy on this continent was beating. The American army, 15,000 strong, lay about Williamsburg, 14 miles from the "final scene of glory." Washington was surrounded by such men as Lafayette, Rochambeau, Lincoln and Hamilton, and in the mansion where he had established headquarters were held the most momentous councils of war witnessed during the revolution. The house is still in an excellent state of preservation. Indeed, it looks as well now as when within its walls were laid the plans for the defeat of Lord Cornwallis.

It was a brilliant military court that Washington held at Williamsburg, almost within a stone's throw of William and Mary college, the alma mater of Jefferson, Henry and other distinguished Americans, and but a few steps from the house, now in ruins, where he courted the "Widow Custis." It was from the Williamsburg house that Washington set out for Yorktown.

There is perhaps in this country no place richer in historical associations than Williamsburg, which was the colonial capital of Virginia. It is connected with great events from the earliest settlements to the civil war. Not least among them is the gathering of the Americans and French for the last campaign of the revolution. It witnessed the preparation of the trap that caught Cornwallis and the brilliant reception of the French officers by Washington. And it is a source of gratification that the headquarters of the First American, one of his last in the field, is so well preserved, rising to-day in its original appearance above the tender roses of a southern clime.

ROCKY BOY INDIAN LANDS OPEN FOR SETTLEMENT.

Secretary Ballinger has issued instructions to throw open 1,400,000 acres of land in Eastern Montana to white settlers.

This land was withdrawn about two years ago for the purpose of allotting to the Rocky Boy Indians. The tract contains the very choicest lands in Valley County and wherever farming has been carried on, it has produced yields of from 20 to 30 bushels of wheat per acre, 40 to 70 bushels of oats and large crops of hay, alfalfa and vegetables.

There are over 8,000 160-acre homesteads in this tract, which is considerable more than the combined total in the Flathead, Spokane and Coeur d'Alene Reservations, which were opened to settlement last summer.

Nursing mothers will find it especially valuable in sustaining their strength and promoting an abundant nourishment for the child. Expectant mothers too will find it a priceless boon to prepare the system for baby's coming and rendering the ordeal comparatively painless. It can do no harm in any state, or condition of the female system.

Delicate, nervous, weak women, who suffer from frequent headache, backache, dragging-down distress or from painful irregularities, gnawing or distressed sensation in stomach, dizzy or faint spells, see imaginary specks or spots floating before eyes, have disagreeable, catarrhal drain, prolapsus, anteversion or retroversion or other displacements of womanly organs from weakness of parts will, whether they experience many or only a few of the above symptoms, find relief and a permanent cure by using faithfully and fairly persistently Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This world-famed specific for woman's weaknesses and peculiar ailments is a pure glyceric extract of the choicest native medicinal roots without a drop of alcohol in its make-up. All its ingredients printed in plain English on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. More Free Homesteads

Secretary Ballinger has ordered 1,400,000 acres of choice land thrown open to settlers under the homestead laws, on and after March 1, 1910. This land is mostly level or rolling prairie and is covered with a heavy growth of wild grass. The soil is a brown clay loam. This land lies in Valley County,

Eastern Montana

It is known to be very fertile and wherever farming has been carried on, good yields of wheat, oats, rye, barley, flax, alfalfa, hay, potatoes and even corn have been obtained. The land is free under the homestead laws. No registration—no drawing. No long waits and disappointments as is the case with the lottery system. No expense—except the few dollars for filing fee.

The Great Northern Railway is now building a branch line through the very heart of the tract. Low one way and round trip rates during March and April. Send for map folder giving full details.

Saved From Awful Peril

"I never felt so near my grave," writes Lewis Chamblin, of Manchester, Ohio, R. R. No. 3, "as when a frightful cough and lung trouble pulled me down to 115 pounds in spite of many remedies and the best doctors. And that I am alive today is due solely to Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. Now I weigh 160 pounds and can work hard. It also cured my four children of croup." Infallible for coughs and colds, its the most certain remedy for la grippe, asthma, desperate lung trouble and all bronchial affections, 50c and $1.00. A trial bottle free. Guaranteed by the Old Reliable Drug Store.

Some folks say it don't pay to advertise, as "everybody knows we are here and what we sell." Yes, and they know the same thing about Sears, Roebuck & Co too, but they keep on advertising day by day—everlastingly at it—and that's just the reason why they get the business. They would tell you so themselves if you would ask them.

How to Make Money With POULTRY

Use CYPHERS INCUBATORS

Fire Proofed--Insurable

Three Facts Showing Their Success

FACT ONE—Cyphers Incubators are in successful use on more Government Experiment Stations in the United States, Canada and other English speaking countries than all other makes of incubators combined.

FACT TWO—Cyphers Incubators are in use on more large and successful practical poultry plants than all other makes of Incubators combined.

FACT THREE—Cyphers Incubators are used by a larger number of poultrymen of national reputation than all other makes of incubators combined.

U. S. Government Indorses Incubators

Read what the Department of Agriculture says.
(From Farmers Bulletin No. 236)

"The incubator is an important factor in poultry raising. It is a success: it has come to stay; and the time is not far distant when it will be as necessary on every farm as the plow, the mower or the separator. The purchaser of an inferior machine, failing to secure good results, sets aside his incubator and informs his neighbors that artificial incubation is a failure. The purchaser of a good machine—one properly made and adapted to its work—is so apt to be pleased with his success that he encourages his friends and neighbors to undertake raising chickens with incubators."

The Cyphers Guaranty:

That each and every Incubator we send out will do satisfactory work in the hands of the purchaser who will give it a fair trial, or it can be returned to us in 90 days, in good repair, less reasonable wear, and the purchase price will be refunded.

Returning to the kitchen he informed his wife what he done. "Well, that settles it," she exclaimed, "we'll have to get a new hired girl. Willie didn't come home last night and I told the girl she might occupy his room."—Ex.

A TRAIN LOAD OF SETTLERS VISITING BURBANK-OCALA COLONY.

WHERE THOUSANDS ARE FLOCKING

A BRIEF STORY OF COLONY BUILDING THAT HAS ASTOUNDED THIS COUNTRY.

BY CLEMENT YORE.

One of the most tremendous land movements ever seen in America is progressing at the present time towards Burbank-Ocala Colony, in Marion County, Florida. One simply cannot comprehend what it means to see a thousand people purchasing farms in just a few days. One has no idea of a country that one month contains no habitations, and the next thirty days is dotted over with cottages; is throbbing and active with life and movement, and is the center of improvement that equals, if not surpasses, those great days of the far west when whole counties were peopled over night.

But this movement towards Florida is far more interesting and of greater import than any movement towards land heretofore recorded in this country. The primal influence of this great movement is Charles H. Sieg

CHAS. H. SIEG.
Florida's New Empire Builder.

and the organization which he has promulgated.

This man is the pioneer of Florida in the matter of placing northern men and women upon Florida farms. Less than one year ago Charles H. Sieg organized his first colony, which was located in St. Johns Park, Florida. Every acre of the 30,000 comprising this colony was sold within 30 days. The demand was so great that Mr. Sieg secured another tract of land, amounting to some 36,000 acres, at Jacksonville Heights, and this in turn was sold out with the rapidity of the first colony.

Today at these two great colonies, St. Johns Park and Jacksonville Heights, are to be seen many beautiful cottages; hundreds of farms are being worked; settlers are thoroughly satisfied; land values have arisen 100%, and many of those settlers who bought land, and have not even improved it as yet, are actually refusing in profits more than the amount of money they paid for their homes.

Then Mr. Sieg began his search for his greatest and his best Florida farm community. After careful scrutiny of all Florida lands, he decided that Marion County, north of the County Seat, Ocala, held the greatest promise for his ideals, and he purchased a large tract of land here.

Upon one side of this property lies the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad; on the other, the Seaboard Air Line; and through the heart of it travels the Ocala & Northern Railroad. Upon the eastern border of the colony, which Mr. Sieg has called Burbank-Ocala, the beautiful Ocklawaha river runs, and over the breast of its waters travel passenger and freight steamers from Palatka to Silver Springs.

It is thus seen that transportation,

This shows how easy it is to clear land, simply by setting fire to the stumps, which contain large quantities of turpentine.

the greatest and most necessary of all adjuncts to a farm community, reaches its highest point of development at Burbank-Ocala Colony.

But a short time ago Charles H. Sieg announced through the public press his intention of selling this property, as he had sold his former colonies in 1909. The response to these announcements was so great that it surpassed the ideas of Mr. Sieg. Today the evidence which this man has at his finger ends of the enormous demand for Florida soil, is more astonishing than the reading of a work of fiction.

Surely this is the day of back to the soil.

To take a trip over the Burbank-Ocala Colony is to have a pleasure that amounts almost to a vacation.

As one approaches Florida upon any of the great railroads reaching this state, one is at once struck with the conversation one hears in the smoking, dining or sleeping car. This conversation is almost wholly confined to the topic of Florida, and gives an insight into the real condition of the fame of this great state, for these people come from almost every section of the North American continent. Every train carries many men and women who are going to Florida, and strange as it may seem, the majority of them are routed to Burbank-Ocala Colony.

From the worn-out hills of New England, from the cold and bleak mountain camps of the mining districts of the Rockies, from beautiful California, from chill and snow-laden Canada, from the cities and from the farms, Catholic and Jew, college professor and bricklayer—these are the people who are settling today in Burbank-Ocala colony. Every race, every religion, every trade and every profession has some man or woman who is a settler at Burbank-Ocala, and who from this fact, prove that this land satisfies all people and all classes of people.

There are three new townsites in this colony, places where Chas H. Sieg and his organization have decided to build cities. When one sees what these cities were but a short time ago, and looks at them when one arrives at Burbank-Ocala Colony, one has an idea of what their appearance will be six months from today.

The people are moving upon the fertile fields of Burbank-Ocala Colony in large numbers; they are preparing those fields for the reception of their first crops; they are building their homes, and in the wake of these settlers is traveling the commerce to the various lines of business, that depend upon an agricultural community for their existence.

Marion County, Florida, is the banner county of the state. It is the county which but a few years ago in competition at Tampa, Florida, with every county in the state, took first prize for agricultural and horticultural products.

Marion County has more fine roads

than any county in the state. It has local and long distance telephones upon its farms, and one sees here more luxury in an hour's travel by automobile or team than one would believe possible in a farming section.

We must remember in traveling over Florida, that these people whose homes we see, and whose fields we marvel at, make their money and build their homes, not by the man-killing toil of working 160 acres of ground like is done in the north, but Florida is the spot where a man is rich who owns a ten acre farm.

Without the question of a doubt, the greatest and most delightful portion of Florida, where pleasure and profit are wound and inter-wound, is Marion County, and in the very heart of this great county is located Burbank-Ocala Colony.

If you want to read something of this great colony; if you want to know in the language of irrefutable proof and undeniable facts and figures; if you want to see with the eye of a camera what is now being done at Burbank-Ocala, write for "Ten Acres and Freedom," a book issued by Chas. H. Sieg, and prepared with a most comprehensive knowledge of all questions arising in the mind of a man who contemplates making Florida his home.

This great book is very expensive, and it is filled with absolute proof that tells a story which no man can deny, and it tells it in the language of common sense.

In an interview with Mr. Sieg recently, he made the prediction that every acre of Burbank-Ocala Colony would be sold before farmers in the north were enabled to start plowing. This means that many thousands of acres must be sold each and every week, and that hundreds of settlers are buying this land every day.

The office of the Burbank-Ocala Colony is located at the city of Ocala, Marion County, is filled with settlers and prospective settlers to this colony, and the best part of it all is that these settlers are satisfied. Many of them are sent to Burbank-Ocala for the purpose of investigating and making sure, not only for themselves, but for their friends, relatives and neighbors, and most of these men buy immediately after seeing this land and many people.

To give one some idea of the value of this property, and how firmly convinced the Company is that it will stand any investigation, the Board of Directors of the New South Farm and Home Company have authorized C. H. Sieg to sell this colony land with the strict guarantee that if it is not satisfactory to the purchaser, he may ask for and receive back every dollar he has paid, together with 6% interest, any time before the actual delivery of the deed.

This land is selling at the price of $25.00 per acre, upon the terms of 50 cents per acre down, and 50 cents per acre per month until the land is paid for, thus giving every purchaser 49 months after his application has been received to complete his payments, while he can move on and take possession of his farm after a small payment of only 50 cents per acre. This is at the basis of 17 cents per month for each 10 acres purchased.

My advice to every man who really wants to make an investment out of his daily savings, that will come back to him in profits that are limited only by his own capabilities, is to write at once for the great book called "Ten Acres and Freedom," and inform himself thoroughly before he buys, and prove to his own satisfaction that Burbank-Ocala Colony is really entitled to all of the tremendous patronage which it is receiving today.

Just send in the coupon below. No letter is necessary, and you will receive by return mail this great book free.

Sight-Seeing with Reservations.

Out of the Grand Central station the other day came a couple the sight of whom caused citizens who saw them to admit to themselves that there might be, after all, some basis of truth in the "Uncle Josh" jokes in the allegedly funny papers. The old man grasped his carpet bag and bulging green umbrella firmly, and looked up and down the street, his mouth agape.

"There's a heap o' sights in New York, I guess, Maria," he said. "I misdoubt if we see them all."

The old lady's mouth set grimly.

"Well, Silas," she replied, and her manner was more than significant, "bein' as I'm with you, there's some, I expect, that you ain't goin' to see!"—Lippincott's.

Pushing the Goods.

A number of drummers were sitting in a hotel lobby, when one of them began to boast that his firm had the most number of people pushing their line of goods.

There was a little argument and then a drummer who had not been much to say before suddenly rose and said: "I'll bet any man in the house that my firm has the most number of people pushing its line of goods!"

"Done!" exclaimed the boastful one. The money was accordingly put up with a stakeholder, and then the boastful drummer asked: "Now, what is your firm's line of goods?"

"Baby carriages," murmured the quiet man as he took the money and made for the side door.—Exchange.

SYNOPSIS.

Richard Derring, returning from a winter in the woods to his mother's farm home, is overtaken by his uncle, accompanied by his eccentric wife, coming to pay a visit at the farm. Aunt Jerusha's questions about Emily Hutton, supposed to be Derring's sweetheart, reveal the fact that she is to marry another. Disappointment stimulates Derring's ambition, and under the advice of Seth Kinney, a hermit of the woods, he resolves to fit himself for college. Kinney teaches him Greek and he passes his entrance examinations triumphantly, winning the approval of the professor. Four years in college obliterates the memory of Emily. Derring begins journalistic work in Chicago, where he meets Helen Gordon, an artist. Derring is promoted to art critic on his paper. Helen refuses to marry him and hamper both their careers, but they enter into a companionship compact. Helen suffers ill effects from sketching on the lake shore in January. Illness brings her into closer relationship with Richard. Derring is called home by the illness of Seth Kinney. Seth dies, leaving Derring a small fortune. Derring returns to Chicago. Helen starts on a visit to her home in the east, and is killed in a railroad accident. She leaves a message for Richard, saying: "I shall come back to you if I can. But if not—" Derring throws himself into his work to find forgetfulness. He finds peace in ministering to others with no hope of happiness for himself. For ten years Derring continues this work.

CHAPTER XIX—Continued

For the dilettante philanthropists who posed amid the picturesque squalor of the slums he had only the keenest shaft of ridicule. It was his insight that made those who were taking up the work in earnest seek his advice. While he had not gone into it in person, he was cognizant of every step taken, and often, by his shrewd counsel, balanced the sentimentality of over-enthusiasm.

The young men were waiting to consult him as to the best way of dealing with a pair of philanthropic cranks who persisted in thrusting themselves into the work and who, by their obtuseness, were undoing the best results of the past year. While waiting for Derring and discussing the situation, they had drifted into talking of his fitness for the work and of the strange delicacy that kept him from it.

"He stands ready enough to help any of us fellows that come to him. But I suppose that's just it—these people don't get in his way and we do. Lucky for me, I did!"

A laugh rippled the undercurrent of the speaker's words. He was seated in an office-chair, his hat thrust back, a shock of reddish-brown hair rising straight above the broad white forehead. He looked as if he might be the driver of an express cart or of any vehicle that rumbled and rattled. In reality, he was an artist of much promise. His sketches had in them depth of sentiment that gave even greater promise than their technique. Three years ago no one had believed that he would ever be anything more than a dabbler in art. He had had plenty of money and was leading a free, devil-may-care life, sowing to the wind and complacently looking forward to the whirlwind. Now his success was spoken of as a thing assured. He had, as he put it, "got in Derring's way," and, once there, he had found surrender easier than escape.

"For Your Philanthropic Cranks," Said Derring.

"I wonder," he went on, thoughtfully, "what it is about him that holds you so? He doesn't seem to do anything in particular. But somehow after you once know him you can't get along without him."

His companion sat lost in thought. "I think it is because Derring needs us," he said at last.

"Needs us?"

"Yes. I never knew a man that needed people as he does. He gives himself and never asks. But a love like that must carry with it a need. If Derring so much as lays his hand on my arm, I feel a power between us—a sort of spiritual magnetism that I can no more resist than I can resist my own heart. It somehow asks as well as gives."

"Oh, well, Conway, you're a poet. You can't expect a mere artist like me to understand anything that can't be put into black and white. But he's good enough for me."

"For your philanthropic cranks," said Derring as they laid the case before him, "you must have an organization."

They protested in one breath.

"I know. You think that as soon as a movement has taken on organization it has lost its vitality. That is a mistaken view of the case, my young friends. Organizations were invented to give employment to cranks. You must make offices and put them in. They will have so much to do running the offices that they will let "the poor" alone for awhile. When a movement is well under way it must have an organization as a life-preserver."

"I suppose it must," said the artist with a sigh. "Can you help us about the constitution if we come around to-morrow?"

"Come to my room at ten. I'll be free then."

They rose to go. But the poet lingered a minute.

Derring looked at him inquiringly.

"It's nothing," he said, smiling, "I was only wondering if I might come a little early?"

"To-night?"

"There's something I want to ask you about—if I may."

"Of course. Come—" He paused. "I was going to take a walk beforehand," he said. "Why couldn't you—"

"Meet you?"

"At the breakwater—yes. At nine-thirty."

The poet's face lighted. "I will be there. It's something I can't decide for myself—"

"Then don't expect me to."

"No. You will help me to see it. I am not sure of myself.

CHAPTER XX.

The night was warm, but a breeze came from the lake, fitfully. It greeted Derring as he opened the door of his room after dinner.

Groping his way to the droplight on his desk, he had a sense, as he went, of displacing, in the darkness, other forms and personalities. He often felt it in coming into a vacant room—always if the room was dark or half lighted—that sense of other forms giving way to his, retreating, gliding past, with noiseless being. Always for a minute they jostled him, as if unable to escape. Then, in a breath, his presence filled the room—to the furthest living corner. There was no one there.

He found the droplight and reached for a match. The breeze stirred again and blew against the hand that held the match to the droplight. He shaded it with his other hand, and the light flared up into his tired face. His eyes smiled absently. He was thinking of the poet and his troubles.

Derring had more than half guessed them. He had been revolving in his mind all day what he should say to him. The woman was a strange creature. Derring had studied her face the night before at the play. It was heavy, with deep lines, but there was something fine in the eyes. He recalled them now—wistful and magnetic.

He pushed back the papers on his desk with a little sigh. Why should they come to him with their troubles? He was strangely tired. But with it all, underneath, beat a sense of coming release. Groping for it, as he seated himself at the desk, he took up his pen and threw off the depression with an effort. He was only tired. He would go away next week for a rest. Meantime— Reaching for a sheet of paper he began to write.

He wrote rapidly, referring now and then to the letters he had pushed aside, sealing each note as it was finished and laying it on the pile at hand. When the last one was done, he ran over the scattered letters before him, filing some for reference, tearing others across and throwing them into the waste-basket.

He looked at his watch—nine o'clock—half an hour yet. Rising he stretched himself and looked about the room. He moved to the window. It was a moonlight night and shadows hung luminous everywhere, irradiating bricks and tiles and trees. From a tower near by the clock sounded, spreading sonorously in the still air. The curtain swayed a little in the breeze and he looped it back. Returning to his desk and moving the droplight to the table he drew a big chair beside it. He searched among the books on the table and took up a volume of poems.

The poems were Conway's. He had seen most of them before—in manuscript. But he wanted to read them again. He had not decided what to say to his visitor. The room was very still. Something burred at the screen, tapping it with light touches—a June bug, perhaps. Derring paid no heed. He was absorbed in the page before him. The light fluttered a little and he looked up impatiently. He turned it down, glancing towards the open window. He took up the book again. But the poems had lost their hold. His eye was on the page, but about him, around him, something stirred. He raised his eyes slowly, looking towards the window. Against the screen, faint against the moonlight, he saw it—her face—smiling to him, the eyes shining mistily. He half rose, stretching out his hands to her. He sank back. The face was gone. But her voice, softly, was speaking to him through the distance: "You are coming—coming—coming—"

With a quick exclamation he turned. The light at his side had gone out. The room lay in darkness. He stared before him. She was not there. No one was there. It was the common prosaic darkness of a June night.

CHAPTER XXI.

Derring had found Conway waiting for him at the breakwater. They paced up and down, watching the path of light across the water.

The poet broke the silence. "You don't know her." The tone was defensive.

Derring smiled a little. "Tell me."

The poet waited. He threw out his hand with a quick gesture. "She is everything! When I am with her, I can think—feel—be. I am fluid. She makes me free."

When he paused the water, lapping at the breakwater, sounded softly. The moonlight lay about them.

Derring's face, in the light, held a rapt look. "That is love," he said.

The other looked at him. "You mean it is really in me—that she—Lucille—gives nothing?" His hand made the quick gesture again. "You don't understand."

"Tell me," said Derring.

"She makes me see things—not what she says. She doesn't say poetical things—"

"Or do them?" suggested Derring.

The poet gave a short laugh. "She has an athletic school for girls—a training-school. I think that's really what they object to," he added—"my friends."

"Do they?"

"Everyone—unless it's you."

"No—I don't object."

The poet turned to him eagerly. "You have seen her?"

"The other night—at the play."

"She is glorious!" His eyes questioned Derring's face.

"Perhaps. She reminded me of someone—"

"I know—George Sand?"

"Yes."

"She is like her."

"Yes."

There was a long silence between them. The breeze from the lake had freshened. Little ripples scudded in the moonlight. Faint clouds drifted above them.

"I should not mind being Chopin," said the poet. His eyes were on the lake.

"No."

"He had his life. His heart was freed."

"Yes—and broke."

"I know. I can't say it—yet. But somehow I feel it. He had all that life could give—even death—because of love."

"And because he held it," said Derring.

The other started. "You advise me—"

Derring shook his head, smiling. "Don't put it on me. You know—better than I can. I only know that without love there is nothing. It is what life means—love—great or small. Out of the heart of it we came and to it we shall return. The heart must love if it would live. If a man turns from it, puts it away, is afraid of it—loses it—" He stopped suddenly. A picture of the wood-road flashed before him and Seth Olney's bent figure, short and stolid. That was what had happened to Seth. He had shut his heart. He ceased to live.

In a few words Derring sketched the story of Seth's life. "That's what I mean," he said. "He let love go. His life shriveled."

The poet's eyes glowed. "I shall hold it," he said, quietly, "and if she fails me—"

"You will still have love."

"Yes."

"You will love some one—something—"

"Like Shelley?" The poet stole a smile at him, half-humorous.

"Like Shelley, if you will," said Derring, "or like Dante. The true sip and the fickle drink at the same spring. All that is good in Shelley came from his fickleness. It is the soul that is dissolved—freed by love—that makes glad the world. When love goes, the soul grows hard, compact—useless—except to fight with."

"Except to fight with?" said the poet. "I am no fighter."

They had turned again and were walking to the north. Clouds obscured the moon. The dusk was faintly luminous. Far up the distant road a pair of crimson eyes glowed through it, from an approaching vehicle.

With one accord they turned to watch the lake. A summer storm was gathering. Lightning played here and there, in open flashes, on the dark water. Deep mutters of thunder followed it challengingly. The wind had lulled. A silence held the air, fluttering with light. Upon it, in the distance, sounded the faint purr of the crimson-eyed vehicle. It resolved itself into the puffing approach of an automobile. For a moment the moon strove to reassert itself. A silver shimmer came in the darkness. The striking of the clock boomed through it. They counted the strokes.

"Ten o'clock," said Derring. "They will be waiting for us."

"Just a minute," pleaded the poet.

The hush of darkness gathered itself. Through it sounded swift, whirring puffs of the automobile—louder and nearer—with hurrying, clanging bell.

Derring glanced over his shoulder. They were racing with the storm.

He Lay, Face Down.

Then he saw. The thing was past control—rushing upon them madly. It had left the roadway. It whirred swiftly. The face of the chauffeur glared, fixed and white. With a swift turn of his arm Derring seized the poet. He thrust him—straight across the path of the thing—out of danger. He lay, face down, his arms still outspread to save his friend.

The rain fell in torrents when they lifted him. It fell on his upturned face and relaxed hands. The face, beneath the rain, was strangely sweet, as if a hand of love had touched it.

THE END.

A Promise.

"Pa."

"What is it, my child?"

"When Sis marries that lord, will I have to call her 'your ladyship?'"

"It will not be necessary for you to do so, but it will be very nice if you care to."

"All right. Mebby I won't always do it, but I'll promise not to call her 'punkin-face' any more, anyhow."—Chicago Record-Herald.

PUBLIC SCHOOL AGRICULTURE

This is the latest subject to be added to the school curriculum. General lessons are being taught in many schools of the county and in 1912 and thereafter all teachers of the public schools will be required to pass an examination in Agriculture.

For generations farming has been a neglected calling; few people stayed on a farm who could manage to get away, very few of these made anything more than a bare existence, and fewer still gave any study to the subject.

The farming interests will ever be the backbone of this country. As for the farmers themselves, they have refused to take seriously to the school-made agriculturalist, and his articles and theories in print were a standing joke among them. Even the work of our federal department of agriculture was until recently the butt alike of farmers and funny newspapers. The laugh is now on those who retained the delusion that there is nothing agriculturally new under the sun. There seems to be now a very gold-seeker's rush for new things in every branch of farming.

The idea of teaching Agriculture in our schools and colleges appeared so ridiculous that for a long time the very absurdity of it blocked progress. It now remains to be seen whether or not our great publics hools, on which we spend one-third of a billion dollars a year, are going to respond to the new demands as they should. In many sections they are showing signs of rising to the situation.

Hitherto the idea has been that boys and girls were sent to school to learn things out of books—books only books—but it is fast making itself evident that much of this is incidental and not essential.

The essentials are the practical things, and chief among the practical things is agriculture. Farmers' Institutes have been directing the farmers' attention to the raising of corn and the reason for placing so much emphasis to this subject is because "Corn is King in Iowa." Our country is next to South Africa as a gold producer, yet our annual output of gold would only pay for the milk product alone of such leading states as New York and Wisconsin. The entire gold output of the world would not pay for our hay or cotton crop, and for only about a third of our corn crop. Much has been said from time to time through the newspapers of the careful testing of seed corn this year as the seed which is to be planted this year appears to be the worst that Iowa has had for many years. I will attempt to say but very little about the seed as it would only be repeating what others have said, but when we consider nine million acres, over one-fourth the entire acreage of Iowa, planted to corn and requiring 1,300,000 bushels of seed, then we can understand something of the importance of good seed.

We cannot overestimate the importance of paying the closest attention to seed, as its vitality, adaptability to the soil, and climate all exercise a great influence on the yield; to increase the yield we must do something to increase the stand, and to increase the stand each individual ear must be TESTED for each poor ear planted will reduce your per cent of stand about 7 or 8 per cent on an acre as about 15 ears plants an acre.

In conclusion let me mention some of the things that will interest the boy or girl and by the teaching them in our schools it may be the means of keeping the boy or the girl on the farm. One thing that will be of interest is the soil; the different kinds, the elements of the soil and the plants that feed upon them; the meaning of exhausted soil, a study of the differcereals and conditions favorable to their growth; supply and demand of farm products; testing of seed corn; figuring per cent of stand of corn in the field and a study of the useful as well as the harmful insects.

The chance for agricultural expansion in this country is unlimited and surely the public schools must assume a large share in this work of exalting the science of farming into its proper position.

The farmers of a few years hence are being moulded by our schools of today, and teachers, school authorities, parents and all must co-operate in so shaping the public school education that it shall come up to the highest requirements. Respectfully,

L. E. BOWKER.

You are very cordially invited to attend a basket social at the school house in District No. 9, on Friday evening, February 25th. Come and enjoy a social evening. Ladies please bring baskets. Nettie Griffen, Teacher.

Fought to Retain Formula Which Has Made a Fortune

L. T. Cooper, the man who believes that 90 per cent. of all ill health of this generation is caused by stomach trouble, is fast winning a national faith in his theory. His claim is now admitted by a surprising number of people throughout the country, and he is gaining new adherents every day.

While speaking of his success in a recent interview, Mr. Cooper said: "I believed ten years ago that any one who could produce a formula that would thoroughly regulate the stomach would have a fortune. When I got hold of this formula I knew within six months that I was right, and that my fortune was made. I called the medicine Cooper's New Discovery, although I did not get up the formula. I have owned it, however, for over five years. I have had one lawsuit over it, which I won in the courts. When it was settled The Cooper Medicine Company became the only firm in the world that can prepare the medicine. The preparation has sold like wildfire wherever introduced. As I have said before, it is successful simply because it puts the stomach in perfect shape, then nature does the rest. There are any number of complaints never before associated with stomach trouble that the medicine has alleviated in thousands of cases."

Among statements obtained recently from users of this medicine that is arousing such universal discussion is one from Mrs. Emma Stanley, living in Chicago, at 713 Washington Boulevard, who said: "Perhaps I had the most complicated case that Mr. Cooper had to deal with. I was troubled for years with my stomach. I consulted with doctors and took many patent medicine preparations without result. My stomach was in such a wretched shape that I could not enjoy a meal that I ate.

"I was very nervous, and could hardly sleep. I had a roaring in my ears and dancing spots before my eyes. I felt very bad and weak. Then there was a very sore spot at the pit of my stomach that nearly set me wild.

"I heard about the Cooper medicine and decided to try it. I used four bottles, and the improvement in my case has been really wonderful. My nerves have been quieted, and I am so much improved that I feel like a new woman.

"I cannot say too much for these wonderful remedies, for they have made me well."

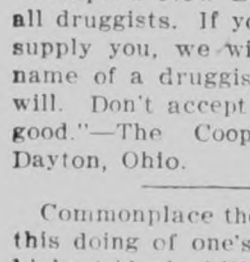
Cooper's New Discovery is sold by all druggists. If your druggist cannot supply you, we will forward you the name of a druggist in your city who will. Don't accept "something just as good."—The Cooper Medicine Co., Dayton, Ohio.

Commonplace though it may appear, this doing of one's duty embodies the highest ideal of life.—Smiles.

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. Ford, 2207 W. Franklin St., Baltimore, Md.



The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and to-day is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.

CONTROL DISEASE

Farmers Can Help in Eradicating Tuberculosis, Says Dr. McLeod.

SHOULD REPORT ALL CASES

Points Out Needs of Liberal Education at Meeting of Veterinarians —Association Elects New Officers.

Des Moines, Feb. 21.—"A more liberal education of the farmers will help greatly in the work of controlling tuberculosis," declared Dr. J. H. McLeod before the State Veterinary association convention. "Few of them know that a large part of the value of their animals can be saved, even though they are infected. If they knew it they would be more ready to report cases."

G. M. Walrod gave an account of an unusual case, that of a horse affected by tuberculosis. S. Beattie discussed an epidemic of pneumonia among the sheep of the state, and George Judish of Ames advocated the use of higher standard drugs by veterinarians, saying that many of the medicines sold to them are of low grade. New methods of detecting adulterated milk and of discovering impurities in butter were demonstrated and discussed by Professor Chitteck of Ames.

Prof. S. S. Stewart, dean of the Kansas City Veterinary college, and one of the organizers of the Iowa Veterinary association in 1886, was the toastmaster at the banquet. Phil Kell gave a talk on "The Evolution of a Horse," and D. M. Campbell of Topeka, Kan., on "Journalism." R. P. Lyman of Kansas City, secretary of the National Veterinary association, gave a talk on the growth and work of the organization. Prof. L. H. Pammell of Ames gave a talk about entrance requirements to veterinary colleges, urging that they be made higher, and Hon. H. B. Bauman gave a talk on "Legislation."

New officers of the association are: F. H. Nieman of Marshalltown, president; H. B. Treman of Rockwell City, first vice president; G. M. Walrod of Storm Lake, second vice president; H. C. Simpson, secretary and treasurer. New members of the board of directors are Dr. R. R. Dykstra of Ames and Dr. A. E. Bauman of Fort Dodge.

Des Moines was chosen as the meeting place of the convention next year.

Gift of Lincoln Picture.

Mason City.—Mrs. Della R. Henry of Kansas City, Mo., national president of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic presented the Sons of Veterans Memorial university a life size St. Gaudens' portrait of Abraham Lincoln. The presentation was a feature of the exercises held in celebration of Lincoln's birthday at Mason City.

"I present this portrait," she said, "in the name of 50,000 women of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic who are bound by the ties f blood and marriage to the noble men who went forth at the call of Lincoln to battle for the union in the great struggle from '61 to '65."

"May this day," said she, "mark an epoch in your school and from this time forth may the face of this most wonderful man, the gentlest character in all history, as it looks down upon you, inspire you to higher ideals and instill into your lives a greater pride that you are citizens of this great republic.

"We do not offer this picture as a mere decoration for your walls but as a lesson in patriotism. The real wealth of a nation lies in the character and achievement of her great men and there stands at the head of this great host the name of Abraham Lincoln."

Muscatine.—Judge William F. Brannan, perhaps the best known of old Iowa jurists, passed away at his home here, following an illness of some duration. He had been in an unconscious state for several days.

Nickson Gets Postoffice.

Prairie City.—The appointment of T. W. Nickson as postmaster here to succeed John Mummert ends a most unusual contest which was not without a tinge of romance. Postmaster Mummert announced some time ago that he would not be a candidate for reappointment, the friends of Nickson set to work to secure the indorsement of Congressman Kendall for him. Meantime, Nickson's son married Mummert's daughter, and a campaign was started to make her postmistress in place of her father. There was no other candidates, and so the issue was a clean cut one between father-in-law and the daughter-in-law Young Nickson, who is employed as a salesman in one of the stores, it is said occupied a position of strict neutrality throughout the campaign.

Winning Schools Named.

Oskaloosa.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the State Oratorical association held here the eight schools whose representatives will take part in the final contest at Cedar Rapids on the evening of March 4 were ranked from the judges' decisions on thought and composition. The eight schools to be represented are Leander Clark of Toledo, Upper Iowa University at Fayette, Iowa Wesleyan of Mount Pleasant, Penn College of Oskaloosa, Cornell College of Mount Vernon, Morningside College of Sioux City and Tabor College of Tabor.

Ransom, G. K. Allen, C. H. Brown, W. F. Coon.

Lost Fourteen Steers.

Sidney.—Walter Liggett, residing southeast of town, has lost fourteen head of steers, two year olds. The disease which resembles the "mad itch" affects the brain, and was caused, so Dr. Parslow, assistant state veterinarian of Clarinda, states, by being kept in a lot in which was a shed that was in a filthy condition from allowing manure to remain there for several years.

Baby Born on the Train.

Waterloo.—A baby boy was born to Mrs. John Hanley of La Crosse, Wis., on the Illinois Central passenger train between Waterloo and Raymond. She was coming here to join her husband who is a printer. A doctor on the train attended her and when the train arrived she and her son were taken to the hospital in an ambulance.

Parsons to Get $100,000.

Fairfield.—Gen. Lewis B. Parsons, son of the founder of Parsons' college here, has given his entire estate to the college. The document has just been filed in probate here and makes provisions so that the entire estate will in time pass into the hands of the college. The estate is valued at about $100,000.

Disrobes in Open Court.

Mason City.—The jury in the case of August Bruns against the Nortn Iowa Brick and Tile company awarded the plaintiff $8,700 for injuries received when he was buried under an avalanche in a clay pit. He won his case by being stripped naked in open court. Congressman Wade of Iowa City was his attorney.

Daughter's Fate Causes Death.

Creston.—Nelson Quick is dead at the Clarinda asylum as a result of the tragic death of his little daughter a year ago. She burned to death when the family lived at Kent. Her sad fate so worked upon the father's mind that he was driven insane and sent to an asylum. The wife and one child are here.

Ottumwa to Have Murder Trial.

Does He Love Anybody?

Von Moltke had some few human failings. He loved his wife devotedly, but conquered his alma mater, Denmark, even after she had educated him for the military service out of her poor, stingy pocket. But Kitchener is a machine man only. He loves neither man nor woman. His spear has never known a brother, as its sharp point has hewn asunder the bodies and souls of the sons of women.—Boston Post.

Not Actually Necessary.

The lawyer proceeded to examine the witness.

"Pardon the question, Mrs. Chucksley," he said, "but your answer constitutes a part of the record. How old are you?"

"Why you ought to know, Mr. Sharpe," she answered; "my birthday is the same as yours, only I was born ten years later than you were."

"Ah, yes, I remember. Well, it isn't important, anyhow. Go ahead, Mrs. Chucksley, and tell the jury what you know about this case."

Some Luxuries Needed.

Those stern economists who are pointing out that the people of small means ought to abandon "luxuries." forget that even such people have a moral right to something beyond the bare necessities of life. The rapid increase in prices does not mean to them cutting out more extravagances, but forgetting the modest recreations which have brightened for them the dull round of daily labor. It would be a hard world indeed where one could obtain just enough to keep body and soul together, and no more.—Providence Journal.

THE STORY OF THE PEANUT SHELLS.

As everyone knows, C. W. Post of Battle Creek, Michigan, is not only a maker of breakfast foods, but he is a strong individual who believes that the trades-unions are a menace to the liberty of the country.

Believing this, and being a "natural-born" scrapper for the right, as he sees it, Post, for several years past, has been engaged in a ceaseless warfare against "The Labor Trust," as he likes to call it.

Not being able to secure free and untrammeled expression of his opinions on this subject through the regular reading pages of the newspapers he has bought advertising space for this purpose, just as he is accustomed to for the telling of his Postum "story," and he has thus spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in denouncing trades-unionism.

As a result of Post's activities the people now know a whole lot about these organizations: how they are honeycombed with graft, how they obstruct the development of legitimate business, curtail labor's output, hold up manufacturers, graft upon their own membership, and rob the public. Naturally Post is hated by the trades-unionists, and intensely.

He employs no union labor, so they can not call out his men, and he defies their efforts at boycotting his products. The latest means of "getting" Post is the widespread publication of the story that a car which was recently wrecked in transmission was found to be loaded with empty peanut shells, which were being shipped from the south to Post's establishment at Battle Creek.

This canard probably originated with President John Fitzgerald of the Chicago Federation of Labor, who, it is said, stated it publicly, as truth.

Post comes back and gives Fitzgerald the lie direct. He denounces Fitzgerald's statement as a deliberate falsehood, an underhanded and cowardly attempt to injure his business, having not the slightest basis in fact. As such an effort it must be regarded. It is significant that this statement about "the peanut shells" is being given wide newspaper publicity. In the "patent inside" of an eastern country paper I find it, and the inference naturally is that labor-unionites are insidiously spreading this lie.

An institution (or a man) which will resort to moral intimidation and to physical force, that will destroy machinery and burn buildings, that will maim and kill if necessary to effect its ends, naturally would not hesitate to spread falsehood for the same purposes.

We admire Post. While we have no enmity toward labor unions, so long as they are conducted in an honest, "live-and-let-live" kind of a way, we have had enough of the tarred end of the stick to sympathize thoroughly with what he is trying to do. He deserves support. A man like Post can not be killed, even with lies. They are a boomerang; every time. Again, we know, for hasn't this weapon, every weapon that could be thought of, been used (and not simply by labor unions) to put us out of business, too?

I am going to drink two cups of Postum every morning from this time on, and put myself on a diet of Grape-Nuts. Bully for Post!—Editorial in The American Journal of Clinical Medicine.

How often do you eat this food?

A short time ago there appeared in the columns of one of the prominent magazines an article on building brain and muscle by the proper selection of the foods you eat.

A good many people were surprised to find oatmeal placed at the top of the list of foods recommended; but if the article had appeared in an English or Scotch paper every reader would have expected to see first place given to good oatmeal.

As a matter of fact Great Britain and Europe come to us for tremendous quantities of Quaker Oats because it represents to them perfect food, being the richest in flavor and best in cleanliness and purity, of all oatmeals.

Americans should eat more Quaker Oats; the results would soon show themselves in improved conditions of health and strength.

LUTHERANS TO MEET

Will Convene in Des Moines on Tuesday, Feb. 22.

GOVERNOR CARROLL TO SPEAK

Many of the Most Important Questions of the Day Are to Be Discussed by Delegates to 42d Annual Convention.

Des Moines, Feb. 19.—The Iowa conference of the Swedish Lutheran Church of America will hold its forty-second annual convention February 22 to 27 in the Swedish Lutheran church, East Fifth and Des Moines streets.

The convention will begin February 22, Washington's birthday, with devotional services in the evening and an address by the president of the conference, the Rt. Rev. Joseph A. Anderson of Boone. Governor Carroll will address the convention on Wednesday, the 23d, at 10 o'clock a. m. Questions of great import will be discussed and decided upon at this convention, among these, the state hospital question is one of the most important. A state hospital will, beyond all doubt, be founded. On Monday next the committee in charge of the hospital work in the conference will meet and prepare resolutions to be presented before the conference for its consideration. There is no question that the hospital question will be the most debated of all questions before the conference. There are other cities which are willing to extend a glad hand to a Lutheran state hospital. Two of Sioux City's wealthiest and most influential business men will attend the conference, and together with the two strong Swedish Lutheran congregations and the pastors at that place, they will endeavor to direct the current to Sioux City.

Through the Swedish Lutheran pastor at Fort Dodge that city offered a bonus of $30,000 for a state hospital there. However, it was not considered, as Fort Dodge is neither a large city nor a very strong Swedish center. At the convention held in Burlington a year ago, Rev. Mr. Westerberg worked hard to get the convention at Des Moines this year. By getting the convention to Des Moines it was thought that it would be easier to get the hospital located in the capital city.

Another question of vital importance will be that of organizing English churches within the conference. The young people of the conference are requesting that English churches be organized for them, as the old churches have as yet their greatest future in the Swedish field on account of the steady immigration.

SALOONIST SHOOTS HOLD-UP

C. A. Burright Answers "Hands-Up" Demand by Dropping Behind Counter and Firing.

Council Bluffs, Ia., Feb. 9.—After an unsuccessful attempt to hold up the night operator at the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul depot, a man giving the name of Clarence Nixon, went to the saloon of C. A. Burright, who was alone at the time. When Burright saw the bandit's gun he dropped behind the bar and began shooting through a loophole.

Two shots brough the hold-up man to the floor with a wound in the arm and a serious one in the hip.

The police were summoned and the man was taken to a hospital. He is said to answer fully the description of the man who held up a saloon here on January 29, and the night operator at the Rock Island depot February 3.

The wounded man says his sister, Mrs. Bertha Metzager, lives at Clinton Ia. Though seriously wounded, it is thought he will recover.

We Will Pay You $500 in Gold To Name Our New Corn

Shakespeare says there is nothing in a name, but John A. Salzer says A GOOD NAME IS WORTH A FORTUNE. He backs up his statement by offering you $500.00 in gold to name his wonderful, long-kerneled corn, pictured in life size at the left on this page.

A prominent Agricultural Expert, on seeing this new corn, exclaimed:

"Salzer, you have startled the Agricultural World in discovering this most remarkable breed of corn!"

Indeed, it is the most remarkable corn ever seen by mortal eye.

But not a bushel of it is for sale. For there is not one-tenth enough in existence to fill the tremendous orders that will pour in when this new corn goes on the market.

Next year we may have enough to sell. Right now the best anybody can do is to obtain a sample package—enough to grow ½ bushel of seed for 1911. You are mighty welcome to a sample. Please send 8c in stamps to pay mailing charges.

* * * * *

The thing that puzzles us is, WHAT ARE WE GOING TO NAME OUR NAMELESS CORN?

Mr. Salzer will not be content with anything but a slashing, smashing good name. So he offers $500 in gold to the seed-buyer who hits upon the most suitable name.

We want you, reader, to help us out. Name this corn, won't you? It does not cost a penny to use the corn-naming coupon below. Fill it out, send it to-night and be a candidate for the $500 cash prize.

THE JUDGES

We are fortunate in securing three of the most capable and prominent men in Wisconsin to sit as Judges in our big corn-naming contest. They are Prof. R. A. Moore, Wisconsin State Agricultural College; Hon. J. J. Esch, Congressman from Wisconsin; Hon. Robt. Calvert, U. S. Customs, La Crosse.

These eminent men will weigh carefully the name you suggest, and, if it is most suitable, you will get the $500 prize. No matter who you are or where you live, you will be given a fair, square opportunity to land the money.

Fill out the free corn-naming coupon with pencil or pen as you please, but be sure to give your complete home address.

Read what the Department of Agriculture says.
(From Farmers Bulletin No. 236)

"The incubator is an important factor in poultry raising. It a success: it has come to stay; and the time is not far distant hen it will be as necessary on every farm as the plow, the mower the separator. The purchaser of an inferior machine, failing to cure good results, sets aside his incubator and informs his neighbors that artificial incubation is a failure. The purchaser of a good achine—one properly made and adapted to its work—is so apt to pleased with his success that he encourages his friends and ighbors to undertake raising chickens with incubators."

The Cyphers Guaranty:

KEEP BABY'S SKIN CLEAR

Few parents realize how many estimable lives have been embittered and social and business success prevented by serious skin affections which so often result from the neglect of minor eruptions in infancy and childhood. With but a little care and the use of the proper emollients, baby's skin and hair may be preserved, purified and beautified, minor eruptions prevented from becoming chronic and torturing, disfiguring rashes, itchings, irritations and chafings dispelled.

To this end, nothing is so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective as the constant use of Cuticura Soap, assisted, when necessary, by Cuticura Ointment. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole proprietors, Boston, for their free 32-page Cuticura Book telling all about the care and treatment of the skin.

Meaning of Cemetery.

It is not correct to say that "cemetery" means the "city of the dead." The word is from the Greek "Koimeterion," meaning sleeping place, not the place of the dead. There is nothing in the thinking that it was originally intended to convey the idea that the departed were really dead any more than there is in the old Hebrew term for cemetery—"Bethaim"—the house of the living.

INCUBATOR COMEDY.

There is one cut in the New Klondike Incubator Co.'s catalogue that is a little funny. An old hen who has been given a flock of young ducks to take care of that were hatched in the Klondike Incubator, appearing with the ducks before the male head of the flock, causes him to think he has been deceived, and he is represented as telling her so. The old hen is in tears, for she cannot tell him how it all happened. The attitude of the ducks would indicate that they did not care whether he was deceived or not. The Klondike Incubators and Brooders are made in Des Moines. The Co. will send you a catalogue if you ask for it.

WHEN YOUR BACK ACHES SUSPECT THE KIDNEYS.

Backache is kidney ache, in most cases. The kidneys ache and throb with dull pain because there is inflammation within. You can't be rid of the ache until you cure the cause—the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys. G. S. Warren, 1517 No. 7th St., Boise, Idaho, says: "An injury to my back years ago left me lame. I had to use a cane, and it hurt me terribly to stoop or lift. The kidney secretions passed too frequently. For five years since I was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills, I have had no return of the trouble."

SOME REASON IN OBJECTION

Scottish Kilt Doubtless a Reasonable and Convenient Garment, But Not for All Occasions.

"At a dinner at Claridge's, the smartest hotel in London," said, with no little pride a Chicagoan, "I sat beside young Rhinelander Stewart, Anita Stewart's brother, you know. Anita Stewart married Don Miguel of Braganza.

"I joked Rhinelander a bit on the kilt that he wore at his sister's Scottish wedding. He took my joking in good part. He said the kilt was a fine, conventional dress, and till recently he had thought it suitable everywhere and for all purposes.

"Recently, though, he suggested that the house servants in Tulloch castle should wear as livery the Stewart kilt; but the major domo objected.

"'Now,' said Mr. Stewart, what is your objection?'

"'Aweel, sir,' the major domo answered, 'a man canna clean upstairs windows in a kilt, noo, can he?'"—Exchange.

Nor on a Half-Dime, Either.

Simon Hardcastle believed with sincere faith that any wife who had, or asked, more than a quarter a year for her own amusement or enjoyment was a being too horrible to contemplate. He came from the village store for dinner and told what he had heard.

"Miranda, would you believe that the Lord's prayer could be engraved in a space no larger than a dime?"

"Well, yes, Simon," she hazarded, "If a dime is as large in the engraver's eyes as it is in yours, I should think that he would have no difficulty at all."—The Housekeeper.

Comparison Shunned.

SHE QUIT
But It Was a Hard Pull.

It is hard to believe that coffee will put a person in such a condition as it did an Ohio woman. She tells her own story:

"I did not believe coffee caused my trouble, and frequently said I liked it so well I would not, and could not quit drinking it, but I was a miserable sufferer from heart trouble and nervous prostration for four years.

"I was scarcely able to be around, had no energy and did not care for anything. Was emaciated and had a constant pain around my heart until I thought I could not endure it. For months I never went to bed excepting to get up in the morning. I felt as though I was liable to die any time.

"Frequently I had nervous chills and the least excitement would drive sleep away, and any little noise would upset me terribly. I was gradually getting worse until finally one time it came over me and I asked myself what's the use of being sick all the time and buying medicine so that I could indulge myself in coffee?

"So I thought I would see if I could quit drinking coffee and got some Postum to help me quit. I made it strictly according to directions and I want to tell you, that change was the greatest step in my life. It was easy to quit coffee because I had the Postum which I now like better than the old coffee.

"One by one the old troubles left, until now I am in splendid health, nerves steady, heart all right and the pain all gone. Never have any more nervous chills, don't take any medicine, can do all my housework, and have done a great deal beside."

DEATH LIST IN 1909

Tuberculosis Claimed 3,000 Victims During the Year.

KEPFORD'S MONTHLY REPORT

State Lecturer Says It Is Worse Than Folly for Intelligent People to Permit Tuberculosis to Destroy Such Vast Number.

Des Moines, Feb. 19.—State Tuberculosis Lecturer A. E. Kepford has issued his regular monthly report touching on the situation in this state.

He calls attention to the fact that the dread disease is still reaping its harvest in this state and that within the past year 3,000 persons have succumbed to it, this being he says, a conservative estimate. His letter follows:

"The report of the state board of health concerning the number of deaths from tuberculosis is startling. There were 1,515 persons reported to have died from tuberculosis last year. If 1,515 were the whole number it would be bad enough, but it is believed by those in a position to know that this number can be multiplied by two, thus making more than 3,000 persons who died in Iowa last year from a preventable disease. And it would be interesting, indeed, were it possible to make an analysis of these deaths. We would find no age or condition had been spared, and that while tuberculosis is a disease of the poor, yet the rich had not escaped. We would find young mothers smitten in the midst of cooing babyhood and playing child; the wage earner, the man who does the heavy work has been destroyed; the minister, lawyer, doctor, banker, farmer, editor, in fact every profession and trade has been compelled to walk the great white way to death. What awful havoc! What needless waste of human life! What tragedy of sorrow! What a cause of crime! What problems for charity! What financial loss!

"If the economic aspect alone were to be urged as a reason for the abolition of tuberculosis it would be sufficient as the loss to Iowa last year approximated more than $5,000,000. The large number of these persons who died were young, just at the highest point of efficiency and greatest value to the state and the financial loss involved is appalling indeed. This disease reaps the largest harvest of all contagious and infectious diseases put together with possibly the exception of pneumonia and we have come to the time when the people must act.

"It is worse than folly for intelligent people such as compose the citizenship of Iowa to permit tuberculosis to destroy untimely this vast number.

"Let the people read the startling figures given here. Let them think of what the future must hold for many children, then let the children be taken care of and society protected by restrictive measures.

Good Roads Program Issued.

The program for the state good roads convention to be held March 8 and 9 in Des Moines has been issued.

T. H. Grubb, deputy in Colonel Bousquet's office, retires March 1. It is likely the deputyship will be abolished, converting $1,800 per year additional to the treasury.

Find Gold Coins Near Ruins.

Members of the fire department found $100 in gold coins in the charred ruins of the upper part of the residence of Charles Landin, 1604 Twelfth street. The flames started in the attic and were of unknown origin. Before the fire department arrived the roof had been totally destroyed. Several gold coins, along with a $10 bill, were hidden in the attic. All of the gold was recovered, but the paper bill could not be found.

Reprimand and Suspension.

A public reprimand and a thirty days' suspension without pay is the punishment meted out by the city council to James Morgan, secretary of the health department for taking pay for fumigation work done at night and on Sundays. City Physician Losh was given a reprimand for failing to report to Superintendent Hamery that the health officers were charging for fumigation work.

CELLAR NEEDS CARE

POINT OF MUCH IMPORTANCE TO THE HOUSEHOLD.

Arrangement of Different Receptacles Means Much to the General Health —Dampness a Thing to Be Guarded Against.

The cellar is a part of the house likely to be overlooked by even careful housekeepers, because its dark corners and remoteness from the general living rooms naturally make it a place where trash collects and so, if not frequently cleaned, the lack of order may be felt in the upstairs portion of a dwelling.

As in other rooms in the dwelling everything must be kept in its place with as much exactness as if it were in the drawing-room. The coal should be kept in two bins—one for range and the other for furnace. A third bin for wood is worth building in, if one is not already there, as small sticks are likely to be dragged about, making an untidy floor. If big wood for open fires is used, it should be piled neatly against the wall.

There must be two barrels for trash, unless the arrangements out of doors is such that there are receptacles. One barrel is for refuse that burns and the other for tins and glass which will be carted away. Under no circumstances are the two barrels to be used alternately.

In the country one sends for and pays the man who takes what cannot be burned, and he should cart nothing that can be disposed of on the premises. The housekeeper should watch these barrels, for in emptying waste baskets and dust pans, odds and ends will spill over and may remain unless she makes frequent personal inspections.

If the cellar is used for storage of articles, such as boxes, barrels or trunks, they should be arranged completely in one section and not allowed to scatter.

Garden tools are best kept in order by hanging them on huge nails driven into the wall.

A dark cellar must be more closely inspected than one which is light, not only for dirt, but for dampness. The slightest odor from this section will be carried through the house, and mustiness and dampness are dangerous, as well as unpleasant. A wise precaution is to keep some disinfectant sprinkled about. Lime is excellent if there is dampness. When there is light and circulation of air a liquid deodorant is good, though by no means necessary.

At least one window must be kept open all the time in the cellar, and two may be if one wishes. When cold weather comes on the housekeeper must be careful that if two are open they are not opposite each other. If they are, a draught is made that will entirely prevent the furnace from sending heat upstairs.

Pineapple Marmalade.

Use ripe, sweet pines. Slice and pare. Then cut into small pieces. Allow three-fourths pound sugar to each pound fruit, mix in granite bowl and let stand over night, preferably on ice. In the morning take from ice, and cook gently for an hour. At the end of this time press through a fruit crusher or coarse sieve with a potato masher. Replace on stove and cook half an hour longer. Place in little pots.

Finnan Haddie Fish Cakes.

A new step and time saver for the busy housewife is the baked finnan haddie that now comes ready to use for fish cakes, creaming or chowder. The fish is less smoky than when it comes whole. For the cakes mix the finnan haddie par-boiled with an equal quantity of mashed potato, season with melted butter, salt and pepper, add a beaten egg and mold into cakes, then fry.

Lentil Fritters.

Cook one-fourth pound lentils with water to cover until quite soft, but not pulped. Next prepare a batter with one egg and one-fourth pound wheatmeal flour, a few drops of oil and sufficient warm water to make the right consistency. Season with chopped onion and sage, a handful of chopped parsley, pepper and salt. Add a few bread crumbs and the cooked lentils. Mash well together and let the mixture stand for an hour. Then fry crisp a spoonful at a time, and serve with apple sauce.

To Fry Salt Bacon.

The best way to prevent bacon being too salt when it is fried is to place a little water in the pan along with the bacon. Let the water come to a boil, then pour it out, and fry the bacon in the usual way. It will then not be too salt, and will also be very nice and tender.—Woman's Life.

Aunt Margaret's Fudge.

Two cups sugar, one cup English walnuts, three-fourths cup milk, one teaspoon vanilla. Cook until it threads.

WESTERN CANADA

Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, says:

"The stream of emigrants from the United States to Canada will continue."

Senator Dolliver recently paid a visit to Western Canada, and says: "There is a land hunger in the hearts of English speaking people; this will account for the removal of so many Iowa farmers to Canada. Our people are pleased with its Government and the excellent administration of law, and they are coming to you in tens of thousands, and they are still coming."

Iowa contributed largely to the 70,000 American farmers who made Canada their home during 1909. Field crop returns alone during year added to the wealth of the country upwards of $170,000,000.00

Grain growing, mixed farming, cattle raising and dairying are all profitable. Free Homesteads of 160 acres are to be had in the very best districts, 160 acre pre-emptions at $3.00 per acre within certain areas. Schools and churches in every settlement, climate unexcelled, soil the richest, wood, water and building material plentiful.

EDUCATORS ARE IN SESSION

Department of Superintendence of National Association Holding Its Annual Meeting in Indianapolis.

SENATOR A. J. BEVERIDGE ONE OF THE SPEAKERS.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 1—Educators of national prominence in public school work are here in large numbers today attending the annual meeting of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education association. The sessions, which last three days, began this morning, when the topic "Children Differ in Mental Alertness" was discussed by Leonard P. Ayres, secretary of the Russell Sage Foundation, New York; James H. Van Sicklen, superintendent of schools of Baltimore; M. P. E. Groszmann of Plainfield, N. J., and others This afternoon's topic was the difference in moral responsibility, and the speakers included Superintendents P. W. Horn of Houston, Tex.; Wantel F. Lewis of Port Huron, Mich., and H. H. Cummings of Salt Lake City, and Prof. P. P. Claxton of the University of Tennessee. A memorial meeting for the late William T. Harris followed.

This evening Senator Albert J. Beveridge will address the educators, and the local teachers will give a reception to the visitors. Stratton D. Brooks, superintendent of the Boston schools, is presiding over the meeting of the department. Several affiliated societies are also holding their annual sessions, including the Society for the Scientific Study of Education, the Society of College Teachers of Education; National Convention on Agricultural Education, the American School of Hygiene association and the Public School Physical Training association.

Convention of Iowa Hardware Men

Des Moines, Ia., March 1—The auditorium of the Coliseum was crowded this afternoon when the twelfth annual convention of the Iowa Retail Hardware association opened with music. G. H. Botsford spoke a few words of welcome on behalf of the Des Moines Commercial club and the city, and President L. C. Abbott of Marshalltown responded and made his annual address. The report of Secretary-Treasurer A. R. Sale of Mason City and other routine business consumed the rest of the session. The convention will conclude Friday afternoon. In conjunction with it a large hardware exposition has been opened and tomorrow the Iowa Hardware Mutual Insurance association will hold its yearly meeting.

THIS TELLS THE STORY.

Uncle Sam's Breakfast Food Co.,
Omaha, Neb.

Gentlemen:

After using "Uncle Sam's Breakfast Food" for the past three weeks I felt like I must write and tell you what a mistake you make in not advertising your excellent food.

It ought to be advertised in every newspaper in the country.

I can not praise it too highly for the great benefit I have derived from the use of it.

Have had stomach and bowel trouble for years, but feel now this food is going to cure me.

I recommend it to all my friends who have any stomach trouble, but some of them tell me they are not able to procure it from their grocers, say they never heard of it.

Wishing you all the success possible, I am yours respectfully,

VIRGINIA HELWIG,
Middletown, O.

We certify that the above is a true copy of the original and was not solicited.

U. S. BF. F. CO.

He Had No Objection.

"We—we want you to marry us," said the blushing young man, indicating a young woman with downcast eyes and smiling face who stood a step behind him.

"Come in," said the minister, and he endeavored to ease their embarrassment for a moment; but he soon decided that it was useless to try.

"Will you be married with a ring?" he inquired.

The young man turned a helpless gaze on his companion, and then looked at the minister.

"If you've got one to spare and it can come out o' the two dollars, I guess she'd like it," he said at last.—National Food Magazine.

Marriage.

A game of chance in which the chances are about even. The man leads at first, but after leaving the altar he usually follows breathlessly in his wife's trail. The rules are very confusing. If a masked player holds you up some night at the end of a long gun, it is called robbery, and entitles you to telephone the police, but if your wife holds you up for a much larger amount the next morning at the end of a long hug, it is termed diplomacy, and counts in her favor. In this, as in other games of life, wives are usually allowed more privileges than other outlaws.—Judge.

The Appetites of Kings.

The king of Spain makes up for his daily expenditure of activity by a tremendous appetite. I have observed, for that matter, that the majority of sovereigns are valiant trenchermen Every morning of his life Alfonso XIII. has a good rump steak and potatoes for his first breakfast, often preceded by eggs and sometimes followed by salad and fruit.—From Recollections of M. Paoli in McClure's.

Damage Done by Smoke.

Herbert M. Wilson, of the United States geological survey, places the annual damage and waste by smoke in the United States at $500,000,000 in the large cities alone, or about $6 to each man, woman and child of the population.

A GOOD CHANGE

A Change of Food Works Wonders.

The wrong food and drink causes a lot of trouble in this world. To change the food is the first duty of every person that is ill, particularly from stomach and nervous troubles. As an illustration: A lady in Mo. has, with her husband, been brought around to health again by leaving off coffee and some articles of food that did not agree with them. They began using Postum and Grape-Nuts food. She says:

"For a number of years I suffered with stomach and bowel trouble which kept getting worse unutil I was very ill most of the time. About four years ago I left off coffee and began taking Postum. My stomach and bowels improved right along, but I was so reduced in flesh and so nervous that the least thing would overcome me.

"Then I changed my food and began using Grape-Nuts in addition to Postum. I lived on these two principally for about four months. Day by day I gained in flesh and strength until now the nervous trouble has entirely disappeared and I feel that I owe my life and health to Postum and Grape-Nuts.

"Husband is 73 years old and he was troubled for a long time with occasional cramps, and slept badly. Finally I prevailed upon him to leave off coffee and take Postum. He had stood out for a long time, but after he tried Postum for a few days he found that he could sleep and that his cramps disappeared. He was satisfied and has never gone back to coffee.

"I have a brother in California who has been using Postum for several years; his whole family use it also because they have had such good results from it."

Look in pkgs. for the little book, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

INSTRUCTION IN THE SCHOOLS

Children Being Taught the Nature and Methods of Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Definite instruction concerning the nature and methods of prevention of tuberculosis is being given to less than six per cent. of the public school children of the United States, according to a bulletin of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Recent investigation has shown that in only nine cities, Washington, Dallas, Tex., Richmond, Va., Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Detroit, Mich., Malden, Mass., Salem, Mass., Saginaw, Mich., and Knoxville, Tenn., are special text books being used or lectures being given about tuberculosis. In three states and one territory, Michigan, Massachusetts, North Carolina and Porto Rico, laws have been passed requiring that instruction about the nature and methods of prevention of tuberculosis be given in all public schools. In Tennessee the state department of education has requested that such instruction be given and has issued circulars for this purpose. In New Jersey and West Virginia wall cards giving instruction are hung in every schoolroom and the attention of all children is called to them.

IN AGONY WITH ECZEMA

"No tongue can tell how I suffered for five years with itching and bleeding eczema, until I was cured by the Cuticura Remedies, and I am so grateful I want the world to know, for what helped me will help others. My body and face were covered with sores. One day it would seem to be better, and then break out again with the most terrible pain and itching. I have been sick several times, but never in my life did I experience such awful suffering as with this eczema. I had made up my mind that death was near at hand, and I longed for that time when I would be at rest. I had tried many different doctors and medicines without success, and my mother brought me the Cuticura Remedies, insisting that I try them. I began to feel better after the first bath with Cuticura Soap, and one application of Cuticura Ointment.

"I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and have taken four bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, and consider myself well. This was nine years ago and I have had no return of the trouble since. Any person having any doubt about this wonderful cure by the Cuticura Remedies can write to my address. Mrs. Altie Etson, 93 Inn Road, Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 16, 1909."

Opera the Great Leveler.

At one of the Wagner operas a few days ago a woman nudged her friend and said: "Who is that distinguished man bowing to you over there?" Her friend looked in the direction designated and smiled in a return greeting. "That's my butcher," she said. "I see him here quite often. When I go marketing in the morning we always discuss the opera. He's a German, you know, and really knows a lot about other things besides cutting meat."—New York Sun.

A Natural Question.

James J. Corbett, in the smoking room of the Mauretania, praised the "style" of Jim Jeffries.

"It's a neat style," he said; "neat, quick, to the point. It gets there like the remark of a little girl who said to the minister in the course of a quite interminable call:

"'Did you forget to bring your amen with you, doctor?'"

Home-Made Marshmallow Cream Unsurpassed as a Titbit for Those with Sweet Tooth.

Dissolve one rounded tablespoon granulated gelatin in one-half cup cold water and stir over the fire until thoroughly dissolved. Add another cup cold water to the hot gelatin and let it stand to cool while you separate the whites of four eggs. Beat these with a tiny pinch of salt until they are so stiff you can turn the bowl over without their falling out, and then pour the dissolved gelatin very slowly into the beaten whites. Beat all the while you pour the gelatin. Sprinkle in one cup granulated sugar a little at a time, beating continually. Take out one-third of the mixture and tint pink, spread it over the bottom of a deep dish, sprinkle chopped pecan nuts over this, on top put the second third of the white mixture, and more chopped nuts and have third tint lavender, spread on top of the white. This should be served with whipped cream sweetened and flavored.

HANDY AROUND THE HOUSE

Small Conveniences That Will Be Appreciated if Ready When They Are Wanted.

Cheese filled with nuts put up in glass jars. This is used for making sandwiches for afternoon tea or after-the-theater suppers.

Japanese boxes filled with spiced almonds to be used on the table instead of salted nuts.

Bottles of Indian curry for highly seasoned dishes.

Wooden boxes of guava paste to serve with crackers and cheese when the salad is passed. Also tin jars of preserved guavas to be eaten as a sweet for luncheon or served at dinner.

Red Spanish peppers in jars to be used as a salad with French dressing or in sandwiches for special occasions.

Jars containing a paste of chicken and truffles to be spread thinly on bread and butter and served with a salad.

Spanish Mackerel.

The Spanish mackerel is caught in southern waters and has a finer and more delicate flavor than the common kind. It is sold by the pound at a good price, while ordinary mackerel are sold by the count. To broil this fish split it and brush over with olive oil or melted butter, then dip lightly with salt and pepper. Broil with the flesh side over the coals or under the gas flame until nearly done, then turn and finish on the other side.

Serve with sauce made as follows: Cook one level teaspoon each of minced onion and green pepper in three level tablespoons of butter for five minutes, add one-half can of tomatoes and cook until thickened a little. Season with salt and paprika, a tablespoon of tarragon vinegar and another of capers.

German Fruit Pie.

Make a crust of one pint of flour and one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder sifted together, a piece of butter as large as a walnut, one pinch of salt, one beaten egg and enough sweet milk to make a soft dough. Roll the crust one-half inch thick and cover the bottom and sides of a buttered baking tin with it. Now cover the crust with quartered, juicy apples, sprinkle with a little cinnamon and molasses; bake in a rather quick oven till crust and apples are both a light brown; sprinkle over with sugar, keep in the oven five minutes more, and then serve. Canned peaches may be used in place of apples if desired.

Cracker Turnovers.

One pint of rolled cracker crumbs. Add milk enough for a thick batter, then add two eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and a pinch of salt. Fry as pancakes, then put a teaspoonful of jelly on them and turn one-half the cake over on to the jelly.

Hominy Fritters.

To a cupful of cooked hominy add two tablespoonfuls of flour, two well-beaten eggs, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, a few currants or chopped figs, and sugar to taste. Mix all together thoroughly, and fry by dropping a spoonful at a time in smoking hot fat. When of a pale golden color drain on white paper and serve hot. The fritters may be varied by adding a little pepper, mustard, grated cheese and a pinch of chopped herbs to the mixture, instead of using sugar and currants.

Molasses Pie.

Ingredients: Two teacupfuls of molasses, one cupful of sugar, three eggs, one tablespoonful of melted butter, one lemon and some nutmeg; mix together and bake in a plate lined with paste. Arrange strips of crust across the top, first one way and then at right angles as for a cranberry pie.

If you have a black gown that needs freshening, cleanse it thoroughly with clear black coffee diluted with water and containing a little ammonia.

BURDENS LIFTED FROM BAD BACKS

Weary is the back that bears the burden of kidney ills. There's no rest nor peace for the man or woman who has a bad back. The distress begins in early morning. You feel lame and not refreshed. It's hard to get out of bed. It hurts to stoop to tie your shoes. All day the ache keeps up. Any sudden movement sends sharp twinges through the back. It is torture to stoop or straighten. At night the sufferer retires to toss and twist and groan. Backache is kidney ache—a throbbing, dull aching in the kidneys. Plasters or liniments won't do. You must get at the cause, inside.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS CURE SICK KIDNEYS

TWICE-TOLD TESTIMONY

A Cure of Severe Kidney Disease Verified By Test of Time

William M. Sears, 429 W. Cherry Street, Nevada, Mo., says: "I was convinced of the great value of Doan's Kidney Pills through personal experience. Four or five months ago I suffered a great deal from a pain across the small of my back, extending at times into my limbs and shoulders. When I stooped or did any work that brought a strain on the muscles of my back, my trouble was aggravated. I tried a number of remedies but without success. After a short time I could see that they were benefiting me, and the contents of two and one-half boxes cured me." (Statement given in May, 1909.)

RE-ENDORSEMENT

On Dec. 3rd, 1908, Mr. Sears said: "I still have great faith in Doan's Kidney Pills. I feel justified in re-endorsing this remedy as it has done so much for me."

How To Tell When The Kidneys Are Disordered

PAINFUL SYMPTOMS

Backache, sideache, pains when stooping or lifting, sudden sharp twinges, rheumatic pains, neuralgia, painful, scanty or too frequent urination, dizzy spells, dropsy,

URINARY SYMPTOMS

Discolored or cloudy urine. Urine that contains sediment. Urine that stains the linen. Painful passages. Blood or shreds in the urine. Let a bottleful of the morning urine stand for 24 hours. If it shows a cloudy or fleecy settling, or a layer of fine grains, like brick-dust, the kidneys are disordered.

NEVER ANY RETURN

A Complete Cure of Kidney Trouble and Dropsy

Mrs. L. L. Babers, 1615 Terry St., Houston, Texas, says: "I hold a very high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills and with good reason, for three years ago they cured me of kidney trouble that had clung to me for several years. There was a dropsical swelling of my feet and limbs in addition to other symptoms of kidney complaint, and although I used various remedies, I was not helped until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills. Two boxes of this preparation cured me and I have never had the slightest return of my trouble. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to many people who have questioned me about them, and I know of several cases in which they have done the same good work."

HAS COME INTO HER OWN

Spinster of To-Day by No Means the Crabbed Old Maid of the "Comic" Papers.

The day of the typical crabbed old maid is passed. Even the comic papers have ceased to make fun of spinsterhood in this guise. Her place has been taken by the independent woman who quickly enough finds her own niche in the world, and who generally has plenty of common sense to spare for the benefit of others.

The old maid of to-day finds a whole realm of interest awaiting her, and plenty of work which she cares to do. No longer is she condemned to solitude and a cat, no longer is spinisterhood regarded as a term of reproach and looked upon as a condition to be ashamed of.

Look at any of the big charities, any of the numerous boards of management, and you will see the old maid trumphant and at her best, happy enough in her work and her efforts to help humanity.

A FEW CYPHERS INCUBATOR CUSTOMERS' TESTIMONIALS

Satisfied with his First Purchase

Ell Bros., Klemme, Iowa

Gentlemen—As I understand that you are fixing up a few testimonials in regard to the Cyphers Incubators and Brooders, I wish to say that I have never owned or operated any other make of incubator but am satisfied that my No. 2 244-egg size works as good as one could wish. I also have a Cyphers Brooder that raises my chicks very nicely. I believe this make of incubator comes as near being "neglect proof" as any other machine. G. R. WATERMAN.

A Sensitive and Simple Regulator

Ell Bros., Klemme, Iowa

Gentlemen—Although I have never owned or operated any other make of incubator I consider the Cyphers a first class incubator in every respect. It is certainly a non-moisture and self-ventilating machine. The regulator is the most simple in construction of any that I have ever seen and the most sensitive to the temperature. The chicks hatched are strong and healthy and I am well satisfied with my machine. I also have a Cyphers Brooder that gives me excellent satisfaction. AUG. STILLE.

Hatches Perfect in 10 Degrees Below Freezing

Ell Bros., Klemme, Iowa

Gentlemen—I wish to inform you that the No. 2 Cyphers incubator which I bought of you last spring has given entire satisfaction. I took off my first hatch on the 16th day of April and during the period of incubation the temperature dropped down to 10° below freezing and it did not affect the incubator in the least. For experiment sake I operated a hot water machine at the same time and the temperature varied in this machine from 0 to 15° owing entirely to the outside temperature. Out of the 244 egg Cyphers I took 140 good live healthy chicks, while out of the hot water machine I took 15 cripples. I am well pleased with both my incubator and brooders as I have raised more chickens this year than ever before.

MRS. HERMAN THRUN.

Curiosity Satisfied

Ell Bros., Klemme, Iowa

Gentlemen—I had heard a great deal about the Cyphers incubator but never really believed that this machine could be so far ahead of others that it was possible to sell them for such a high figure. Out of curiosity and to satisfy myself I bought one of your machines last spring and I am truly surprised at the way it worked. I used to sit up nights with my "hot water" machines and then I never knew where the temperature would be when I got around to look at it. I would care for the eggs and trim the lamp in the Cyphers in the morning and not go near it until night and I would always find my egg chamber heated to the right degree. I am satisfied that this is the best and cheapest incubator that one could buy.

F. W. TANNER.

Brooder and Incubator Do Good Work

Ell Bros., Klemme, Iowa

Gentlemen—The No. 2, 244 Cypher incubator that I bought of you last spring as well as the Style B Brooder, has done good work for me. I am convinced that this make of incubator is as good as any and better than many and can conscientiously recommend it to all future buyers of incubators.

J. H. TERHUFEN.

285 Chickens From One Hatch

Ell Bros., Klemme Iowa

Gentlemen—I have been operating a Cyphers incubator for the last three years and I find that I am having success with my chicken business. The 390-egg machine which I bought of you last spring has given me good service and my first hatch out of this machine produced 285 chickens out of 390 eggs. I can say for the Cyphers without hesitation that it will hatch a larger percentage of the fertile eggs than any incubator I know of, and I have tried others to my sorrow. Anyone wishing an artificial hatcher will make no mistake by buying the Cyphers make. JOHN BOCK, JR.

A Perfect Hatch

Ell Bros., Klemme, Iowa

As I have been having more or less to do with chickens and incubators for several years, I wish to relate my experience as far as incubators are concerned. Three years ago I bought a Cyphers incubator after having tried other makes, and my first hatch was a success alongside of some of the hatches that I got from my other machines at times previous Last season I had phenomenal success. I was particular to have good eggs and I got a hatch that was almost perfect getting 198 chicks out of 202 fertile eggs, and they were good healthy chickens.

I believe that if poultrymen would put their money into the Cyphers incubators and brooders instead of trying to buy something cheaper they would be money ahead in the end.

IN CUPID'S REALM

On Wednesday forenoon, March second, at ten o'clock, at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Priebe, occurred the marriage of Miss Clara A. Born to Mr. Henry August Barz, Rev. Achtermann officiating.

The contracting parties to this happy social event are well known to a majority of our readers and are among our very best young people. The bride has made her home in this vicinity for a number of years and is held in high esteem by her many acquaintances. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. August Barz, has grown to manhood here, and is an industrious young man of good habits and sterling character

After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding dinner was served, and in the evening a reception was given in honor of the newly wedded couple by Mr. and Mrs. Priebe to which many guests were invited and all had a most happy time.

Forest City Summit: A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Bonar, in the south part of the city last Wednesday evening, when their daughter, Miss Ruth was united in marriage to Mr. Elmer E. Yohn. About thirty invited guests were present, including the families of the contracting parties.

The bride and groom stood beneath a green bower, a large white and a small red bell composed of carnations. Miss Edith, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and Howard Yohn, a brother of the groom, acted as groomsman, and a small sister of the groom carried the wedding ring on a rose. The wedding march was played by Miss Nina Secor. The ceremony was read by Rev. Keck of Garner.

Immediately after the ceremony a four course wedding supper was served. The dining room was beautifully decorated with carnations. The bride carried a beautiful boquet of roses and hyacinths.

Miss Bonar is one of Forest City's fairest daughters, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Bonar. She was a school teacher by profession. She has many friends among the young people of the community and is held in the highest esteem by all.

Mr. Yohn is a young farmer from near Klemme and is highly spoken of as a steady, industrious young man by all who have the honor of his acquaintance.

Thomas, a nephew, are being sought by officers on complaint of the state bank commissioner.

The heaviest blow yet struck the beef trust by way of punishment for arbitrarily raising the price of meat and poultry, came in Jersey City, N. President Taft declared to callers at the White House that his legislative program has not been curtailed to four bills, as stated in the newspaper dispatches from Washington. President Taft came out flatly in favor of a budget system, by which the government's finances may be regulated, in a speech which he delivered before the board of trade at Newark, N. J. The president talked of waste in the various departments of the government and suggested that the way to curb it is to have a system such as is in vogue in other countries where a schedule of expenditures is made up with reference to the income. His speech with its various suggestions as to government economy, was regarded as the keynote of a campaign to be carried on by the administration looking to the reduction in the high cost of living.

ONLY NECESSARY TO TREAT STOMACH, SAYS COOPER

The new theory advanced by L. T. Cooper relative to the human stomach has attracted such widespread attention that the public in cities visited by the young man has been joined by many physicians in a discussion of his beliefs and medicines.

Mr. Cooper says human health is dependent almost entirely upon the stomach. He says that no disease can be conquered without first alleviating all stomach disorders. He further says that most men and women of this generation are half-sick owing to degenerate stomachs. And lastly, he claims that his New Discovery medicine will rejuvenate the human stomach in 90 days.

Cooper has been traveling from one city to another, conducting in each what he calls a campaign of education. For the past year he has met the public in the larger cities of the country, and his success has been phenomenal. Thousands of people have flocked to his headquarters wherever he has gone, and the sale of his medicine has been beyond anything of the kind ever before witnessed.

Possibly the most interesting feature of the attention this young man has attracted is what his army of followers, whom he has converted to his beliefs through his medicines, have to say on the subject. The following statements are from two well-known residents of Chicago and Boston, respectively, and the enthusiasm of these is characteristic of Cooper's admirers generally.

Mrs. H. B. Mack, of 3201 State street, Chicago, says: "I have been suffering for 12 years from a combination of stomach trouble, catarrh and constipation. I had a gnawing pain in the pit of my stomach, a sort of a dull pain that I could not quite understand. Then there was a dull headache, and my mind seemed to be wandering continually. I could not eat, and what little solid food I did eat I could not retain on my stomach. I tried every remedy I could think of, and also tried out a number of patent medicines, but without any apparent result. It was through one of my friends that I heard of Cooper's preparation, and I immediately decided to try some of it. It is two weeks since I took my first dose of it, and I feel like a new woman. The headache seems to have disappeared, and the pain in my stomach, along with it. The medicine is worth its weight in gold, and I want to thank Mr. Cooper for what he has done for me."

Mr. Edwin F. Morse, of 20 Oakley street, Dorchester, a suburb of Boston, says: "For three years I had not a well day. My stomach was in frightful shape; the mere thought of food would nauseate me, and I really had a horror of anything to eat. All solid food would cause me extreme indigestion, bloating and gas on my stomach, and nothing tasted right. Some time ago I got some of this Cooper's medicine, about which there is so much talk. I actually feel as well and strong as a boy ever since the first bottle. Every sign of stomach trouble has disappeared, and I have a hearty appetite and eat three square meals; everything seems to taste good. Anyone who knows what chronic indigestion is can appreciate what this means to me. I consider this the most remarkable medicine I ever heard of."

Cooper's New Discovery is sold by all druggists. If your druggist cannot supply you, we will forward you the name of a druggist in your city who will. Don't accept "something just as good."—The Cooper Medicine Co., Dayton, Ohio.

BOARD IS ELECTED

For New Swedish Lutheran Hospital at Des Moines.

REV. WESTERBERG, PRESIDENT

Members Will Refuse to Sign Consent Petitions for Sale of Liquor—Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society Elects

Des Moines, Feb. 28.—Members of the Swedish Lutheran churches of Iowa are pledged to refuse to sign petitions of liquor consent by the action taken by the Iowa conference at its closing session in the local church on East Fifth street.

Drastic resolutions placing the members of the churches on record against renewal of liquor consents and upon a solid church vote against any candidate in opposition to temperance legislation, were adopted. President Joseph A. Anderson of Boone in his annual report called the attention of the delegates to the conference to the necessity of voting Iowa dry at the coming elections. The committee, acting on the president's message, made even more drastic recommendations and these were unanimously adopted.

The Rev. P. A. Westerberg of the local church was elected president of the board of directors for the new hospital to be established by the conference. The other officers of the hospital are: For three years, Rev. A. P. Westerberg of Des Moines, Rev. O. A. Henry of Clinton, John A. Benson of Des Moines, Rev. J. W. Swanback of Swea City; for two years, V. A. Swan of Sioux City; Swan Nelson of Manson; for one year, Rev. Joseph A. Anderson of Boone, Rev. C. A. Randolph of Santon, and Edwin Hult of Des Moines.

The Women's Home and Foreign Missionary society held its meeting and elected the following officers: President, Mrs. E. V. Hanson of Red Oak; vice president, Mrs. C. O. Morland of Madrid; corresponding secretary, Miss Alida Lundquist of Ottumwa; treasurer, Miss Anna Anderson of Ottumwa. The society raised $1,240.47 last year.

DR. CROFFORD IS PARDONED

Decatur County Physician Accused of Being Responsible for Death of Young Girl Is Freed.

Des Moines, Feb. 28.—Dr. J. W. Crofford's plea for an absolute pardon was granted by Governor B. F. Carroll. The state board of parole recommended to the governor that Crofford be given an absolute pardon at once, and the recommendation was approved.

This is the end of a six months' fight for freedom, made by the Leon physician who has served several years at Fort Madison following his conviction on a charge of performing a criminal operation which resulted in the death of a young girl. Crofford conducted a sanitarium at Leon.

Dr. Artemus Brown of Des Moines, United States pure food inspector, created a sensation last summer by voluntarily going before the board of parole and declaring that the girl for whose death Crofford was held guilty, was operated upon criminally before she entered the Crofford sanitarium.

Upon the testimony of Dr. Brown the board recommended that Governor Carroll grant Crofford an absolute pardon, but the governor refused to take action and asked that the board make a more thorough investigation. The Brown statement was discredited by reason of the fact that he had kept silent during the trial and conviction of Crofford and had spoken only after six years or more had passed.

TESTING SEED CORN

Pastors Asked to Preach on Important Subject.

CRISIS CONFRONTS FARMER

Prof. P. G. Holden, of Ames College, Sends Out Letters to Ministers of Iowa Calling Attention to Needs of Crop.

Ames, Ia., Feb. 28.—The ministers of the churches in Iowa have been asked by Professor Holden of Ames to preach on testing seed corn. A letter, mailed to every pastor in Iowa, reads as follows:

"To the Pastors of Iowa: Here is a subject that is interesting farmers, manufacturers, business men, traveling men—everyone. It commands the attention of colleges, short courses, institutes and the commercial clubs of our great cities. It ought to interest you. It is seed corn.

"The subject of seed corn, its vitality and its relation to the next harvest is of intense importance to every citizen of this state. It is not only a material consequence but of moral and spiritual significance as well. Why cannot the pulpits of this state by a thoughtful, practical and spiritual presentation of this theme emphasize the crisis that confronts the farmer who neglects to test his seed, and ignores the peril of crop failure? There is a seed corn gospel. There is an evident moral significance. Failure of success is not alone to be measured in dollars and cents. Count the results in better ideals in the home; consider the hopes of education cherished by son and daughter; measure the effects on our citizenship. A discouraged, disappointed, disheartened man, with hunger of body and leanness of crop, will affect every ideal for state or social betterment. Better farming means better living.

"'Whatsoever a man soweth,' etc., and 'What shall the harvest be?' are good texts. Cannot you, a minister of the gospel of Christ, the gospel that recognized the relation between sowing and reaping, take this need and condition of the hour and preach a practical and spiritual sermon that shall stir the whole man to thoughtfulness and activity, and t_at at once? Will you do it? Will you add your influence to the many agencies that are working in this state to prevent a partial crop failure in 1910? By so doing you will render valuable service to the people of the state. Consider well the many phases of this subject, practical, ethical, moral, spiritual and act at once. Why not make a germination box as described in the enclosed circulars, take it to the pulpit to use in illustrating your sermon? If possible, put the seed over to sprout eight days before the box is to be used."

Many Attend Corn Show.

Carroll.—Over 500 farmers were in Carroll to attend the first of the two days' corn show. Great interest was exhibited in the test of seed corn made under the supervision of C. M. Russell. Out of forty-one tests made from seed furnished by some of the best farmers of the community, an average of only 37.5 proved good, showing need of great caution in selecting corn for planting this spring.

High Price For Farm.

Marshalltown.—One hundred fifty dollars per acre for a farm at public auction was paid here by Charles E. Fricke of State Center. The land purchased was the 160 acre farm belonging to the estates of J. F. Meeker of this city and James Allison of State Center. The land had been appraised at $147.50 per acre.

Bridges Are In Poor Shape.

Mason City, Iowa.—One of the biggest floods known in the history of local railroads through northern Iowa and southern Minnesota is anticipated when the present snow leaves and for which the roads are now making active preparations to forestall. The snow is more than an average of two feet in depth in this part of the state, ranging from McGregor to Sanborn, and as the bridges are in poor shape at the best a good deal of trouble is expected. Special orders have been given to the engineering department to strengthen all bridges and to set men at work digging out runs for the surface water.

Farmers, too, are anticipating a good deal of trouble to gather what corn remains in the fields. The ground is frozen but about two inches deep under the snow and when the snow leaves the ground will also thaw, leaving the fields in such shape that corn picking will be out of the question till it will crowd spring work. A day or two ago, over four inches of new snow fell with more in prospect, which means more trouble for the railroads and the farmers.

Is Champion Hog Raiser.

Iowa City.—A tabulation of figures since March 1, 1905, is evidence for the statement that H. M. Young of North Liberty has obtained from the sale of hogs a sum amounting to $19,694.89. Mr. Young disposed of a total of 1,441 head of hogs in that time, of which 1,387 were sold since 1906. They filled nineteen cars and the range price was from $4 per cwt. to $8.25 per cwt., the former price being secured on Dec. 21, 1908, and the latter on Jan. 8, 1910.

Mr. Young has on hand 120 fall pigs and sixty sows bred for spring litters. He does not take much stock in the shortage of pork theory. His sales by years were: To March 1, 1906, 54 head; 1907, 356 head; 1908, 279 head; 1909, 324 head; 1910, 428 head.

Mr. Young's brother, Will Young, has heretofore been claiming state hog raising honors with a record year's sale of $9,000.

Jewell Gets on Boosters' Map.

Jewell.—From present prospects Jewell will enjoy a building boom next summer that is going to put this town on the map and that will make it unrecognizable to old times. In the past two or three years Jewell has put in miles of cement crossings, cement sidewalks, and concrete gutters, has had a new depot built, and three new brick buildings, besides a good number of modern residences. This year more residences are going up, and in addition Main street is going to receive a tremendous boom in the building line. Arrangements are being made that will probably result in the erection of nine fronts of brick buildings on Main street next summer, a growth that will mean work in plenty for carpenters, bricklawers and laborers.

High Prices for Land.

Ida Grove.—It is believed that Ida county land prices are equal to any in Iowa, and a number of recent transfers show the uniformly high prices of real estate in this vicinity. August Lundell sold an 80-acre farm in Hayes township, this county, to Frank E. Lundell for a consideration of $11,200. Edward Baker of Arthur sold to Charles Magnuson an 80 for $14,153. Thomas Flanagan sold an 80-acre farm in Logan township to Allen Joslin for $9,200. Robert Lipton, banker, sold to Peter Feddersen 290 acres in Corning township for $29,000, having paid but $18,900 for this land two years ago.

Iowan Gets Big Fortune.

Oskaloosa.—Fred J. Bailey, a former resident of Albia, said to be a representative of a life insurance company, traveling, with headquarters at Des Moines, received a telegram at Oskaloosa, informing him of a judgment rendered by California courts by which he comes into a fortune of $125,000 and interest for several years pending the settlement in court. Mr. Bailey is 55 years of age. His wife and children have been dead for several years.

Railroad Men Sentenced.

Missouri Valley.—Oliver Halstead, a section foreman, and Albert Query, one of his men, were given thirty days in jail for larceny. Things had been missing from freight cars for some time but officers were unable to locate the thieves until they gave the suspected ones a good sweating in the mayor's office.

Pioneer Woman Dies.

Keokuk.—Mrs. Gertrude Timberman the widow of the late William Timberman, a pioneer mayor of Keokuk, died, aged 70 years. Deceased traced her Puritan ancestry back to the year 1682. She was the mother of Mary Timberman, a Sheakespearean acrtress who died in 1899.

Common Sense

Leads the most intelligent people to use only medicines of known composition. Therefore it is that Dr. Pierce's medicines, the makers of which print every ingredient entering into them upon the bottle-wrappers and attest its correctness under oath, are daily growing in favor. No Secrets. No Deception.

The composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines is open to everybody, Dr. Pierce being desirous of having the search light of investigation turned fully upon his formulæ, being confident that the better the composition of these medicines is known the more will their great curative merits be recognized.

Being wholly made of the active medicinal principles extracted from native forest roots, by exact processes original with Dr. Pierce, and without the use of a drop of alcohol, triple-refined and chemically pure glycerine being used instead in extracting and preserving the curative virtues residing in the roots employed, these medicines are entirely free from the objection of doing harm by creating an appetite for either alcoholic beverages or habit-forming drugs.

Examine the formula on their bottle-wrappers—the same as sworn to by Dr. Pierce, and you will find that his "Golden Medical Discovery," the great blood-purifier, stomach tonic and bowel regulator—the medicine which, while not recommended to cure consumption in its advanced stages (no medicine will do that) yet does cure all those catarrhal conditions of head and throat, weak stomach, torpid liver and bronchial troubles, weak lungs and hang-on-coughs, which, if neglected or badly treated lead up to and finally terminate in consumption.

Take the "Golden Medical Discovery" in time and it is not likely to disappoint you if only you give it a thorough and fair trial. Don't expect miracles. It won't do supernatural things. You must exercise your patience and persevere in its use for a reasonable length of time to get its full benefits. The ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed have the unqualified endorsement of scores of medical leaders—better than any amount of lay, or non-professional, testimonials although the latter are received by thousands.

Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy of known composition. Ask your neighbors. They must know of many cures made by it during past 40 years, right in your own neighborhood.

HIS TRAGIC DREAM.

A Grim Ghost Story That Comes From the Netherlands.

The following remarkable ghost story is told of two brothers, members of a distinguished family in Friesland, a province of the Netherlands: The young men were officers in the same regiment, and their only fault—a certain rash valor, so different from the quiet prudence so characteristic of their nation—made their comrades almost idolize them.

These young officers were exceedingly anxious to see a ghost and took a great deal of pains to plunge into all sorts of gloomy places in the hope of finding them tenanted by beings from the other world. At last they seemed to find the orthodox old castle with its haunted room. Everybody bore witness to the horrible sights and sounds nightly to be seen and heard therein, and these young gentlemen determined to pass the night there.

It was Christmas eve, and they provided themselves with a good supper and a bottle of wine each, a fire, lights and loaded pistols. The hours wore on. No ghost was seen; no ghostly sounds were heard. The younger brother, wrapped closely in his warm cloak, laid his head on the table and deliberately resigned himself to a comfortable sleep. The elder brother, though exceedingly weary, determined to remain awake and await the issue of events.

After awhile a noise roused him from a reverie into which he had fallen. He raised his eyes and beheld the wall opening in front of his seat. Through the opening glided a tall figure in white, who signed to him to follow.

The rose and followed the figure through long, damp, dark passages till they reached a large, brilliantly lighted room where a ball was going on. Above the strains of music and the din of voices pierced a strange, sharp, clicking sound, like the notes of castanets.

Bewildered and dazzled by this sudden transition from darkness and silence to this gay festive scene, it was some moments before he could collect his senses, but he was shocked by perceiving that these gayly dressed ladies and their richly uniformed cavaliers were skeletons, and the curious sound that impressed him so strangely was the clicking of fleshless jaws!

The figure at his side ordered him to take a partner from this hideous throng, which he refused to do. Irritated at this refusal, the figure raised his arm to strike, but the officer instantly leveled at him the pistol he had continued to grasp and discharged it full in his face.

With the shock and report he started to his feet. The white figure, the ballroom, the fearful, ghastly dancers, all had vanished, and he was in the room where he had supped, but his brother lay dying at his side.

He had shot him in his dream and awakened only to receive his last utterance. From that awful Christmas night he was an altered man. All the gayety had gone out of his life, all the sunshine had faded from his days, and after a few years of unavailing anguish of remorse he found himself unable to bear the burden of his regrets and put an end to his life.

To Gauge His Wife's Temper.

"I heard about a peculiar case of henpecked husband recently," said a young woman the other day.

"What was it?" her friend inquired.

"There is a man who has some difficulty in gauging his wife's temper. At times she is considerate of his welfare, and at other times—well, he rather thinks that married life is a failure.

"He has a peculiar manner of finding out the state of his wife's feeling toward him. In the evening when he returns home from work he never steps into the house without going through a sort of ceremony. First he throws his hat in the house, and then he seats himself on the steps and waits. If five minutes pass without the hat being thrown out again he enters and generally finds his wife very agreeable. However, if the hat is thrown out again the unfortunate man seeks hospitality for the night somewhere else rather than brave the anger of his helpmeet."

The Fishing Otter.

The otter used by Scottish poachers is one of the most deadly fishing instruments known. In some waters it is far more effective than a net. It may be described as a water kite, which serves to take out over the water a line bearing fifty or more flies. The otter itself is a floating piece of board leaded along one side to keep it upright. The poacher walks along the side of the loch or river, letting out the fly decorated line as he goes, the otter board gradually working out toward the center. An enormous area of water is fished at one time and numbers of fish are killed.

KLEMME BOY MARRIED

Dick Swalve and Miss Frances Behrends United For Life—Ceremony Takes Place in Hardin County.

From the Ackley Journal:

On Wednesday afternoon, March 2, at four o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Behrends in Washington township, occurred the marriage of their daughter, Frances, to Mr. Dick Swalve. The parlor in which the ceremony was performed was beautifully decorated, an arch of evergreens and flowers being erected in one corner, under which the bridal party stood, Rev John Schaefer officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Tena Swalve, sister of the groom, and Mr. Henry Behrends acted as groomsman. The bride was attired in a handsome gown of tan tafieta silk with cream and gold all-over lace yoke and trimmings, and carried a boquet of carnations. Miss Elsie Kramer played the wedding march. The rooms were filled with friends and relatives, it being estimated that about 150 people were present to witness the happy event. After congratulations preparations were made for serving the guests with the wedding luncheon and from then until a late hour in the evening the spacious home was the scene of much merrymaking.

Miss Behrends, now Mrs. Swalve, has always lived in Washington township and has been one of the popular girls of the community. She has many friends who will regret her departure but wish her happiness and success in her new home. Mr. Swalve whose home is near Goodell, Iowa, is spoken of as a very industrious and promising young man. The young couple will leave next week for Hancock county and will go to housekeeping on a farm owned by the groom's father near Klemme.

The wedding gifts were numerous and beautiful, evidencing the esteem in which these young people are held. The Journal extends congratulations and wishes them a long life and much happiness together.

SEED MUST BE PURE

Com. H. R. Wright Warns Against Sale or Use of Impure Seeds.

WILL PROSECUTE VIOLATORS

The State Pure Food Commissioner Points Out Danger From Weed Growing From Impure Seed —Law Regulates Sale.

Des Moines, Mar. 7.—Dealers in and purchasers of seeds are warned by Commissioner Wright against the sale or use of impure seeds. In the bulletin just issued he sets forth the provisions of the Iowa seed law and announces that all violators of the law will be prosecuted. He calls attention to the fact that while the sale of impure seeds is a fraud on the purchaser, the real damage comes from the fact that many weeds result from the use of seeds of this class. Not only does the user of impure seeds suffer, but his neighbor also reaps a harvest of weeds as the result of their planting.

He suggests that if there is any doubt about the seeds purchased they should be sent to the seed analyst, at the dairy and food department, and be properly tested.

On this subject Commissioner Wright says:

"Dealers in seeds and purchasers of them are warned that prosecutions will follow the sale of seeds not in accordance with the law.

"The law of this state regulating the sale of agricultural seeds includes all the varieties of grass seeds, forage plants and the cereals.

"It prohibits the sale of agricultural seeds if any seeds of the following weeds are present, namely: Wild mustard of charlock, quackgrass, Canada thistle, wild dodder, or corn cockle. The only exception to this prohibition is the sale of seed for export outside the state, and sales by the grower upon his own premises for seeding by the purchaser.

"Certain named weed seeds are classed as impurities, and when present in an aggregate of more than 2 per cent, the seeds may be legally sold only when tagged or labeled to show the percentage of each impurity present.

"Samples for analysis by this department should be average samples of the whole lot of seeds in question, and results reported must be understood as applying only to the sample sent in and that the accuracy of the analysis represents the character of the whole lot of seeds only when the sample sent in is really an average sample.

"The importance of sale and use of good seed, free from weeds, is so great that the dealers and purchasers can well afford to use every effort to keep and use only that which conforms to the law. Growers of seed should take notice that this law will be enforced and that clean, pure seed will be at a premium.

"Dealers receiving seeds from wholesalers should insist that the same comply with the statute and that proper labels should be furnished."

Negro Orator Wins State Contest.

Cedar Rapids.—Henry F. Coleman, a negro, of Cornell college at Mount Vernon, speaking on "The Philosophy of the Race Question," won the annual state oratorical contest here. Harry S. Hamilton of Morningside college, Sioux City, took second place with his oration, "The Nineteenth Century Reformer." Miss Pearl Bailey of Coe college, Cedar Rapids, won third with her oration, "And the Last, First."

Prisoner Tries Suicide.

Sac City.—Ed Roose, who is held at the county jail awaiting his trial for the murder of Goodwin Yaun at Odebolt in September, 1908, attempted to commit suicide. He borrowed a pocket knife from a prisoner in the outside corridor and cut his throat from ear to ear. The injury is serious but may not prove fatal.

Woman Smothered Under Straw.

Estherville.—While helping her husband get a load of straw Mrs. Hogan Hoganson was completely buried under the stack by a portion of it falling on her. Before she could be extricated she had smothered. Besides a husband, two sons and a daughter remain to mourn her sudden demise.

Moving to the Northwest.

Anamosa.—Several farmers from this locality are planning on moving to the great northwest within the next few weeks. Some are going to North and South Dakota and some to the Canadian Northwest.

Young Minister Deserted Bride.

Waterloo.—At Ruthven, in Palo Alto county, is a heart broken young wife and mother who is grieving the absence of her husband, who deserted her a few weeks after marriage and is said to have been paying attention to a young lady in Brooklyn, N. Y., a member of the Parkville Congregational church. She is Mrs. Victor M. Patterson, a Waterloo girl, whose maiden name was Miss Myrtle Brott, a granddaughter of Col W. H. Brott, who settled in Waterloo in the early fifties. Patterson, who was pastor of the Union Congregation church in this city for more than a year, is now being urgently solicited by an attorney at Emmetsburg to support his wife and little child, who was born the latter part of January. If he does not make provision for the support of his family, it is likely that criminal action will be instituted on a charge of wife abandonment and he will be requisitioned from New York state, where he has been living since leaving his wife last August.

Settles Auto Damage Suit.

Carroll.—After the jury had been selected and the Slife-Boothe automobile accident case was ready for trial the case was settled by Slife paying plaintiff $1,200 and expenses of the court, Miss Boothe having to pay her own hospital and doctors' expenses. This will leave the injured girl about $500. Mr. Slife resides at Dedham and Miss Beatrice Boothe at Glidden. Last fall Mr. Slife while driving his car on the Carroll-Glidden road ran over Miss Boothe, injuring her to such an extent that she had to remain in the hospital for months. At one time it was thought she would die of blood poison. She is yet unable to walk without the aid of a crutch. The total expense for Mr. Slife will probably reach about $2,500.

This Stork Is Patriotic.

Perry.—The stork that visits the Stoner family of this city, it is claimed here, is the most patriotic one in the United States. E. Stoner, the head of the family, was born on the fourth of July. His son, Jerry Stoner, married on St. Valentine's day and his first child, a daughter, came as a valentine. The second, a boy, put in his appearance on the fourth of July. The good stork came again, choosing George Washington's birthday for its visit and bringing a nine pound baby. Mrs. Stoner was Miss Zora Sharkey of Panora.

John Brown's Pistol for S. U. I.

Iowa City.—An interesting gift has just been made to the State Historical society of Iowa by the Maxon family of Springdale. The gift includes John Brown's famous pistol, together with Barclay Coppoc's rifle. John Brown stopped near Iowa City at one time and left the weapons with ancestors of the Maxon family upon leaving after a winter's stay.

Marengo Man Gets $5,000 Judgment.

Marengo.—A jury in the federal court at Council Bluffs has returned a verdict for $5,000 in favor of L. A. Webber, a railway mail clerk of this place, in his suit against the Rock Island railroad for personal injuries. The suit grew out of the famous wreck near Homestead, Ia., in March, 1905, in which many persons were injured.

Iowa Central to Store Coal.

Marshalltown.—The Iowa Central is preparing to store all coal possible this month, while the miners' schedules are being adjusted and the mines may be closed. Orders have been given to have all freight trains handle empty coal cars in preference to all other freight excepting live stock and perishable merchandise.

To Rebuild Packing Plant.

Fort Dodge.—The first work on the new plant of the Corn Belt Packing company ,to replace the one which was destroyed before completed early in January at a loss of $175,000, by mysterious fire, has been done. The new concrete footings are being established and the company hopes to have the plant in operation by fall.

Enjoined Druggist Quits.

Mason City.—A. G. Spohr, a local druggist against whom is a case pending in which an application for an injunction has been made by the anti-saloon league, restraining him from selling liquor illegally, has sold his business to H. J. Boyd and will remove to Washington or some other western state.

Harl Dies at Council Bluffs.

Council Bluffs.—C. M. Harl, the attorney who was stricken with paralysis, died without regaining consciousness. Two daughters, summoned from Chicago, arrived a short time before his dissolution. At the bedside also was Mrs. Harl. The deceased was one of the leading lawyers of the state.

SALT AND SMOKED

SIMPLE METHOD OF MAKING FISH APPETIZING.

Broiled Salt Mackerel Requires Care If It Is to Be Sent to the Table In Proper Condition—Grilled Herring.

Broiled Salt Mackerel—Salt mackerel, which is often tasteless and indigestible, may be made in this way both delicious and delicate. For a family of two or four, clean and wash in several cold waters a large No. 1 mackerel; place it in a deep dish or pan, cover it with cold water and let stand over night. If still too salt, the next one may be soaked 24 hours, but too long a soaking will make a mackerel tasteless. When ready to cook the fish rinse it in several waters and wipe dry with a towel; leave the head and tail on, but flatten the fish well, rub melted butter over the two sides and place in a broiler, split side down, over a moderate fire of live coals. Broil six minutes on the split side, then turn and broil from three to six minutes on the skin side. Lay on a warm dish and pour melted butter over it, adding, when ready to serve, a dust of cayenne, a thick sprinkle of chopped parsley and several slices of lemon. Small German potatoes, boiled in their jackets and then freed of skins, make a proper garnish for this dish.

Grilled Smoked Herring—Wash the fish well in cold water and then broil it whole for three minutes on each side. Separate carefully with a fork the meat from the skin and intestines and serve very hot on a bed of thin, hot, buttered toast, with a squeeze of lemon juice and cayenne on the meat. Baked white potatoes go admirably with this dish.

Smoked White Fish—This fish is so delicate that it is scarcely possible to do more than dip it in boiling water. While doing this hold the fish by the tail, strip the skin off instantly and serve in two pieces on a hot dish with drawn butter and chopped parsley. Either well boiled grits or baked or boiled potatoes go well with this dish.

Plattered Salmon.

Pick bones from one can of salmon, spread over the bottom of the platter. Cover this with a layer of rolled crackers. Put a lump of butter the size of an egg on the stove into a pan; when melted stir into this one large tablespoonful of flour until it browns a little; a pinch of salt and enough milk to make moderately thick; when boiled pour over the salmon; have boiled potatoes, hot, cooked in salt water and dice them to the thickness of one inch over the whole; put the platter into the oven and let brown on top and serve on the platter.

Clove Apples.

Clove apples for cold meats, three-quarters of a pound of sugar, two cupfuls of water, and boil to a syrup. drop in quarters of apples, pared, and when they are cooked lift out carefully with a fork. When all the fruit has been cooked drop some of the skins in the syrup with one-half dozen cloves. Cook about 20 minutes, remove the skins, but pour the syrup with the cloves over the apples in a jar, and cover up. This is inexpensive and beats all kinds of chutney.

Jersey Soup.

Two quarts of good stock, six ounces crusts of bread, four tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, two eggs, salt, pepper and half a nutmeg, grated.

Bring the stock to the boil. Add the bread, cut into small pieces. Break two eggs into the tureen and beat well, add to this the cheese, grated, and nutmeg. Then add the soup, gradually stirring well all the time.

Season with salt and pepper and serve very hot.

Float.

One pint of milk, yolks of two eggs, one scant cup of sugar, a pinch of salt, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla, one tablespoonful of cornstarch wet with part of the milk; mix together and cool until it thickens; beat the whites of the eggs until stiff with two teaspoonfuls of confectioner's sugar; place pan of hot water in the oven and put five spoonfuls of meringue on top of the water; brown slightly; serve in sherbet glasses with meringue on top.

Carrot Preserves.

Carrots will make delicious preserves. Take three-quarters of a pound of carrots and sufficient water to make a sirup, and boil until the preserves are thick. A little ginger or lemon should be added to flavor.

Make Good Pot Covers.

Round jelly cake pans make excellent pot covers by turning upside down and placing in center a small wooden knob, obtainable of any grocer. Two can be bought for five cents.

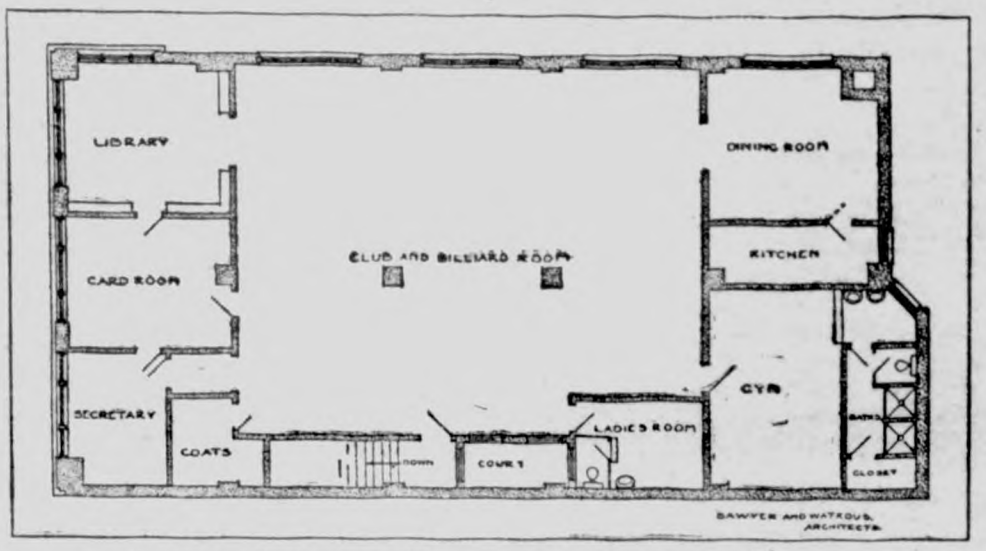
PRESS CLUB ROOMS

Fine New Quartars Fitted Up at Seventh and Locust.

OVER TWO HUNDRED MEMBERS

Nothing Left Undone to Make New Rooms Most Perfectly and Completely Appointed of Any Club in the State.

Newspaper men in Iowa are beginning to watch with interest the remarkable growth of the Press Club of Des Moines, an organization which operates exclusively in the interest of the newspaper and magazine workers of the capitol city and the state at large. The club was launched upon its career in June, 1909, by a score or more active newspaper men in Des Moines, and in the few intervening months has swelled in membership to a total of over 200.



FLOOR PLAN OF NEW PRESS CLUB ROOMS.

The growth of the Press Club of Des Moines is without parallel in the history of similar social bodies. Already the club has outgrown its present quarters and has been forced to take up new modern rooms in a handsome modern structure, in the heart of the business district, which has just been finished.

The membership of the club at present takes in 90 per cent of the active newspaper and periodical workers in Des Moines. There are three sorts of memberships; active, non-resident and honorary. The active list comprises men actually engaged in or connected with the publishing business residing in Des Moines. All members of the newspaper profession living outside of Des Moines are eligible to non-resident membership. Honorary members are persons who have attained some political, business or professional distinction, either in Des Moines or outside of the city. There are at present more than thirty honorary members, all of whom are men of prominence.

The active membership includes the editors and publishers of all the various dailies, magazines, trade journals and the majority of the employees of the aforementioned publications. Many editors of note throughout the state have become non-resident members of the club.

The new rooms at Seventh and Locust streets are specially fitted up to suit the requirements of the club. There is a library, card room, dancing hall, billiard room, gymnasium, writing room, dining room, shower baths, etc. The building which the club is to occupy is to be known as the Press Club building. Representatives of the club are, at present, negotiating for the entire second floor of the Press Club building to be cut up into suits and rented to active newspaper men of the city.

An essential function of the club is the entertainment of visiting newspaper men in the city. The average Iowa newspaper worker of the state finds occasion to make a trip to Des Moines now and then, and frequently requires a convenient place to work. The club has recognized this necessity and has made special provisions for its non-resident members. There are typewriters always at hand, telephone and messenger service and a library. Meals will be served in the dining room as soon as the club takes possession of the new quarters. The clubrooms are a place where newspaper men of the state can consort exclusively and, for the time being, apart from the "dear public." It is the purpose of the club to interest itself in legislation, inaugurating and fostering movements that will redound to the benefit of Iowa newspaper publishers and workers.

Primarily, of course, the club is a social organization. During the short period of its existence it has stood the host at a variety of entertainments, all of which have been highly successful. Last summer a vaudeville bill at Ingersoll Park was presented under the auspices of the club. The programme was augmented by a political skit, written and staged by the club members. It proved one of the biggest social events in Des Moines of the year.

Shortly after Christmas the club tendered a complimentary banquet to Senators Cummins and Dolliver and Congressman Hull. Nearly two hundred plates were laid, and the affair, from a standpoint of originality, has never been equalled in Iowa. Other entertainments of a less formal nature have been given from time to time. On one evening all of the actors in the city were invited to a Bohemian "blow-out" at the club rooms. There were nearly a hundred guests on this occasion. Club smokers are frequently held, the members being entertained by wrestling and boxing exhibitions and vaudeville acts. The entertainment Monday night when local candidates for office were present was a novel and interesting one.

The club is at present planning an elaborate burlesque to be given at the Coliseum for a period of three or four nights. Open house will be kept during the convention of the Iowa Editorial Assoctiation, State Fair and Army Tournament.

The officers of the Club for the year 1910 are as follows: President James M. Pierce; Vice-Presidents Harvey Ingham, C. C. Nye, W. G Hale, Harold Young, E. T. Meredith, Secretary, H. E. Stout; Treasurer W. H. Wiseman.

CONVINCING PROOF

OF THE VIRTUE OF

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

What is the use of procrastinating in the face of such evidence as the following letters represent? If you are a sick woman or know one who is, what sensible reason have you for not giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? For 30 years we have been publishing such testimonial letters as these—thousands of them—they are genuine and honest, too, every one of them.

Mrs. S. J. Barber says:

"I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine in the world for women—and I feel it my duty to let others know the good it has done for me. Three years ago I had a tumor which the doctor said would have to be removed by an operation or I could not live more than a year, or two, at most. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for advice, and took 14 bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today the tumor is gone and I am a perfectly well woman. I hope my testimonial will be of benefit to others." —Mrs. S. J. BARBER, Scott, N. Y.

Mrs. George May says:

"No one knows what I have suffered from female troubles, neuralgia pains, and backache. My doctor said he could not give me anything to cure it. Through the advice of a friend I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the pain soon disappeared. I continued its use and am now in perfect health. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a God-send to me as I believe I should have been in my grave if it had not been for Mrs. Pinkham's advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." —Mrs. GEORGE MAY, 86 4th Ave., Paterson, N. J.

Mrs. E. F. Hayes says:

"I was under the doctor's treatment for a fibroid tumor. I suffered with pain, soreness, bloating, and could not walk or stand on my feet any length of time. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, followed her directions and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. To-day I am a well woman, the tumor was expelled and my whole system strengthened. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." —Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 1890 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

Mrs. W. K. Housh says:

"I have been completely cured of a severe female trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and want to recommend it to all suffering women." —Mrs. W. K. HOUSH, 7 Eastview Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, etc.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

On account of the great dimensions of the spring styles of millinery, how would it do to sell the hats at so much per acre?

If you are in doubt, run for sheriff on the republican ticket. Hancock county to date has five aspirants to that office, Winnebago county five, and Cerro Gordo county only seven.

A few days ago one of our citizens cut into a pound of butter which he had purchased at a grocery store whose proprietor does not advertise, says an Eldora paper, and found therein a small tin box which contained a small piece of paper bearing the following, written in a neat, feminine hand: "I am a girl of eighteen years, good looking, and an excellent housekeeper. Should this be found by some unmarried Christian gentleman, will he please write to the following address, etc." The finder, being a bachelor, decided to unravel the mystery, and succeeded, only to destroy the romance. The girl who had written the note had died many years ago, leaving an aged husband and a grown up family.

Manchester Press: A lively discussion is now going on in the agriculture press as to whether the pig is liable to have his form pressed out of shape by sleeping on cement floors. The man who is so cruel as to encourage this practice ought to be made to sleep on the upper deck of a picket fence, clad in deep thought and pink pajamas, and see how he likes it. There is no surer way to fresco the bosom of a corpulent shoat with boils than to allow him to sleep on a cement floor with a surface as cold as the successful candidate for congress after election. The up-to-date farmer equips his hog house with hammocks, and there is no more cheering sight than a row of pleasant-faced pigs rocking idly to and fro and snoring softly in their sleep. The pig which is driven to roost on an ice-bound floor is a shining mark for the quinsy germ, and you are liable to find him some morning with pale hands folded peacefully across his tenderloin. Give the pigs all the comforts of a home.

Saved a Soldier's Life

Facing death from shot and shell in the civil war was more agreeable to J. A. Stone, of Kemp, Tex., than facing it from what doctors said was consumption. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed a cough, that stuck to me in spite of all remedies for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. I now weigh 178 pounds." For coughs, colds, la grippe, asthma, hemorrhage, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough and lung trouble it's supreme. 50c. 1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by the Old Reliable Drug Store.

Knew Where He Was.

"When I was studying in Boston," said a musician, "they used to tell a tale about a man named Harper, an odd old character, who played a trombone in one of the small theaters there. One time they were rehearsing a new overture. Throughout the piece Harper was a little behind the rest of the men. Before they started it a second time the leader reproved Harper for not coming in more regularly with the other players. When they attempted it again Harper came in, as usual, two or three beats behind time. The leader stopped and, after letting loose a lot of profanity, demanded to know if the trombonist knew he was playing about half a dozen notes behind the others.

"Harper nodded. 'That's all right,' said he. 'I can catch up with the others any time I want to.'"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

She was born in Germany in 1865 and lived in this vicinity the first two years after coming to this country. She leaves a husband, two sons and a daughter.

IMPORTANT BUSINESS CHANGE

A big business deal has been consummated recently between the Northern Lumber Company and J. H. Queal & Co., which calls for the passing from our business circle, of the lumber business conducted by Queal & Co., the Northern Lumber Company having bought their stock and business. These two yards will be merged into one and will be under the management of Nels Palmer who has been agent for the Northern here for several years. Many will regret this move but it is not in Klemme alone that this consolidation is going on. These two companies have made similar deals at other places. Queal & Co. have bought out the Northern at Thompson and Germania, while the Northern has bought the Queal yards at Klemme and Swea City. Both companies sold out to McGuire at Buffalo Center. As the country gets built up and territory is cut into, consolidation becomes necessary. While this move leaves Klemme only one lumber yard, we are sure to have a good one and the Northern Lumber Co. will continue to use its patrons right as it always has in the past. Invoicing of the stock will be started some time during the next week.

"A WHITE LIE"

The four-act drama "A White Lie," given by the Goodell Dramatic Club at the Klemme opera house last Saturday evening was greeted by a good-sized audience. The play is a good one and was very well rendered—in fact it was much ahead of the average "home talent" renditions. Prof. A. D. Schaufelberger and Maude Hodgkinson assumed the leading parts in first class shape. W. H. Ahrenkiel was the notorious bad man and he was a villian who deserved his fate—death by his own hand—in the last act of course. Arthur Savogue, Edna Allaben, Gittie Sweigard and Earl Clark as "Taffy" the black face, furnished the comedy parts and all were good.

The song specialties by Earl Clark and Miss Hodgkinson were highly enjoyed and received hearty encores. Arthur Savogue did the piano act in a masterly manner.

All in all, it was a good evening's entertainment and should the Goodell Dramatic Club again visit our town, they will surely be greeted with a packed house.

New York, Mar. 7—Thomas Collier Platt, formerly United States senator from New York and for many years a national figure in republican politics, died at 3:45 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the paartment of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Abele on West Eleventh street, from whom he rented three rooms for the last four years. Do farmers eat the proper sort of food?

The farmer of today buys a much larger proportion of the food that goes on the table than he did ten years ago. It's a good thing that this is so because he has a great variety to select from.

He should, however, use great care in selecting for the best results in health and strength.

The widespread tendency in the city to increase the amount of Quaker Oats eaten is due very largely to the recent demonstrations by scientific men that the Quaker Oats fed man is the man with greatest physical endurance and greatest mental vigor.

Farmers should give this subject careful thought and should increase the quantity of Quaker Oats eaten by themselves, their children and the farm hands. 57

When Tempus Didn't Fugit.

Little Helen during the three years of her life, had never been separated from her elder sister night or day for more than a few minutes at a time; but at last the time came when the sister went away for a whole day. The child tried every game and occupation that she knew of, and a new one or two suggested by her mother, but they all palled.

Finally she gave up and stood and looked sadly out of the window. Then she sighed deeply and said:

"It's still the same old day, isn't it, mother?" — Woman's Home Companion.

Betrayed by the Tipping Habit.

"Your friend, the count, my dear," said the millionaire to his blooming daughter, "has an odd way of extending his hand. Did you notice when we parted to-night that he held his palm uppermost?"

His daughter sighed.

"I was in hopes," she murmured, "that if Alphonse was exposed it would be found that he was at least a restaurant waiter—but I'm afraid he was only a shoe shiner in a barber shop."

A Jolt to Romance.

"How about the young doctor? Has he proposed?"

"Not yet. Papa ruined everything last night."

"How was that?"

"Just as the doctor was pleading for a peep at my eyes, papa came in and asked him to take a look at my throat."

CHANGE THE VIBRATION It Makes for Health.

A man tried leaving off meat, potatoes, coffee, and etc., and adopted a breakfast of fruit, Grape-Nuts with cream, some crisp toast and a cup of Postum.

His health began to improve at once for the reason that a meat eater will reach a place once in a while where his system seems to become clogged and the machinery doesn't work smoothly.

A change of this kind puts aside food of low nutritive value and takes up food and drink of the highest value, already partly digested and capable of being quickly changed into good, rich blood and strong tissue.

A most valuable feature of Grape-Nuts is the natural phosphate of potash grown in the grains from which it is made. This is the element which transforms albumen in the body into the soft gray substance which fills brain and nerve centers.

A few days' use of Grape-Nuts will give one a degree of nervous strength well worth the trial.

SYNOPSIS.

Tommy Ardmore, New York millionaire and owner of a great estate in North Carolina, reaches Atlanta in search of a pretty girl who winked at him as their trains stood opposite each other two days before. On the depot platform he meets his old friend, Harry Griswold, professor in the University of Virginia, on his way north.

"Not if I endow all the chairs in the university! You've not only got to come, but you're going to be there the day they arrive."

Thomas Ardmore of New York and Ardsley struck his heavy stick—he always carried a heavy stick—smartly on the cement platform in the stress of his feeling. He was much shorter than Griswold, to whom he was deeply attached—for whom he had, indeed, a rank admiration of a small boy for a big brother. He sometimes wondered how fully Griswold entered into the projects of adventure which he, in his supreme idleness, planned and proposed; but he himself had never been quite ready to mount horse or shake out sail, and what Griswold had said about indecision rankled in his heart. He was sorry now that he had told of this new enterprise to which he had pledged himself, but he grew lenient toward Griswold's lack of sympathy as he reflected that the quest of a winking girl was rather beneath the dignity of a gentleman wedded not merely to the law, but to the austere teaching profession as well. In his heart he forgave Griswold, but he was all the more resolved to address himself stubbornly to his pursuit of the deity of the car Alexandra, for only by finding her could he establish himself in Griswold's eyes as a man of action, capable of carrying through a scheme requiring cleverness and tact.

Ardmore was almost painfully rich, but the usual diversions of the wealthy did not appeal to him, and, having exhausted foreign travel, he spent much time on his estate in the North Carolina hills, where he could ride all day on his own land, and where he read prodigiously in a huge library that he had assembled with special reference to works on piracy, a subject that had attracted him from early youth.

It was this hobby that had sealed his friendship with Griswold, who had relinquished the practice of law, after a brilliant start in his native city of Richmond, to accept the associate professorship of admiralty in the law department of the University of Virginia. Marine law had a particular fascination for Griswold from its essentially romantic character. As a law student he had read all the decisions in admiralty that the libraries afforded, and, though faithfully serving the university, he still occasionally accepted retainers in admiralty cases of unusual importance. His lectures were constantly attended by students in other departments of the university for sheer pleasure in Griswold's racy and entertaining exposition of the laws touching the libeling of schooners and the recovery of jettisoned cargoes. Henry Maine Griswold was tall, slender and dark, and he hovered recklessly, as he might have put it, on the brink of thirty. He stroked his thin brown mustache habitually, as though to hide the smile that played about his humorous mouth—a smile that lay even more obscurely in his fine brown eyes. He did violence to the academic traditions by dressing with metropolitan care, gray being his prevailing note, though his scarfs ventured upon bold color schemes that interested his students almost as much as his lectures. The darkest fact of his life—and one shared with none—was his experiments in verse. From his undergraduate days he had written occasionally a little song, quite for his own pleasure in versifying, and to a little sheaf of these things in manuscript he still added a few verses now and then.

"Don't worry, Ardy," he was saying to his friend as "all aboard" was called, "and don't be reckless. When you get through looking for the winking eye, come up to Charlottesville and we'll plan "The True Life of Capt. Kidd" that is some day going to make us famous."

"I'll wire you later," replied Ardmore, clinging to his friend's hand a moment after the train began to move. Griswold leaned out of the vestibule to wave a last farewell to Ardmore, and something very kind and gentle and good to see shone in the lawyer's eyes. He went into the car smiling, for he called Ardmore his best friend, and he was amused by his last words, which were always Ardmore's last in their partings, and were followed usually by telegrams about the most preposterous things, or suggestions for romantic adventures, or some new hypothesis touching Capt. Kidd and his buried treasure. Ardmore never wrote letters; he always telegraphed, and he enjoyed filing long, mysterious and expensive messages with telegraph operators in obscure places where a scrupulous ten words was the frugal limit.

Griswold lighted a cigar and opened the afternoon Atlanta papers in the smoking compartment. His eye was caught at once by imperative headlines. It is not too much to say that the eye of the continent was arrested that evening by the amazing disclosure, now tardily reaching the public, that something unusual had occurred at the annual meeting of the Cotton Planters' association at New Orleans on the previous day. Every copy-reader and editor, every paragrapher on every newspaper in the land had smiled and reached for a fresh pencil as a preliminary bulletin announced the passing of harsh words between the governor of North Carolina and the governor of South Carolina. It may as well be acknowledged here that just what really happened at the Cotton Planters' convention will never be known, for this particular meeting was held behind closed doors, and as the two governors were honored guests of the association, no member has ever breathed a word touching an incident that all most sincerely deplored. Indeed, no hint of it would ever have reached the public had it not been that both gentlemen hurriedly left the convention hall, refused to keep their appointments to speak at the banquet that followed the business meetings, and were reported to have taken the first trains for their respective capitals. It was whispered by a few persons that the governor of South Carolina had taken a fling at the authenticity of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence; it was rumored in other quarters that the governor of North Carolina was the aggressor, he having—it was said—declared that a people (meaning the freemen of the commonwealth of South Carolina) who were not intelligent enough to raise their own hay, and who, moreover, bought that article in Ohio, were not worth the ground necessary for their decent interment. It is not the purpose of this chronicle either to seek the truth of what passed between the two governors at New Orleans, or to discuss the points of history and agriculture raised in the statements just indicated. As every one knows, the 20th of May (or was it the 31st!), 1775, is solemnly observed in North Carolina as the day on which the patriots of Mecklenburg county severed the relations theretofore existing between them and his majesty, King George the Third. Equally well known is the fact that in South Carolina it is an article of religious faith that on that twentieth day of May, 1775, the citizens of Mecklenburg county, North Carolina, cheered the English flag and adopted resolutions reaffirming their ancient allegiance to the British crown. This controversy and the inadequacy of the South Carolina hay crop must be passed on to the pamphleteers, with such other vexed questions as Andrew Jackson's birthplace—more debated than Homer's and not to be carelessly conceded to the strutting sons of Waxhaw.

Griswold read of the New Orleans incident with a smile, while several fellow-passengers discussed it in a tone of banter. One of them, a gentleman from Mississippi, presently produced a flask, which he offered to the others, remarking: "As the governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina," which was, to be sure, pertinent to the hour and the discussion, and bristling with fresh significance.

"They were both in Atlanta this morning," said the man with the flask, "and they would have been traveling together on this train if they hadn't met in the ticket office and nearly exploded with rage."

The speaker was suddenly overcome with his own humor, and slapped his knee and laughed; then they all laughed, including Griswold.

"One ought to have taken the lower berth and one the upper to make it perfect," observed an Alabama man. "I wonder when they'll get home."

"They'll probably both walk to be sure they don't take the same train," suggested a commercial traveler from Cincinnati, who had just come from New Orleans. "Their friends are doing their best to keep them apart. They both have a reputation for being quick on the trigger."

"Bosh!" exclaimed Griswold. "I dare say it's all a newspaper story. There's no knife-and-pistol nonsense in the south any more. They'll both go home and attend to their business, and that will be the last of it. The people of North Carolina ought to be proud of Dangerfield; he's one of the best governors they ever had. And Osborne is a first-class man, too, one of the old Palmetto families."

The discussion had begun to bore Griswold, and he went back to his own section, having it in mind to revise a lecture he was preparing on "The Right of Search on the High Seas." It had grown dark, and the car was brilliantly lighted. There were not more than half a dozen other persons in his sleeper, and these were widely scattered. Having taken an inventory of his belongings to be sure they were all at hand, he became conscious of the presence of a young lady in the opposite section. In the seat behind her sat an old colored women in snowy cap and apron, who was evidently the young lady's servant. Griswold was aware that this dusky duenna bristled and frowned and pursed her lips in the way of her picturesque kind as he glanced at her, as though his presence were an intrusion upon her mistress, who sat withdrawn to the extreme corner of her section, seeking its fullest seclusion, with her head against a pillow, and the tips of her suede shoes showing under her gray traveling skirt on the further half of the section. She twirled idly in her fingers a half-opened white rosebud—a fact unimportant in itself, but destined to linger long in Griswold's memory. The pillow afforded the happiest possible background for her brown head, her cheek bright with color, and a profile clear-cut, and just now—an impression due, perhaps, to the slight quiver of her nostrils and the compression of her lips—seemingly disdainful of the world.

The black woman rose and ministered to her mistress, muttering in kind monotone consolatory phrases from which "chile" and "honey" occasionally reached Griswold's ears. The old mammy produced from a bag several toilet bottles, a fresh handkerchief, a hand mirror and a brush, which she arranged in the empty seat.

"Thank you, Aunt Phoebe, I'm feeling much better. Just let me alone now, please."

The girl put aside the white rose for a moment and breathed deeply of the vinaigrette, whose keen, pungent odor stole across the aisle to Griswold. She bent forward, took up the hand mirror, and brushed the hair away from her forehead with half a dozen light strokes. She touched her handkerchief to the cologne flask, passed it across her eyes, and then took up the rose again and settled back with a little sigh of relief. In her new upright position her gaze rested upon Griswold's newspapers, which he had flung down on the empty half of his section. One of them had fallen open and lay with its outer page staring with the bold grin of display type.

TWO GOVERNORS AT WAR!

What Did the Governor of North Carolina Say to the Governor of South Carolina?

The color deepened in the girl's face; a slight frown gathered in her smooth forehead; then she called the colored woman and a brief colloquy followed between them. In a moment Griswold was addressed in a tone and manner at once condescending and deferential.

"If yo' please, suh, would yo' all 'low my mistus t' look at yo' newspapahs?"

"Certainly. Take them along."

Griswold noted with surprise the girl's immediate absorption in the telegrams from New Orleans relating to the difficulty between the two governors.

As she read she lost, he thought, something of her splendid color, and at one point in her reading her face went white for a moment, and Griswold saw the paper wrinkle under the tightening grasp of her hands. The tidings from New Orleans had undoubtedly aroused her indignation. She seemed to lose account of her surroundings, and several times Griswold was quite sure that he heard her half exclaim: "Preposterous! Infamous!"

When she had finished the New Orleans telegrams she cast the offending newspapers from her, then, recalling herself, summoned the black woman, and returned them to Griswold, the dusky agent expressing the elaborate thanks of her race for his courtesy. The girl had utterly ignored Griswold, and she now pulled down the curtain at her elbow with a snap and turned her face away from him.

Exhibition of Maine Heirlooms.

The Maine town fairs are great places to see family heirlooms which have been handed down from generation to generation without suffering wear or change.

Among the curious old pieces shown at Green fair were a blue spread 150 years old, done by an ancestor of Mrs. Mehitable Mower; a towel woven by one of Burgoyne's soldiers while a captive in the revolution, a curious pitchpipe of wood used by Solomon Jackson while chorister in a Winthrop church in 1800, and old iron dishes shown by Mrs. Ann L. Fogg. Then there were Mrs. Fred B. Parker's "pumpkin hood," old-fashioned straw bonnet and home-woven articles and much pewter ware belonging to Aunt Polly Sawyer. A bedspread 125 years old, made by Mrs. Dorcas Dearborn, was shown by Augusta Daggett, who also had a hand carved hatchet for combing flax.—Kennebec (Me.) Journal.

Height and Heft Count.

Men weighing less than 150 pounds are said to have been discharged from certain railroad workshops. Men weighing more than 190 pounds, unless usually tall, have been "released" as street car conductors as too fat to thread the thronged aisles. Men over 40 find it hard to get jobs because they are too old. Men under 25 find promotion difficult because they are too young. Will the world's work presently all be done by men between 25 and 35 and of medium height and thickness? And what will all the others do?

Her Gaming Table.

While men are accorded the gaming table, the horse race, and similar diversions, women must resort to the bargain counter to satisfy their inherent desire to get all they can without a fair return.—Miss Sophronisba Breckenridge.

WORTH KNOWING

Simple But Powerful Prescription for Rheumatism and Lame Back.

This was previously published here and cured hundreds, "Get one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound and one ounce Toris Compound. Then get half a pint of good whiskey and put the other two ingredients into it. Use a tablespoonful of this mixture before each meal and at bed time. Shake the bottle each time." Good effects are felt the first day. Any druggist has these ingredients on hand or will quickly get them from his wholesale house.

Not Willing to Commit Himself.

The teacher had called upon Freddie Brown to give an illustration of the proper manner in which to compare the adjective "clean."

"Mother is clean," said he, falteringly, "father is—cleaner—" Here he paused.

And," prompted the teacher.

Freddy was still silent and very thoughtful.

"Haven't you some other relative?" asked the teacher, smiling.

"Oh, yes," replied Freddie, "there's auntie—but I ain't sure about her!"

HOW A DOCTOR CURED SCALP DISEASE

"When I was ten or twelve years old I had a scalp disease, something like scald head, though it wasn't that. I suffered for several months, and most of my hair came out. Finally they had a doctor to see me and he recommended the Cuticura Remedies. They cured me in a few weeks. I have used the Cuticura remedies, also, for a breaking out on my hands and was benefited a great deal. I haven't had any more trouble with the scalp disease. Miss Jessie F. Buchanan, R. F. D. 3, Hamilton, Ga., Jan. 7, 1909."

Kept with Barnum's Circus

P. T. Barnum, the famous circus man, once wrote: "I have had the Cuticura Remedies among the contents of my medicine chest with my shows for the last three seasons, and I can cheerfully certify that they were very effective in every case which called for their use."

"Do you think baseball will ever get a foothold in England?"

"Well, no. They serve tea between innings, I understand."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials

THE AGILE ESKIMO.

Habit Enables Him to Scale Ice Clad Heights With Ease.

"In all my experience I had never encountered a rougher, more difficult country in which to hunt than in Ellesmere Land," writes Harry Whitney in Outing. "Ordinarily I should have believed these mountain sides, with walls of smooth rock sheathed with a crust of hard ice and snow, quite unscalable.

"In places they were almost perpendicular. Rarely did they offer a crevice to serve as foot or hand hold, and jutting points and firm set bowlders were too widely scattered to be of much help.

"In this his native land the Eskimo has a decided advantage over the white hunter. His lifetime of experience has taught him to scale these ice clad heights with a nimbleness and ease that are astounding. He is quite fearless, and even the mountain sheep is not his superior as a climber.

"As if by magic and with little apparent effort the two Eskimos flew up the slippery walls, far outstripping me. How they did it I shall never know. Now and again I was forced to cut steps in the ice or I should inevitably have lost my footing and been hurled downward several hundred feet to the rocks beneath.

"I was astonished even at my own progress, and when I paused to glance behind me I felt a momentary panic. But there was no turning back, and one look robbed me of any desire to try it.

"The Eskimo has no conception of distance. He is endowed with certain artistic instincts which enable him to draw a fairly good map of a coast line with which he is thoroughly familiar, but he cannot tell you how far it is from one point to another. Often when Eskimos told me a place we were bound for was very close at hand it developed that we were far from it. This they are never sure of and cannot indicate.

"The Eskimos have a white man 'stung to death' from every point of view. They not only can go to sleep promptly, but sleep soundly and well as they travel when circumstances permit. They get sustenance, too, by eating hard frozen walrus and seal meat or blubber. This I could never do, for it is so strong in flavor that it invariably nauseated me, though I did succeed very well with raw hare or deer's meat when I had it."

BLUNDERING REPORTERS.

Mistakes That Mangled the Speakers' Words and Feelings.

"Drunkenness is folly!" earnestly exclaimed Bishop Magee in the house of lords on a celebrated occasion. How horrified was the prelate to read in the papers next morning that he had given utterance to the very bacchanalian sentiment, "Drunkenness is jolly!"

Lord Salisbury was a master phrasemaker, but one of his best points was spoiled when a careless reporter turned his reference to "manacles and Manitoba" into the meaningless "manacles and men at the bar."

Sir William Harcourt was badly misquoted once. "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" he exclaimed upon the platform, but a country paper had it: "Great Dinah! What a farce is this!"

Lack of knowledge of familiar quotations is a prolific source of misreporting. For instance, a speaker once made use of the well known lines from Milton's "L'Allegro:"

> But come, thou goddess, fair and free,
> In heaven yclept Euphrosyne.

The country reporter deputed to "take him down" was in despair. He could not make head or tail of this mysterious utterance. But, following the sound as far as possible, he seized his pen and produced the following gem:

> But comne, thou goddess, fair and free.
> In heaven she crept and froze her knee.

The speaker was taken down in more senses than one.—London Answers.

AND AGAIN IOWA LEADS

An Iowa farmer was the first one to receive $10 a hundred for his hogs at the Union Stock Yards, Chicago. In other words, he was the first man in half a century to realize this price on market hogs. He had something like sixty-six hogs, and from this number carried home a $2,000 draft. It is not so surprising, after all, that an Iowa man should make this record, because if all the hogs that are marketed from the Hawkeye state in one year were sent to the Union Stock Yards in Chicago, the number would be practically 50 per cent of all the hogs received from all other states.—Homestead.

CORWITH IS WAKING UP

The merchants of Corwith are awakening to the fact that a concentrated and unanimous action on their part is necessary to hold their trade in this day and age. All the stores there held a special sale on March 10, 11 and 12, and advertised their sales very generously and as a result the Corwith Hustler the last two weeks contained nineteen columns of live, home ads. The Corwith merchants are alive to the needs of the present day. By judicious advertising and by using the people right when they come to your store, is the best way to successfully compete with the mail order concerns.

GRAND JURY INDICTMENTS

The Hancock county grand jury returned fourteen indictments jointly against O. H. and E. L. Stilson of Corwith, for receiving deposits of money in the First State Bank of Corwith at a time when they knew, so the charges read, that the bank was in an insolvent condition. The bank was later placed in the hands of a receiver, following the absconding of Cashier Standring. In addition to the above indictments returned against the two parties, there are two others against O. H. Stilson alone, it being claimed that he knew of false statements made in the reports of the condition of the bank.

The parties were arrainged Friday and their bonds placed at $5.000 on the joint indictments and $1,000 on the two. Tuesday they plead not guilty and asked for an immediate trial.—Kanawha Record.

THE MOTHER AND THE BOY

Childish Confidences That Should Never Be Repelled, But Always Encouraged.

A boy's heart is full and overflowing. He needs some one who will listen to his confidences. If he is repelled and finds himself alone, he becomes fretful, indolent or worse. His affairs are not "nonsense." A good mother never says: "Run away; I am busy." She listens, encourages.

Important discoveries may be made in these outpourings. She gives sympathy, enters into his feelings, sees things from his point of view. If he tells her of something which proves that he is at fault, she does not reprimand at the time, because this will check further confidences. She gives her attention quietly, tells him she is glad he has confided in her, and that she will talk of it again to him.

If a mother has insight she can solve many problems. She is interested in her boy's sports, collections, his school and companions. The choice of his companions should not be left to chance. It is well if they are from families known to his parents.

America's Opportunity in Turkey.

Dr. George Washburn, president of Robert college, 1870-1903, writes:

"It is a great opportunity, a wonderful opportunity, and it is a call especially to Americans. They believe in us now in Turkey. They trust us. There is nobody they believe in and trust as they do Americans in Turkey. They know that we have no selfish ends in view there. We do not want any of their territory; we are not going to try to overthrow the Turkish government; and they understand fully that what we are doing there we are doing for their good. They may think we make mistakes, but they know we are honest, and they know we are doing it for their good. They trust us as they trust nobody else, and consequently it is a great opportunity, a wonderful opportunity, for us to go on and to try to make the people understand who Christ is and what Christ is to the world."

"Their paws," answered the next.

"Very good. And, now, the next boy, what do little boys swim with?"

"Bathing-pants, mum!"

WHAT'S THE USE

Sticking to a Habit When It Means Discomfort?

Old King Coffee knocks subjects out tolerably flat at times, and there is no possible doubt of what did it. A Mich. woman gives her experience:

"I used to have liver trouble nearly all of the time and took medicine which relieved me only for a little while. Then every once in a while I would be suddenly doubled up with an awful agony in my stomach. It seemed as though every time I took a breath I would die. No one could suffer any more and live.

"Finally I got down so sick with catarrh of the stomach that I could not turn over in bed, and my stomach did not digest even milk. The doctor finally told me that if I did not give up drinking coffee I would surely die, but I felt I could not give it up

"However, Husband brought home a package of Postum and it was made strictly according to directions. It was the only thing that would stay on my stomach, and I soon got so I liked it very much.

"Gradually I began to get better, and week by week gained in strength and health. Now I am in perfect condition, and I am convinced that the whole cause of my trouble was coffee drinking, and my getting better was due to leaving off coffee and drinking Postum.

"A short time ago I tasted some coffee and found, to my astonishment, that I did not care anything about it. I never have to take medicine any more. I hope you will use this letter for the benefit of those suffering from the poisonous effects of coffee."

CUT WIFE'S THROAT

George Channon Attempts Murder With a Razor.

AT HOME OF WOMAN'S PARENTS

Couple Had Been Estranged for Two Weeks, But Apparently a Reconciliation Had Been Effected —Taken to Hospital.

Des Moines, Mar. 14.—George Channon, a plasterer, attacked his wife at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Burgess, South Fifth and Harrison streets, cut her throat with a razor and made his escape from the scene of his crime. Mrs. Channon lies at the point of death as the result of her terrible wounds. She is a patient at Mercy hospital.

Channon was captured within an hour after the tragedy occurred, just as he entered the home of his father, John Channon, at 1213 Fillmore street and when taken to the police station made a confession.

The Channons have been married for ten years and are the parents of two boys, George and Harry, aged 4 and 7 years, respectively. The family lived at 1750 East Grand avenue until two weeks ago, when Mrs. Channon left her husband and went to the home of her father, taking her boys with her. The fact that the man was addicted to drink was given as the reason for her action.

Saturday night Channon went to the Burgess home at 10:30 o'clock, ostensibly on a mission of peace. He was invited into the house and ate lunch with his wife. The other members of the household had retired. After the meal Mr. and Mrs. Channon went to the latter's room on the second floor of the Burgess home, and it was there, shortly after midnight, that the tragedy occurred.

HUBBELL WINS BIG SUIT

Judge McHenry Says Contention of Milwaukee Railroad Company Makes "Comedy of Errors."

Des Moines, Mar. 14.—The Des Moines Union railroad was completely vindicated of the charges of fraud made against it by the Milwaukee railroad and by Judge McHenry of the district court was declared to be the owner of the mile of track involved in the $1,000,000 suit brought against it by the Milwaukee road.

The suit, which was on trial in the district court for three weeks was one brought by the Milwaukee railroad in an effort to establish a clear title to a mile of railroad track in the heart of Des Moines. The company claimed it purchased the track from F. M. Hubbell, owner of the Des Moines Union, at the time it purchased the line of the old Des Moines Northern & Western of which Mr. Hubbell was also an owner.

Mr. Hubbel claimed that the eastern terminus of the track sold to the Milwaukee was at West Twenty-eighth street and not Farnham street as the company claimed. Judge McHenry supported him in his claim.

"The Milwaukee railroad has failed to prove fraud. It purchased the road from Twenty-eighth street to Boone, got what it paid for and was not defrauded in the action. The decree of this court is for the defendant, establishing its right and ownership to the property."

SUCCESSFUL AUTO SHOW ENDS

More Than 16,000 People Saw Exhibition During the Week—Local Dealers Pleased.

Des Moines, Mar. 14.—With the honking of horns and the bellowing of sirens, Des Moines' first automobile show closed in the Coliseum shortly after 10 o'clock Saturday night.

President W. E. Moyer of the Des Moines Automobile Dealers' association, which conducted the show, said that 16,000 people paid admissions to the show during the five days.

"The show was positively the most successful one ever held in the middle west," said President Moyer. "It was not as large as the Chicago or St. Louis shows, but in proportion to our field we attracted more people than either of those exhibitions."

SYNOPSIS.

Thomas Ardmore, bored millionaire, and Henry Maine Griswold, professor in the University of Virginia, take trains out of Atlanta, Griswold to his college, Ardmore in pursuit of a girl who had winked at him two days before, as their trains stood opposite each other.

Prof. Griswold's eyes wandered repeatedly from his manuscript to the car ceiling, then furtively to the uncompromisingly averted shoulder and head of the young lady, then back to his lecture notes, until he was weary of the process.

The alligator-hide suit-case thrust under the seat bore the familiar label of a Swiss hotel where Griswold had once spent a week, and spoke of the girl's acquaintance with an ampler world. When Phoebe had brought it forth the initials "B. O." in small black letters suggested Baltimore & Ohio to Griswold's lazy speculations, whereupon he reflected that while Baltimore was plausible, the black servant eliminated Ohio; and as every Virginian knows every other Virginian, he tried to identify her with Old Dominion family names beginning with O, but without result.

He went out to supper, secured the only remaining table for two, and was giving his order when the young lady appeared. She had donned her hat, and as she stood a moment in the entrance, surveying the line of tables, her distinction was undeniable. There were but two vacant places in the car, one facing Griswold, the other across the aisle at a larger table where three men were engaged in animated discussion. The girl viewed the prospect with evident disappointment as the waiter drew out the vacant chair at Griswold's table. She carried herself bravely, but wore still a triste air that touched Griswold's sympathy. He rose, told the waiter that he would sit at the other table, and the girl murmured her thanks with a forlorn little smile as she took his seat.

The appearance of Griswold aroused the Mississippian to a renewal of the discussion of the New Orleans incident. He was in excellent humor, and had carried to the car a quart bottle, which he pushed toward Griswold:

"As the governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina—"

"No, thank you," and as he spoke Griswold's eyes fell upon the girl, and he saw annoyance written fleetingly on her face.

"Well, sir," the Mississippian declared, "after you left us awhile ago we got to talking about Dangerfield and his trouble with Osborne. There's something back of this rumpus. You see, if they lived in the same state you might account for a fierce rivalry between them. Both of 'em, for example, might have the senatorial bee in their bonnets; but either one of 'em could make the senate any time he pleased. I guess they're the two biggest men in the south right now. They're too big to be touchy about any small matter; that's why I reckon there's something behind this little racket over there at New Orleans. No passing remark would send men off that way, so wild that they wouldn't travel on the same train together. Why, gentlemen—"

"Please pass the salt," interposed Griswold.

The Mississippian enjoyed the sound of his own voice, which boomed out above the noise of the train with broad effects of dialect that these types will not be asked to reproduce. Griswold's eyes had again met those of the girl opposite, and there was, he felt, a look of appeal in them. The discussion distressed her, just as the telegrams from New Orleans in the afternoon papers had distressed her, and Griswold began at once to entertain his table companions with his views on a number of national political issues that were as vital to Arizona or Wyoming as to the Carolinas

When he went back into the car at 11 o'clock he found the girl and her maid still sitting in their sections though most of the other berths, including his own, had been made up. The train was slowing down, and, wishing a breath of air before retiring, he went to the rear platform of the sleeper, which was the last car of the train. The porter had opened the door in the vestibule to allow the brakeman to run back with his torpedoes. The baggage car had developed a hot box, and, jumping out. Griswold saw lanterns flashing ahead where the trainmen labored with the sick wheel. The porter vanished, leaving Griswold alone. The train had stopped at the edge of a small town, whose scattered houses lay darkly against the hills beyond. The platform lamps of a station shone a quarter of a mile ahead. The feverish steel yielded reluctantly to treatment, and Griswold went forward and watched the men at work for a few minutes, then returned to the end of the train. He swung himself into the vestibule and leaned upon the guard rail, gazing down the track toward the brakeman's lantern. Then he grew impatient at the continued delay and dropped down again, pacing back and forth in the road-bed behind the becalmed train. The night was overcast, with hints of rain in the air, and a little way from the rear lights it was pitch dark. Griswold felt sure that the train would not leave without the brakeman, and he was further reassured by the lanterns of the trainmen beside the baggage car. Suddenly, as he reached the car and turned to retrace his steps, a man sprang up, seemingly from nowhere, and accosted him.

"I reckon y'u're the gov'nor, ain't y'u?"

"Yes, certainly, my man. What can I do for you?'" replied Griswold, instantly.

"I reckoned it was y'u when y'u fust come out on the platform. I'm app'inted to tell y'u, gov'nor, that if y'u have Bill Appleweight arrested in South Car'lina, y'u'll get something one of these days y'u won't like. And if y'u try to find me y'u'll get it quicker. Good night, gov'nor."

"Good night!" stammered Griswold.

The least irony had crept into the word governor as the man uttered it and slipped away into the darkness. The shadows swallowed him up; the frogs in the ditch, beside the track chanted dolorously; then the locomotive whistled for the brakeman, whose lantern was already bobbing toward the train.

As Griswold swung himself into the vestibule the girl who had borrowed his newspapers turned away hurriedly and walked swiftly before him to her section. The porter, who was gathering her things together, said, as she paused in the aisle by her seat:

"Beginnin' to get ready, Miss Osbo'n. We're gwine intu Columbia 30 minutes late all account dat hot box."

Griswold passed on to the smoking compartment and and lighted a cigar. His acquaintances of the supper table had retired, and he was glad to be alone with his thoughts before the train reached Columbia. He dealt harshly with himself for his stupidity in not having associated the girl's perturbation over the breach between the governor of North Carolina and the governor of South Carolina with the initials on her traveling bag; he had been very dull, but it was clear to him now that she was either the daughter or some other near relative of Gov. Osborne. In a few minutes she would leave the train at Columbia, where the governor lived, and, being a gentleman, he would continue on his way to Richmond, and thence to the university, and the incident would be closed. But Griswold was a lawyer, and he had an old-fashioned southern lawyer's respect for the majesty of law. On the spur of curiosity or impulse he had received a threatening message intended for the governor of South Carolina, who, from the manner of the delivery of the message, had been expected on this train. Griswold argued that the man who had spoken to him had been waiting at the little station near which they had stopped, in the hope of seeing the governor; that the waiting messenger had taken advantage of the unexpected halt of the train, and, further, that some suggestion of the governor in his own appearance had deceived the stranger. He felt the least bit guilty at having deceived the man, but it was now clearly his duty to see that the governor was advised of the threat that had been communicated in so unusual a manner.

He was pondering whether he should do this in person or by letter or telegram, when the rattle of the train over the switch frogs in the Columbia yards brought him to the point of decision.

The porter thrust his head into the compartment.

"Columbia, sah. Yo' berth's all ready, sah. Yo' gwine t' Richmond—yes, sah."

His hands were filled with the young lady's luggage. The lettering on the suit-case seemed, in a way, to appeal to Griswold and to fix his determination.

"Porter! Put my things off. I'll wait here for the morning train."

CHAPTER II.

The Absence of Gov. Osborne.

Griswold spent the night at the Saluda house, Columbia, and rose in the morning with every intention of seeing Gov. Osborne, or some one in authority at his office, as soon as possible and proceeding to Richmond without further delay. As he scanned the morning newspaper at breakfast he read with chagrin this item, prominently head-lined:

"Gov. Osborne, who was expected home from the Cotton Planters' convention yesterday morning, has been unavoidably detained in Atlanta by important personal business. Miss Barbara Osborne arrived last night and proceeded at once to the governor's mansion.

"Several matters of considerable importance await the governor's return. Among these is the matter of dealing with the notorious Bill Appleweight. It is understood that the North Carolina officials are unwilling to arrest Appleweight, though his hiding-place is in the hills on the border near Kildare is well known. Although he runs back and forth across the state line at pleasure, he is a North Carolinian beyond question, and it's about time Gov. Dangerfield took note of the fact. However, the governor of South Carolina may be relied on to act with his usual high sense of public duty in this matter."

Prof. Griswold was not pleased to learn that the governor was still absent from the capital. He felt that he deserved better luck after the trouble he had taken to warn the governor. It was now Tuesday; he had no further lectures at the university until the following Monday, and after he had taken his bearings of Columbia, where it occurred to him he had not an acquaintance, he walked toward the capitol with a well-formed idea of seeing the governor's private secretary—and, if that person appeared to be worthy of confidence, apprising him of the governor's danger.

It was not yet nine o'clock when he entered the governor's office. He waited in the reception-room, adjoining the official chamber, but the several desks of the clerical staff remained unoccupied. He chafed a bit as time passed and no one appeared, for his north-bound train left at 11, and he could not fairly be asked to waste the entire day here. He was pacing the floor, expecting one of the clerks to appear at any moment, when a man entered hurriedly, walked to the closed inner door, shook it impatiently, and kicked it angrily as he turned away. He was a short, thickset man of 35, dressed in blue serge, and his movements were quick and nervous. He growled under his breath and swung round upon Griswold as though to tax him with responsibility for the closed door.

"Has no one been here this morning?" he demanded, glaring at the closed desks.

"If you don't count me I should answer no," replied Griswold quietly.

"Oh!"

The two gentlemen regarded each other for a moment, contemptuous dislike clearly written on the smaller man's face, Griswold half-smiling and indifferent.

"I am waiting for the governor," remarked Griswold, thinking to gain information.

"Then you're likely to wait some time," jerked the other. "The whole place seems to be abandoned. I never saw such a lot of people."

"Not having seen them myself, I must reserve judgment," Griswold remarked, and the blue serge suit flung out of the room.

Presently another figure darkened the entrance, and the colored servant whom Griswold had seen attending Miss Osborne on the train from Atlanta swept into the reception-room and, grandly ignoring his presence, sat down in a chair nearest the closed door of the inner chamber. Griswold felt that this was encouraging, as implying some link between the governor and his domestic household and he was about to ask the colored woman if she knew the business hours of the office when the closed door opened and Miss Osborne appeared on the threshold. The colored woman rose, and Griswold, who happened to be facing the door when it swung open with such startling suddenness, stared an instant and bowed profoundly.

"I beg your pardon, but I wish very much to see Gov. Osborne or his secretary."

Miss Osborne, in white, trailing a white parasol in her hand, and with white roses in her belt, still stood half withdrawn inside the private office.

"I am very sorry that Gov. Osborne and his secretary are both absent," she answered, and the two eyed each other gravely. Griswold felt that the brown eyes into which he looked had lately known tears; but she held her head high, with a certain defiance, even.

Where Belshazzar Feasted.

German excavators in the ruins of Babylon have been looking over Nebuchadnezzar's palace. The ancient city is buried beneath the remnants of superimposed buildings, but the tomb of the old civilization has been made to yield its secrets. There has been found the great oblong hall, with an alcove for the throne, where Belshazzar held the famous feast and heard the warning voice of the prophet. Many relics of those precursors of the modern public dinner have been discovered. The architecture of those days seems to have been mighty. One of the outer walls of the palace was more than 24 yards thick.

Cotton growing is being resumed in Palestine. An extensive suitable area is available. During our civil war cotton was cultivated there on an extensive scale, of which several old cotton presses still bear witness. It is said that the cotton was of very good quality. Companies are being organized. In Turkey of late years a distinct revival of the cotton industry has become manifest.

MESERVEY

From the Messenger:

Joe Courtney is sick with the mumps this week.

Bill Smith, our new butcher, met with quite a painful accident the first of the week. He was cutting meat when the knife slipped from his hand and in trying to catch it, it fell across the back of his thumb cutting quite a deep gash.

Mr. Bert Thompson and son George who have been visiting with relatives and friends in Meservey for the past few weeks, left Monday for their home in Dakota.

Miss Martha Wickersheim returned the latter part of last week from Des Moines where she had been taking a course in millinery. Miss Wickersheim brought back a stock of millinery with her and will start a store here in a few days.

Saved a Soldier's Life

Facing death from shot and shell in the civil war was more agreeable to J. A. Stone, of Kemp, Tex., than facing it from what doctors said was consumption. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed a cough, that stuck to me in spite of all remedies for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. I now weigh 178 pounds." For coughs, colds, la grippe, asthma, hemorrhage, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough and lung trouble it's supreme. 50c. 1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by the Old Reliable Drug Store.

DEDICATION EASTER SUNDAY

This paper has been requested to announce that the new Methodist Episcopal church at Garner will be dedicated on Easter Sunday, March 27, 1910. Bishop W. S. Lewis will preach in the morning at 10:45 o'clock, and our people are all cordially invited to attend. This new church is a magnificent edifice and one in which Garner people take a justifiable pride. Plan to attend the dedicatory service.

Miss Verne Baumgartner, of Miller, visited here last week.

Henry A. Josten, Emil Lau, Jos. Johnson and Herman Priebe returned Saturday from Chicago where they had been with shipments of stock.

The lecture by L. B. Wickersham last Friday night was not as well attended as it should have been. The speaker is, to our notion, the best one we have had in our course this season, and he deserved a packed house. He spoke on the subject "Day Dreams," and there was a good lesson for everyone in his address. It is to be regretted, but nevertheless it is true, that the guarantors on the lecture course this winter will have to make good a deficit of some $16. The course was a good one, but it seems a little too high-priced. It is seldom one gets the chance to hear a man like Wickersham in a town of this size and those who failed to hear him last Friday night missed a treat.

SCHOOL ELECTION

The school election for the Independent District of Klemme was held last Monday and a good vote was polled. F. A. Arnold and T. Blank were elected directors for the three year term. The vote for directors for the two year term was most awfully close, Tom Elder and C. L. Yahnke running a tie, and John Baumgartner only one vote behind them. John Waterman received the largest number of votes for this office. To decide between Tom Elder and C. L. Yahnke, their names were placed in a hat and the first name drawn was declared elected—and Mr. Elder was the lucky man. H. C. Lau was elected treasurer for two years. The vote follows:

For directors—3-year term:
F. A. Arnold	52
T. Blank	43
A. Wellemeyer	39
Wm. Fuller.....	27
For directors—2-year term:

COOPER FOLLOWERS GIVE REASON FOR THEIR BELIEF

With a theory that human health is dependent on the stomach and with a medicine which he says proves this theory, L. T. Cooper, a comparatively young man, has built up an immense following during the past year.

Cooper has visited most of the leading cities of the country, and in each city has aroused a storm of discussion about his beliefs and his medicines. Wherever he has gone, people have called upon him by tens of thousands, and his preparation has sold in immense quantities.

The sale of this medicine has now spread over the entire country, and is growing enormously each day. In view of this, the following statements from two of the great number of followers which he now has, are of general interest.

N. V. Marsh, residing at 217 South Daly street, Los Angeles, Cal., has the following to say upon the subject of the Cooper preparations:

"For more than a year I experienced the most intense suffering, due to a form of stomach trouble which the doctors called catarrhal gastritis. After eating I would fill up with gas, which caused frequent belching. The abdominal area would expand until I could scarcely breathe, causing great distress. At such times I could not keep still, but paced the streets for hours until the pain subsided.

"Frequently I went without eating rather than endure the torture that was sure to follow. Liquids were the only kind of food I could partake of with safety. I had spells of dizziness, and became badly run down through suffering and lack of proper nourishment. I tried various remedies in search of relief, but they failed to help me.

"Some time ago a brother member in a lodge to which I belong urged me to try the Cooper remedies, which were then being demonstrated in Los Angeles. He stated that to his personal knowledge they had been of great benefit to others in a like condition, and on the strength of his recommendation I procured a treatment of Cooper's New Discovery.

"It proved helpful from the first dose, and in less than a week I was eating regularly and heartily, without experiencing any bad effects afterward. Since taking the full treatment I am perfectly well and enjoy living for the first time in many months. Now I can eat a hearty supper, then go to bed and sleep like a healthy boy. I feel so well that I can hardly realize I am the same man. Cooper's New Discovery has worked a marvelous change in me—it has done all that was claimed for it."

Another statement by Mr. W. B. Stewart, 109 W. Madison street, Chicago, is as follows: "I have had stomach trouble for years, and anyone who is afflicted this way knows what an awful distressed feeling it causes. Many a time I have felt that I would give most any price to be cured. It was by accident that I heard of this man Cooper's remedies. I immediately made up my mind to buy a treatment of him. I used it for about two weeks, and it is impossible to tell how much good it has done me. I feel altogether different. I have more life and energy than I have had for years. The medicine certainly does stimulate and strengthen the whole system. Tired feeling and weak condition of the stomach has entirely passed away. I feel well again."

Cooper's New Discovery is sold by all druggists. If your druggist cannot supply you, we will forward you the name of a druggist in your city who will. Don't accept "something just as good."—The Cooper Medicine Co., Dayton, Ohio.

Technically Discussed.

"So there is to be a divorce," said the woman who discusses everybody. "It seems but a little while since he asked for her hand."

"Yes," replied the rude man. "He got the hand all right. But it turned out to be a misdeal."

COL. ROOSEVELT IS AT KHARTUM

Ex-President Again in Touch with Civilization.

GREETED BY MANY FRIENDS

Wife and Daughter Among Those Who Journey to Egyptian Frontier City to Welcome Distinguished Traveler and Hunter.

Khartum, Egypt.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt arrived at this place on Monday, and was received officially by Gen. Sir Reginald Wingate, governor general of the Sudan, on behalf of both the Egyptian and English governments. The ex-president was met here by Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Ethel and by a host of American and European correspondents and numerous delegations of political and other friends from the United States. In fact this historic town is literally filled with visitors brought here to greet the returning traveler.

With his arrival at this place, Col. Roosevelt completed one of the most notable journeys through the wilderness of Africa that has been undertaken since the days of Livingstone and Stanley. It was a remarkable journey both in number of animals slain and preserved as specimens, and because of its lack of accidents and sickness of every kind. Ordinarily a traveler, through the regions through which Col. Roosevelt has passed, comes out of the jungues loaded with malaria and fever germs. Up to the present time, neither Col. Roosevelt nor any of his party have shown any symptoms of having contracted any of the numerous contagious diseases.

Gen. Sir Reginald Wingate provided countless ways for the entertainment of his distinguished guest. Representatives of the many tribes of the desert have been gathered here into one great encampment, and for Col. Roosevelt's entertainment, have indulged in every possible form of native amusement, giving dances, races, etc.

Route of Col. Roosevelt's Journey Down the Nile.

The town of Khartum is a mass of color. Flags of Egypt, England and America are everywhere, and the ex-president has probably appreciated nothing more than the opportunity of visiting this historical spot.

Khartum is virtually built around the grave of "Chinese" Gordon. The city itself is a gigantic monument to that soldier's deeds and his heroic death. In the center of it stands his effigy in bronze, mounted on a camel, gazing with fixed eyes out toward the desert which mocked him during the terrible year that he lay there waiting for relief. Behind the statue stands the British governor's palace, an imposing structure in the Gothic style, typical of British power and British permanence.

Name Gordon Everywhere.

Not far away is the Gordon Memorial college, a school built with funds raised by Gen. Kitchener by subscription throughout Great Britain, in which the Sudanese newer generation is trained for service in the government which conquered its fathers. Everywhere throughout the city the name Gordon appears. There is the Gordon hotel, the Gordon drive and up the White Nile the Gordon tree. Gordon's memory will live so long as Khartum exists. The British have transformed the city of his death into a memorial to his glory that can laugh at time.

PYTHIANS BANQUET

After Holding District Meeting in Des Moines.

GRAND CHANCELLOR PRESENT

Secret Work of First and Third Degrees Exemplified by Team From Redfield—Many Prominent Knights Present.

Des Moines, Mar. 14—The Knights of Pythias of Des Moines and the neighboring towns held a banquet at the Knights of Pythias hall over 506 East Locust street. This was the crowning event of the Knights of Pythias convention held here. The program of the afternoon consisted of a school of instruction. In the evening the first and third degrees of the order were exemplified, the work being done by the team from Redfield. A number of prominent Knights from out of town were present. Among these were Grand Chancellor McCoy of Corydon and four of the supreme representatives, Dr. Frank Porterfield of Atlantic, Ben Salinger of Carroll, Bernard Murphy of Vinton and Senator C. C. Dowell of Des Moines. After the degree work was given a banquet was enjoyed.

Pythians Honor Knapp.

Cedar Falls.—Red Center lodge No. 83, Knights of Pythias, honored one of their charter members, Lanfear Knapp by presenting him with the knight's gold-jeweled badge set with diamonds. He was also presented with a past chancellor's certificate appropriately framed. His record is exceptional, he having been a continuous member for twenty-eight years and has occupied every position the lodge could offer. He has resided in this city for over fifty years and been justice of the peace for nearly all that period and city assessor for much of the time.

Milk Special Tour Ends.

Burlington.—The tour of the Burlington pure milk special came to an end, with a monster meeting in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium in this city. Professor Van Pelt spoke on the need of better dairying facilities and urged upon the many farmers present the importance of tests and cleanliness in every department. Many questions were asked from the audience and answered with entire satisfaction.

Prof. David J. Roberts of Wisconsin spoke of bovine tuberculosis and upheld the policy of the test for that disease. He commended the movement already taken in Burlington to prevent the spread of the disease from milk. All members of the party declare the two weeks' tour of the special was one of remarkable success.

Gen. Logan Inspects Range.

Iowa City.—Adjutant General Guy E. Logan has been inspecting the state rifle range near here with the view of purchasing more ground for the machine gun battery which will probably be installed at either Iowa City or Cedar Rapids in the near future. The head of the state militia is also making plans for making the new range ready for use this summer.

Iowa Falls G. A. R. Celebration.

Iowa Falls.—The thirty-seventh anniversary of the organization of Charles Payne post, G. A. R., of this city was elaborately celebrated at the W. R. C. hall by the members of the post and the ladies of the W. R. C. Supper was served by the latter organization at 6 o'clock and was followed by a program.

A WONDERFUL MACHINE.

That the Klondike Incubator Co. of Des Moines, Ia., have a perfect machine has been proven beyond all doubt.

Mrs. C. G. Anderson of Washington, Ia., writes: "I have had one of your hot water incubators two years. Have had great luck with it. It is 150 egg machine and I get an average hatch of 129 chicks and we lose none to speak of. I raised 500 chicks from my one little incubator, and it was the wonder of the neighborhood. It has been the means of selling several machines for you and there are more to come. We do not have any trouble raising the chicks I hatch."

TINY BABY'S PITIFUL CASE

"Our baby when two months old was suffering with terrible eczema from head to foot, all over her body. The baby looked just like a skinned rabbit. We were unable to put clothes on her. At first it seemed to be a few mattered pimples. They would break the skin and peel off leaving the underneath skin red as though it were scalds. Then a few more pimples would appear and spread all over the body, leaving the baby all raw without skin from head to foot. On top of her head there appeared a heavy scab a quarter of an inch thick. It was awful to see so small a baby look as she did. Imagine! The doctor was afraid to put his hands to the child. We tried several doctors' remedies but all failed.

"Then we decided to try Cuticura. By using the Cuticura Ointment we softened the scab and it came off. Under this, where the real matter was, by washing with the Cuticura Soap and applying the Cuticura Ointment, a new skin soon appeared. We also gave baby four drops of the Cuticura Resolvent three times daily. After three days you could see the baby gaining a little skin which would peel off and heal underneath. Now the baby is four months old. She is a fine picture of a fat little baby and all is well. We only used one cake of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. If people would know what Cuticura is there would be few suffering with eczema. Mrs. Joseph Kossmann, 7 St. John's Place, Ridgewood Heights, N. Y., Apr. 30 and May 4, '09."

Book Companionship.

Books are a guide in youth and an entertainment for age. They support us under solitude and keep us from being a burden to ourselves. They help us to forget the crossness of men and things; compose our cares and our passions; and lay our disappointments asleep. When we are weary of the living we may repair to the dead, who have nothing of peevishness, pride or design in their conversation.—Jeremy Collier.

He Was Immune.

An elderly gentleman, traveling in a stagecoach, was amused by the constant fire of words kept up between two ladies. One of them at last kindly inquired if their conversation did not make his head ache, when he answered, with a great deal of naivete, "No, ma'am; I have been married 28 years."

What's that clicking sound? Millions of white teeth—chewing fragrant WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT.

When the worst comes to the worst one may as well try to make the best of it.

STRANGE COMPANIONS.

The "Happy Family" and a Kitten and a Hawk.

The first public exhibition of a "happy family" in England was given about fifty years ago, when there were shown a monkey, a cat, several rats and three or four pigeons in one cage. The monkey was on excellent terms with the cat so long as puss would allow him to warm himself by cuddling her; otherwise he would show his vexation by slyly giving her tail a nip with his teeth.

The birds perched on the cat's back and pecked at her fur, and the rats were as friendly with their natural enemy as if she were one of their own sort.

A lady walking in the Isle of Wight observed a little kitten curled up on a mossy bank taking a midday nap. As she stopped to stroke it a hawk swooped down and, pouncing upon the kitten, hid it from sight.

The lady, fearing for the life of the kitten, tried to rescue it, but the hawk firmly faced her, stood at bay and refused to move. She hastened to a fisherman's cottage and told the inmates of the impending tragedy.

"It's always so," they said, laughing. "That hawk always comes down if any one goes near the kitten. He has taken to it and stays near at hand to watch whenever it goes to sleep."

The lady, greatly interested, made further inquiry and learned that the kitten's mother had died, after which the nursling was missed for several days. One day the hawk was seen about the cottage picking up scraps of meat and carrying them to the roof of the cottage.

The fisherman climbed up and found the lost kitten nestled in a hole in the thatch and thriving under the care of its strange foster father. It was brought down and restored to the cottage, but the hawk would not resign his charge and was always at hand to rescue the kitten from the caresses of strangers.—Philadelphia North American.

Dictionary Lore.

"Poison" and "potion" are doublets, the former being an older form of the latter. Both are derived from the Latin "potare," to drink, and "poison" in its original sense signified merely something to drink.

While the word "human" used as meaning "a human being" is now only colloquial or humorous, Lowell in the introduction to the "Biglow Papers" chided Bartlett for including it in his "Dictionary of Americanisms" and remarked that it was Chapman's habitual phrase in his translation of Homer and that it is found also in the old play of "The Hog Hath Lost His Pearl."—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

A Flame Combination.

If a small quantity of chlorate of potash be powdered and mixed with an equal quantity of powdered sugar a candle may be lighted by means of the mixture without matches.

Place a little of it in the depression around the wick of a candle that has been previously used and then touch the mixture with a glass rod the end of which has been dipped in oil of vitriol. It will burst into flame, lighting the candle.

All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Klemme - - Iowa

Klemme will miss the excitement of a municipal election this year.

A preacher came at a newspaper man in this way: You editors do not tell the truth. If you did you could not live; your newspapers would be a failure. The editor replied: You are right and the minister who will at all times and under all circumstances tell the whole truth about his members, alive or dead, will not occupy his pulpit more than one Sunday, and then he will find it necessary to leave town in a hurry. The press and the pulpit go hand in hand with whitewash brushes and pleasant words, magnifying little virtues into big ones. The pulpit, the pen and the grave stone are the great saint-making triumvirate. And the great minister went away looking very thoughtful while the editor turned to his work, and told of the unsurpassing beauty of the bride, while in fact she was as homely as a mud fence

On our return from the recent Southern trip, we are glad to learn that so good a man, and old friend and neighbor of the editor, Mr. Suckow, will become a candidate for county treasurer. Mr. Suckow is one of the foremost farmers of German township. He is an old-time resident, a solid, honest, substantial man who has made a success in his own business and will be a success in all he undertakes. Our public funds will be safe in the hands of Mr. Suckow, and the office will be conducted on business lines in every detail. The Tribune has no hesitation in recommending Mr. Suckow as a candidate, to its readers. A time tried and kindly, genial and well qualified man is before the voters asking the office at their hands.—Britt Tribune.

President Taft at Rochester, N. Y., sounded a call to the Republican party members of congress to bury their differences and proceed to the enactment of laws promised in the party's platform. He expressed the hope that the party would show that it has "the sense and the discipline" to meet its responsibilities.

LIMING GIVEN BIG RECEPTION

Eager Crowd Greets Captain on First Trip of the Season—River Deep Enough for Large Boats and in Fine Shape.

Ottumwa, Ia., Mar. 21.—Capt. L. C. Liming, of Keosauqua, with fourteen passengers in his launch, "Keosauqua," arrived in Ottumwa Saturday evening and landed amid the cheers and hand clappings of an eager crowd. The party landed at the foot of Riverside Park, just south of the Market street bridge.

Captain Liming and party in his new launch left Keosauqua at 10:30 Saturday morning and stopped at every town en route to Ottumwa.

He was given a big reception which argues well for the number of river boosters in southern Iowa. Captain Liming left Alton, Ill., last Tuesday in company with engineer J. B. Stillwell and arrived in Keosauqua Friday morning.

The cruisers will make the return trip to Keosauqua today. Captain Liming's guests, who were entertained before the waterways committee of the Ottumwa Commercial association were: Judge D. Strickler, Joseph Swires, Bert Warner and the two young sons of Liming.

The launch "Keosauqua" draws fifteen inches of water with a ten ton cargo, accommodates twenty-five passengers and can make fifteen miles an hour. Captain Liming reported that he found the river in splendid shape for launches and that it was plenty deep enough for much larger boats.

Mrs. Mode had just returned home from the country, to discover her previously well-stocked wardrobe empty. "Good gracious, Herbert,," she cried to her husband, "where are all my clothes? The Right Spirit.

Apropos of Valentine's day, a passenger on the Bermudian said:

"Mark Twain once told us, in a little Valentine day speech on this boat, of an Irish wooer who had the right Valentine spirit. Acceptance or rejection he could take with equal grace.

"'Will ye be my valentine?' he said, on February 14, to the girl he loved.

An Ungallant Outlook.

"Again, the ungallant outlook of some husbands causes divorce," said ex-Gov. Pennypacker, in a witty after-dinner speech in Philadelphia.

"It is amazing what an ungallant outlook some men have. I said one day to a Bucks county farmer:

A LITTLE THING
Changes the Home Feeling.

Coffee blots out the sunshine from many a home by making the mother, or some other member of the household, dyspeptic, nervous and irritable. There are thousands of cases where the proof is absolutely undeniable. Here is one.

A Wis. mother writes:

"I was taught to drink coffee at an early age, and also at an early age became a victim to headaches, and as I grew to womanhood these headaches became a part of me, as I was scarcely ever free from them.

"About five years ago a friend urged me to try Postum. I made the trial and the result was so satisfactory that we have used it ever since.

"My husband and little daughter were subject to bilious attacks, but they have both been entirely free from them since we began using Postum instead of coffee. I no longer have headaches and my health is perfect."

If some of these tired, nervous, irritable women would only leave off coffee absolutely and try Postum they would find a wonderful change in their life. It would then be filled with sunshine and happiness rather than weariness and discontent. And think what an effect it would have on the family, for the mood of the mother is largely responsible for the temper of the children.

GORDON'S TESTIMONY PROVES INTERESTING

Charles W. Gordon, whose picture is given above, is agent for the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company in Ogdensburg, N. Y., and resides at 78 King street, that city. In giving testimony regarding his own case, Mr. Gordon recently made the following statement:

"Some time ago, while suffering from stomach catarrh, I was advised to take Cooper's New Discovery, and did so. two bottles of the preparation putting my stomach into good condition. Previous to my taking the New Discovery I could not eat a meal without experiencing pain and discomfort afterward.

"I had been in this condition for a long time, although I had tried many different remedies in search of relief, and at last reached the conclusion that I had exhausted every available resource. Cooper's New Discovery was therefore to me almost a heaven-sent blessing, and the work of the medicine was so permanent and lasting that I have had no recurrence of my former trouble whatever.

"I can eat anything I care for without noticing any bad effects afterward. I have recommended Cooper's New Discovery to many persons of my acquaintance, and it never fails to give satisfactory results. It reaches the seat of stomach trouble in mighty short order."

Cooper's New Discovery is sold by all druggists. If your druggist cannot supply you, we will forward you the name of a druggist in your city who will. Don't accept "something just as good."—The Cooper Medicine Co., Dayton, Ohio.

A Consolation.

A young woman who had been in the habit of spending her summers in a hill village of Connecticut recently encountered a rural neighbor in a city store.

"How's your wife, Mr. Green?" inquired the young woman graciously.

"Why, don't you know," said Mr. Green, "I lost her three months ago?"

"Oh," said the shocked young woman, "I didn't know. I beg your pardon, Mr. Green, for being so thoughtless."

"Well," said the disconsolate widower soothingly, "it ain't as bad as it might have been. I've got good help."

Determining Sex.

Mark Twain says that he has always taken woman's part.

"For instance," he relates, "I once strongly reprimanded a woman out in Hannibal, Mo. Here was the occasion:

"'So this is a little girl, eh?' I said to her as she displayed her children to me. 'And this sturdy little urchin in the bib belongs, I suppose, to the contrary sex?'

"'Yassah,' the woman replied. 'Yassah, dat's a girl, too.'"—Everybody's Magazine.

Desperate Remedy.

"Yes," said the musician in a reminiscent mood, "my wife fell in love with me and married me when I was learning to play the cornet."

"Are you sure," asked his friend, "that she married you because she loved you, or to make you stop practicing on the cornet?"

Easily Explained.

"Strange," murmured the editor, "that this anecdote of George Washington has never been in print before."

"Not at all," explained the occasional contributor. "I only thought of it last night."

SYNOPSIS.

Thomas Ardmore, bored millionaire, d Henry Maine Griswold, professor in e University of Virginia, take trains t of Atlanta, Griswold to his college, rdmore in pursuit of a girl who had nked at him two days before, as their ains stood opposite each other. Gris- old is mistaken for Gov. Osborne of uth Carolina, and is threatened with rm if he causes the arrest of Bill Ap- eweight, a border line desperado. He es to Columbia to warn the governor, d meets Barbara Osborne.

CHAPTER II.—Continued.

"That is unfortunate. I stopped ere last night on purpose to see him, nd now I fear that I must leave—" nd he smiled the Griswold smile, hich was one of the secrets of his opularity at the university—"I must ave Columbia in a very few min- tes."

"The office does not keep very early ours," remarked the girl, "but some e will certainly be here in a mo- ent. I am sorry you have had to ait."

"It was not I," said Griswold, "who rudely shook the door. I beg that ou will acquit me of that violence."

The girl did not, however, respond his smile. She poked the floor with er parasol a moment, then raised er head and asked:

"Who was it, if you please?"

"A gentleman with a brown beard, red necktie, and a bad disposition."

"I thought as much," she said, half herself, and her eyes were bent gain upon the point of her parasol, ith which she was tracing a design the rug. She lifted her head with e abruptness of quick decision, and oked straight at Griswold. The egress had withdrawn to the outer oor, by which she sat with sphinx- ke immovability.

"I am Miss Osborne. Gov. Osborne my father. Would you mind telling e whether your business with my ther is—"

She hesitated, and her eyes met riswold's.

"Miss Osborne, as I have no ac- uaintances here, let me introduce yself. My name is Griswold. My ome is Charlottesville. Pardon me, t you and I were fellow-passengers om Atlanta yesterday evening. I m unacquainted with your father, nd I have no business with him ex- ept—"

He was not yet clear in his mind hether to tell her that her father's fe was threatened; it did not seem air to alarm her when he was power- ss to help; but as he weighed the uestion the girl came out into the eception-room and sat down near the indow.

"Won't you have a seat, Mr. Gris- old? May I ask you again whether ou know the gentleman who came here and beat the door awhile ago?"

"I never saw him before in my life."

"That is very well. And now, Mr. riswold, I am going to ask you to ell me, if you will, just what it is ou wish to say to my father."

She was very earnest, and the re- uest she made rang the least bit im- eriously. She now held the white arasol across her lap in the tight asp of her white-gloved hands.

"My reason for wishing to see your ther is, to warn him that if a crim- al named Appleweight is brought ack from his hiding-place on the orth Carolina frontier, and tried for s crimes in South Carolina, the overnor of that state, your father, ill be made to suffer by Apple- eight's friends."

"That is what I thought," said the rl, slowly nodding her head.

"And now, to be quite honest about Miss Osborne, I must confess that received this warning last night om a man who believed me to be e governor. To tell the truth, I told m I was the governor!"

The girl's eyes made a fresh inven- ry of Griswold, then she laughed r the first time—a light laugh of onest mirth that would not be gain- id. The beautiful color deepened in r cheeks; her eyes lighted merrily, though at the drollery of Griswold anding, so to speak, in loco parentis.

"I have my own confession to make. heard what you said to that man. I d gone to the rear platform to see hat was the matter. The stop there that preposterous place seemed in- rminable. You must have known at I listened."

"I didn't suppose you heard what at man said to me or what I said him. I don't know how I came to alm myself off as the governor—I m not in the habit of doing such ings, but it was due, I think, to the ct that I had just been saying to a iend of mine at Atlanta—"

Distress was again written in Miss Osborne's face. She had paid little heed to the latter half of Griswold's recital, though she kept her eyes fixed gravely upon him. In a moment the gentleman in blue serge who had manifested so much feeling over the governor's absence strode again into the room.

"Ah, Miss Osborne, so you are back!"

He bowed over the girl's hand with a great deal of manner, then glanced at once toward the door of the private office.

"Hasn't your father come in yet? I have been looking for him since eight o'clock."

"My father is not home yet, Mr. Bosworth."

"Not home! Do you mean to say that he won't be here to-day?"

"I hardly expect him," replied the girl calmly. "Very likely he will be at home to-night or in the morning."

Griswold had walked away out of hearing; but he felt that the girl purposedly raised her voice so that he might hear what she said.

"I must know where he is; there's an important matter waiting—a very serious matter it may prove for him if he isn't here to-day to pass on it I must wire him at once."

"Very good. You had better do so, Mr. Bosworth. He's at the Peach Tree club, Atlanta."

"Atlanta! Do you mean to say that he isn't even in this state to-day?"

"No, Mr. Bosworth, and I advise you to telegraph him immediately if your business is so urgent."

"It isn't my business, Barbara; it's the state's business; it's your father's business, and if he isn't here to attend to it by to-morrow at the latest, it will go hard with him. He has enemies who will construe his absence as meaning—"

He spoke rapidly, with rising anger, but some gesture from the girl arrested him, and he turned frowningly to see Griswold calmly intent upon an engraving at the further end of the room. The colored woman was dozing in her chair. Before Bosworth could resume, the girl spoke, her voice again raised so that every word reached Griswold.

"If you refer to the Appleweight case, I must tell you, Mr. Bosworth, that I have all confidence that my father will act whenever he sees fit."

"But the people—"

"My father is not afraid of the people," said the girl quietly.

"But you don't understand, Barbara, how much is at stake here. If some action isn't taken in that matter with in 24 hours your father will be branded as a coward by every newspaper in the state. You seem to take it pretty coolly, but it won't be a trifling matter for him."

"I believe," replied the girl, rising, "that you have said all that I care to hear from you now or at any further time, Mr. Bosworth, about this or any other matter."

"But, Barbara—"

Miss Osborne turned her back and walked to the window. Bosworth stared a moment, then rushed angrily from the room. Griswold abandoned his study of the picture, and gravely inclined his head as Bosworth passed. Then he waited a minute. The girl still stood at the window, and there was, Griswold felt, something a little forlorn in her figure. It was quite time that he was off if he caught his train for Richmond. He crossed the room, and as he approached the window Miss Osborne turned quickly.

"It was kind of you to wait. That man is the state's attorney general. You doubtless heard what he said to me."

"Yes, Miss Osborne, I could not help hearing. I did not leave, because I wished to say—"

The associate professor of admiralty in the department of law of the University of Virginia hesitated and was lost. Miss Osborne's eyes were brown, with that hint of bronze, in certain lights, that is the distinctive possession of the blessed. Health and spirit spoke in her bright color. She was tall and straight, and there was something militant in her figure as she faced Griswold.

"Mr. Griswold, I have no claim whatever on your kindness, but I am in very great distress. I don't see just where I can turn for aid to any one I know. But you as a stranger may be able to help me—if it isn't asking too much—but then I know it is asking too much!"

"Anything, anything whatever," urged Griswold kindly.

"Mr. Bosworth, the attorney general, warns me that if my father does not use the power of the state to capture this outlaw Appleweight, the results will be disastrous. He says my father must act immediately. He demanded his address, and, and—I gave it to him."

"But you must remember, Miss Osborne, that the attorney general probably knows the intricacies of this case. He must have every reason for upholding your father; in fact, it's his sworn duty to advise him in such matters as this."

"There's another side to that, Mr. Griswold," and the girl's color deepened; but she smiled and went on. It was quite evident that she was animated now by some purpose, and that she was resolved to avail herself of Griswold's proffered aid.

"This whole matter must be kept as quiet as possible. I can appeal to no one here without the risk of newspaper publicity which would do my father very great injury. But if it is not altogether too great a favor, Mr. Griswold, may I ask that you remain here until tonight—until my father returns? His secretary has been ill and is away from town. The other clerks I sent away on purpose this morning. Father had left his office keys at home, and came in to see if I could find the papers in the Appleweight case. They are there, and on the top of the packet is a requisition on the governor of North Carolina for Appleweight's return."

"Signed?"

"Signed. I'm sure he had only deferred acting in the case until his return, and he should have been back to-day."

"But of course he will be back; it is inconceivable that he should ignore, must less evade, a duty as plain as this—the governor of a state—it is preposterous! His business in Atlanta accounts for his absence. Gov. Osborne undoubtedly knows what he is about."

"My father is not in Atlanta, Mr. Griswold. He is not at the Peach Tree club, and has not been. I have not the slightest idea where my father is!"

The echoing whistle of the departing Virginia express reached them faintly as they stood facing each other before the open window in the governor's reception room.

"I Can Appeal to No One Here Without the Risk of Newspaper Publicity."

CHAPTER III.

The Jug and Mr. Ardmore.

Mr. Thomas Ardmore of New York and Ardsley, having seen his friend Griswold depart, sought a book-shop where, as in many other book-shops throughout the United States, he kept a standing order for any works touching piracy, a subject, which, as already hinted, had long afforded him infinite diversion. He had several hours to wait for his train to New Orleans, and he was delighted to find that the bookseller, whom he had known only by correspondence, had just procured for him, through the dispersion of a Georgia planter's valuable library, that exceedingly rare narrative, "The Golden Galleons of the Caribbean," by Domingeuz y Pascual—a beautifully bound copy of the original Madrid edition.

With this volume under his arm Ardmore returned to the hotel where he was lodged and completed his arrangements for leaving. It should be known that Mr. Thomas Ardmore was a person of democratic tastes and habits. In his New York house were two servants whose sole business it was to keep himself and his wardrobe presentable; yet he preferred to travel unattended.

When he had finished packing his trunk he went down to the dinner he had ordered to be in readiness at a certain hour, at a certain table, carefully chosen beforehand; for Ardmore was very exacting in such matters and had an eye to the comforts of life, as he understood them.

As he crossed the hotel lobby on his way to the restaurant he was accosted by a reporter for the Atlanta Palladium, who began to question him touching various Ardmores who were just then filling rather more than their usual amount of space in the newspapers. Ardmore's family, with the single exception of his sister, Mrs. Atchison, bored him immensely. His two brothers and another sister, the duchess of Ballywinkle, kept the family name in display type a great deal of the time, and their performances had practically driven Thomas Ardmore from New York. The reporter was a well-mannered youth and Ardmore shook his hand encouragingly. He was rather curious to see what new incident in the family history was to be the subject of inquisition, and the reporter immediately set his mind at rest.

"Pardon me, Mr. Ardmore, but is it true that your sister, the duchess of Ballywinkle, has separated from the duke?"

Ardmore hesitated and turned his head cautiously.

The Esthetic Cat.

We do not wish to underestimate the fine qualities of affection, courage and sagacity, which are the dog's, but neither do we like to see the widespread lack of appreciation for the cat's many admirable traits. Patience, endurance, good judgment, self-control, self-reliance, high spirits and industry—many or all of these are possessed by the average cat.

Under favorable conditions she will also develop a strength of affection not devoid of demonstration that is equal to the dog's.

The most esthetic souls of all times have cherished the cat. Baudelaire, Von Scheffel, Poe, De Musset, Henry Irving, and a host of other lovers of the beautiful come to mind in this connection. The silky feline, of padded footfall and mysterious wanderings, has ever appealed to the imagination, just as she has ever appealed to the sense of domestic comfort.

Make a map of your floor for the intricate places that suggest difficulties in the cutting and possible failure in the fitting of your new linoleum. The map may be a perfectly fitted size and shape, done in newspaper or even heavier manilla paper. The paste pot comes in just here. The first trial won't be perfect, but every little chink may be fitted in by a pasting process until you've got the exact facsimile, and then for the final cutting of the new oilcloth.

The forethought and trial paper will be of just the same use as is the perfect paper pattern in garment making. Try it and you will be convinced. The map is useful, whether the floor covering be carpet, oilcloth, felt, denim or matting.

Hypnotism in Medicine.

Hypnotism has been recognized by the medical profession since the fifteenth century.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Need Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

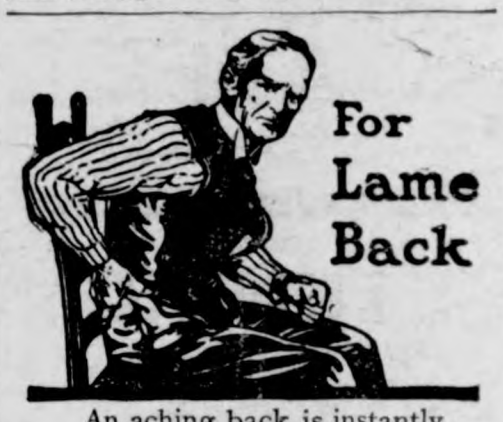
Brookfield, Mo.—"Two years ago I was unable to do any kind of work and only weighed 118 pounds. My trouble dates back to the time that women may expect nature to bring on them the Change of Life. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me feel much better, and I have continued its use. I am very grateful to you for the good health I am now enjoying."—Mrs. SARAH LOUSIGNONT, 414 S. Livingston Street, Brookfield, Mo.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female ills—inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.



For Lame Back

An aching back is instantly relieved by an application of Sloan's Liniment.

This liniment takes the place of massage and is better than sticky plasters. It penetrates—without rubbing—through the skin and muscular tissue right to the bone, quickens the blood, relieves congestion, and gives permanent as well as temporary relief.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. JAMES C. LEE, of 1100 9th St., S.E., Washington, D.C., writes: "Thirty years ago I fell from a scaffold and seriously injured my back. I suffered terribly at times; from the small of my back all around my stomach was just as if I had been beaten with a club. I used every plaster I could get with no relief. Sloan's Liniment took the pain right out, and I can now do as much ladder work as any man in the shop, thanks to

Sloan's Liniment

Mr. J. P. EVANS, of Mt. Airy, Ga., says: "After being afflicted for three years with rheumatism, I used Sloan's Liniment, and was cured sound and well, and am glad to say I haven't been troubled with rheumatism since. My leg was badly swollen from my hip to my knee. One-half a bottle took the pain and swelling out."

Sloan's Liniment has no equal as a remedy for Rheumatism, Neuralgia or any pain or stiffness in the muscles or joints.

The entertainment given in the opera house last Friday evening by the Epworth League of the German M. E church was a success in every way. The house was filled to its utmost capacity, so that the members of the League were repaid in a financial way for the labor and time they put in. The entertainment was in the nature of an advertisement for the business firms of our town, and nearly every one was represented. Some were advertised in song, some in recitations and others in dialogues. Each number is deserving of honorable mention, but time does not permit us to go into detail. Suffice it to say that all who attended seemed highly pleased with the entertainment given. It was a novelty very well gotten up and rendered in good shape.

As you will notice by his announcement in this issue, Martin Bachman is a Republican candidate for Supervisor from this district. Mart is an old settler, having lived in Avery township for 31 years, and he has every qualification necessary to make a good, efficient officer. We predict that he will make a strong race.

W E Raw, of Orthel township, has his announcement as a Republican candidate for Sheriff in our paper this week. We are not personally acquainted with Mr. Raw, but we hear that he is very well qualified for this office and he has a strong following among his many acquaintances. His candidacy should be carefully considered by our readers.

Last Sunday's stock shipments were as follows—W. R. Bloom one car of hogs, H. C. Lau two cars of hogs, Jos. Johnson one car of cattle.

Willard Secor, president of the Forest City Commercial Club, is at the head of the movement to secure the gasoline power car for the Germania-Dows branch of the C. R. I. & P. The movement has been under way for some time but has just recently been actively entered into by the various communities interested. If this is successful it would result in a greater improved passenger service on this line and would be of untold benefit to every patron of the road. The effort that is being made now is a united one, the officials and business interests of the towns affected being behind the movement. — Forest City Republican.

The public school entertainment in the opera house last evening was very largely attended. Our time is limited this morning so we are unable to give the different numbers on the program the mention they really deserve. Each and every one of the children did their parts well and their work showed the result of much careful training on the part of the teachers. The doll drill, the hoop drill and the Brownie drill were all very good—as in fact was every number on the program. It was all very highly enjoyed by all present.

Our farmers are rather slow getting into the field this spring. Other years we have seen them out when the weather was rough and the land wet, yet they were at it pell-mell. But so many seem to think the weather is too nice to keep. Still we remember seasons fully as early. In 1878 we sowed our last wheat March 7 and the last oats April 2 and planted our last corn May 7. The following year the weather broke still earlier, but was followed by a severe cold wave lasting nearly a month.

ONE USE FOR SKINS OF COWS

Youngster's Answer at Least Proved He Was Capable of Thinking for Himself.

It was examination day at a country school on the outskirts of Leeds. Six rows of neat little "tykes," with polished faces and clean collars had been carefully coached by the teacher in the difficult art of evading the pitfalls set by the wily inspector. To a boy, they were ready!

The classroom doors opened and admitted the dreadful personage.

"Now, boys," he commenced in his most insinuating manner, "can any of you tell me a few things that are made in Leeds?"

"Clothes!" said Tommy Jones.

"Right!" said the inspector.

"Engines!" yelled Sammy Jenkins.

"Right!" said the inspector.

Then the replies came to a sudden stop.

"Now, then, you bright boys, hurry up!" said his majesty. But the dreadful silence was unbroken. "Well, now, boys, what is the skin of a cow used for?" asked the examiner, in order to jog their memories.

Little Johnny Binks fell off his seat in his eagerness to be seen.

"Please sir—please, sir," he yelled, "the skin is used to keep the meat in!"—Answers.

"Why, you oughtn't to say that, pap," he drawled. "You might stumble over that stump ag'in some day."—Everybody's.

WILL IS SET ASIDE

Judge Albrook Rules on the Famous Wiltsey Case.

PROPERTY WAS WORTH $10,000

Cases Were Started Ten Years Ago and Are Probably Not Yet Ended, as Case Just Passed Upon Will Go to Supreme Court.

Webster City, Mar. 21—Judge Albrook has made a disposition of the "Wiltsey will" cases. The deeds given by Tolman Kiltsey, involving some $10,000 worth of property and made at the time he wrote his will, were declared invalid and the property conveyed by them will go to the contestants.

The Wiltsey cases were begun ten years ago and are probably not ended yet for the case just ruled upon will go to the supreme court. Upon the death of Tolman Wiltsey it was found that by will and deeds made shortly before his death he had left all his property to relatives but had cut off with nothing his illegitimate son, Eugene. When the will was presented for probate the son contested it and broke it. It conveyed only about $2,000 worth of property. This case went to the supreme court and was reversed. Upon retrial the will was broken a second time. Eugene Wiltsey died before his case was tried and his widow has since prosecuted the matter. In the cases just decided she brought action to have the deeds made by Tolman Wiltsey set aside and Judge Albrook has declared the deeds invalid. Eugene was Tolman Wiltsey's only son. The will and deeds were set aside on the grounds of undue influence upon the old man on the part of relatives to whom he willed and deeded his property.

Eight Girls Get Jail Sentence.

Des Moines.—Eight girls, leaders in the uprising at the Mitchellville Industrial school, were sentenced by Justice Cope to serve ten days in the county jail. Each pleaded guilty to a charge of rioting and attempting to destroy a certain building belonging to the state. They expressed themselves as delighted at leaving the school under the superintendency of Miss Hattie Garrison, and said they preferred going to jail to remaining. The girls charge Miss Garrison with many alleged cruelties and have asked the board of control to remove Miss Garrison and give the school to a new superintendent, preferably a man.

Spring Building at Toledo.

Toledo.—Toledo is starting the spring building season with a large amount of prospective improvement. With about ten blocks of paving to be contracted for, and at least two brick building blocks already started, the streets of the city will soon present a building boom appearance. The local I. O. O. F. lodge is contemplating the erection of an opera house with lodge room quarters, and if suitable quarters can be secured the project will materialize into one of the most substantial structures in this city.

Dug Up Last Year's Potatoes.

Clear Lake.—To dig potatoes from the field where they had grown the season before was an unusual thing for northern Iowa, but it was done by George Pitnam, a farmer near here. Mr. Pitnam, in walking over his field, noticed the green vines and pulled them up. Then with a fork he uncovered the hill of potatoes, which had been preserved in excellent condition and not harmed in the least by the frost. A large snowbank kept them safe through the winter.

This association is to be a permanent affair and will meet each year in joint convention with the County Supervisors' association. It is the aim of the new organization to work in conjunction with the county supervisors for the betterment of the county homes of the state.

J. E. Corwin of Keosauqua, state inspector of county homes, was the chief speaker of the session. He praised the stewards for their movement to organize and co-operate with the county supervisors and promised his aid to make the association permanent and effective. Many of the wives of the stewards were in attendance at the convention.

J. A. Elliott of Vinton was elected president; C. E. Lunberg of Ottumwa, vice president; A. L. Houston of Red Oak, secretary and treasurer; and J. W. Reynolds of Adel, assistant secretary. Secretary Houston was instructed to send out letters urging every county home steward in the state to join the association and meet at the joint convention with the supervisors in Cedar Rapids in August.

Mrs. Fueling Quits Job at Ames.

Ames.—Mrs. Agnes Feuling, head of the domestic science department of the State college, has resigned. She will leave the school August 15. It is hinted that Mrs. Feuling resents the close quizzing to which the members of the college teaching force are being subjected by the new educational board. Three other teachers of the school, it is reported, are ready to hand in their resignations for the same reason. Miss Edith Charldon, chart lecturer in the college extension department, has resigned. Senator Dolliver recently paid a visit to Western Canada and says: "There is a land hunger in the hearts of English speaking people; this will account for the removal of so many Iowa farmers to Canada. Our people are pleased with its Government and the excellent administration of law, and they are coming to you by tens of thousands, and they are still coming."

Iowa contributed largely to the 70,000 American farmers who made Canada their home during 1909. Field crop returns alone during year added to the wealth of the country upwards of

$170,000,000.00

Quaker Oats is the best of all foods; is also the cheapest. When such en as Prof. Fisher of Yale University d Sir James Crichton Browne, L.D., F.R.S. of London spend the st part of their lives in studying e great question of the nourishing d strengthening qualities of differ- t foods, it is certain that their ad- ce is absolutely safe to follow.
Professor Fisher found in his ex- erimments for testing the strength and ndurance of athletes that the meat aters were exhausted long before the en who were fed on such food as uaker Oats. The powers of endur- nce of the non-meat eaters were bout eight times those of the meat aters.

Simple Prescription Said to Work Wonders for Rheumatism.

This has been well known to the best doctors for years and is now given to the public. "Get one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound and one ounce Toris compound. Then get half a pint of good whiskey and put the other two ingredients into it. Take a tablespoonful of this mixture before each meal and at bed time. Shake the bottle before using." Good effects are felt the first day. Many of the worst cases here have been cured by this. Any druggist has these ingredients on hand or will quickly get them from his wholesale house.

Fighting Disease in Greece.

Consul General George Horton has made a report from Athens on the conspicuous work of Greek physicians in combating the country's chief scourges—malarial fever and tuberculosis. An annual average of 2,000 persons die each year from the former, while in epidemic years, due to excessive rains, the number exceeds 6,000, which was the case in 1905. The population of Greece is 2,433,806. The people have been interested through lectures, pamphlets, etc., to fight the malaria-carrying mosquito by draining stagnant ponds and throwing petroleum on them. A tuberculosis congress will be held at Athens next year, to which will be invited not only physicians, but all the mayors and other prominent people of Greece

Easter Offering

A Message of Love

"LOVE ONE ANOTHER." (John 15-17.)

LOVE now. Love always; yesterday, today, tomorrow. Do not seal up for future use the spirit within you of man's humanity to man. Dispense gentleness and sympathy, tenderness and love, ever keeping the best within you awake and active doing deeds of goodness to humanity.

The more sight drafts of sympathy you pay with the "golden coin" of rational, sincere love, the stronger you will become and the more dividends you can and will distribute by the wayside to the meek and the lowly who are famishing all about you for just "old fashion" kindness.

Give consideration and charity in "full pressed down measure," fellowship and flowers, loyalty and love to the living rather than to the departed.

Post-mortem protestations are usually idle pretenses and are not only an insult to the memory of the dead but evidence irrefragable of hypocrisy. Tie up every unhappy incident of the present into bundles of the forgotten past and throw them overboard as useless ballast.

Humanity demands, conscience approves and all the good in the world applauds the genial and glowing warmth of honest love, whether it is husband and wife, parent and child, sister and brother, the "lassie" for her "laddie," or the faithful dog for its master or the master's love for his dog, or the love universal in the heart of man for the Infinite.

Love is the "beginning," the "span" and the "ending" of every mortal that regards the jewel of the soul as the true riches of earth and immortality's crown the "Ultima Thule" of the life beyond, where the Great King reigns. Love now.

Willis George Emerson.

Easter Victory.

Easter means that our joy for the dead shall be greater than our sorrow for the dead. It means that, while life on earth is filled with uncertainties, our loved ones who have gone are beyond the reach of uncertainties and sorrow, and that they are in the home which is, and is to be, our home. And Easter means that in the rising of one who was the first fruits of the resurrection, our reunion with our dear ones who are in him was made, not a matter of hope, but a matter of certain knowledge. Let us not only rejoice in this Easter victory, but let us honor the day by bringing some one, who has not yet laid hold on this joy, into a knowledge the truth.—Sunday School Times.

Record for Strangeness.

A Niagara Falls man tells this story:

"A Buffalo man brought a relative from Scotland here to see our grand spectacle. The two gazed at the fall in silence a long time. Then the Buffalo man heaved a sigh and said:

"'Ah, Cousin Donald, did you ever see anything so beautiful and strange?'

"The Scotchman, after a moment's thought, answered calmly:

"'Weel, for bonnie, yon's a richt; but for strange, no—fur I once saw in the Town o' Peebles a peacock wit' a wooden leg.'"

May Make Convents Into Sanatoria.

Efforts are being made in Bulgaria to abolish the numerous monasteries and convents of the Greek Catholic church and to use their buildings and revenues for the establishment and maintenance of tuberculosis sanatoria. King Ferdinand has given 100,000 francs for the erection of a national sanatorium. The death rate from tuberculosis in Bulgaria is very high, being 31 for every 10,000 living.

What a Trained Nurse Says About Resinol.

I get absolute satisfaction from Resinol and use it constantly. One of my patients has had ulcers for 15 years, and Resinol has helped her more than anything else. She will continue using it until cured. I have made some remarkable cures with it.

The Modern Spirit.

"Can anything be more indicative of the spirit of the time," asks an observer, writing from Paris, "than this? A group of three at a fashionable restaurant table, old lady, middle aged man and young woman of the 'society age.' The man, giving an order to the waiter: 'Bring my mother a glass of milk, a beer for me and an absinthe for my daughter.'"

The Simple Life.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

of his to Kirksville. Mo , to the Osteopath hospital. Nineteen months ago this young man, 21 years old, was suddenly stricken with what is commonly called infantile paralysis. The only members he could use were his eyes and his tongue. Everything available was done for him. For the last nine months he was in a Dubuque hospital where it cost his parents $130 per month. As he made very little improvement his parents decided to try Osteopathy. It was anything but a pleasant trip to carry a man weighing 160 pounds in and out of trains and 'buses, eight times in sixteen hours.

The Epworth League entertainment is a thing of the past. All feel grateful toward the people of Klemme for the large turn out, hearty applause and kind words of commendation. We appreciate the willingness with which the business men gave their ads, which made the program so attractive. Hard as the committee tried, it was impossible to get up something excitingly interesting for each firm, but no discrimination was made toward any firm by the committee. As the stage was rather small for such a large number it took longer to arrange the paraphernalia for each piece which made the program rather lengthy. A vote of thanks is due Albert Koerner for his untiring assistance with the stage work.

Facing death from shot and shell in the civil war was more agreeable to J. A. Stone, of Kemp, Tex., than facing it from what doctors said was consumption. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. I now weigh 178 pounds." All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. subject to examination and approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalog which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and unheard of offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Iowa republicans still claim to want harmony, and are fighting like cats and dogs, to the exceeding delight of the democrats of the state.

News from Washington as to the high standing and great influence of Iowa's representation there is extremely gratifying to every loyal resident of the state. Iowa is taking conspicuous part in making it possible for the people, and especially the western people, to have a voice in all legislation through their chosen representatives,

The so called "Taft Clubs" organized at the time of Gov Carroll's conventions in Des Moines, have opened headquarters, employed a manager and work is being done, so the manager says, in every county of the state. Agents sent east to raise funds have reported success. It is claimed that the movement is non factional, but only standpats with the label blown in the bottle are admitted to the headquarters. It is also claimed that they have no designs on the offices, which if true, would indicate that the standpatters have experienced a miraculous conversion.

Judge Kenyon, of Fort Dodge, who was chosen from among all Iowa republicans to aid the administration at Washington as assistant attorney-general, delivered a stirring address last July on the home coming of Dolliver in which he approved the attitude of the two Iowa senators at Washington, declared that the American people had been gold bricked on the tariff, hailed with delight the early downfall of Cannonism, and predicted that the so-called insurgents would control the policies of the government.

A meeting of the Commercial Club of Des Moines was held for the purpose of planning to give strength and backing to Senator Dolliver in his effort to advance the bill to give federal aid to short course work. Under this bill Iowa would get about $25,000 a year, which would be worth a great deal more to the state than the proposed appropriation of millions to build dams and locks and remove bridges along the Des Moines river. The sentiment was very strong for giving Dolliver substantial backing for this bill and to do every thing that could be done to show that the people of Iowa have confidence in him and are not to be driven into an attitude of hostility to him.

Senator Cummins last week delivered a great speech in the Senate in which he analyzed the railroad bill pending and showed how it had been framed to please the railroad men. It is not the bill that was recommended to congress but had been changed in many ways at the request of the railroad managers. He also made a startling showing as to the manner in which the bill had been prepared, not by congress or by any committee of congress, and no chance had been given to members of congress to hear the arguments for or against any of the features of the bill. Senator Cummins now seeks to have the bill perfected in accordance with the recommendations made to congress by the president and so as to safeguard the interests of the people.

Narrow Escape

Dave Albeck, of Britt, had a narrow escape from drowning in the big marsh north of Britt while out hunting ducks last week. He was rowing about when his boat upset, his feet catching in the seat of the boat and he was unable to extricate them. Had it not been for the assistance of another hunter, Dave Schultz, who saw the accident, it would have proved fatal. As it was, a bad soaking and awful fright was all the damage done.

KILLED AND BURNED

Horribly Mutilated Body of New York Girl Found.

BODY WAS BURNED TO CRISP

Albert Walter Arrested for Brutal Crime—Landlady Declares Prisoner Received Many Calls From Girls — Wanted Work.

New York, Mar. 28.—The body of Ruth Wheeler, a little girl graduate, who was lured from her widowed mother on Thursday last by a decoy of employment, was found late Saturday afternoon, huddled in a gunny sack, on a fire escape outside the apartment of Albert Wolter, the man charged with her abduction.

She had been strangled with a rope, hacked with a knife, burned beyond all recognition and the body hidden. Identification was only possible by shreds of clothing and fragments of jewelry, but there was abundance of evidence of how the murder had been done.

Around the neck, the charred remnants of Manila rope were burnt into the flesh. There were oil stains in front of the newly painted fire board that hid an open grate. Fully dressed the girl's clothing and hair had been saturated with kerosene, the fire board had been removed and the body thrust up the chimney, standing.

Saturday afternoon a neighbor living on the same floor of an adjoining house had noticed the lumpy bundle outside his window and thinking it refuse had poked it off the fire escape into the back yard with a broom. The bundle fell with a crash and the neighbor rushed down the stairs for the janitor to investigate.

Grewsome Contents of Sack.

When the two men cut the strings that bound the sacking there rolled out before them the full evidence of an atrocious murder. Both men ran for the police.

The girl was 15 years old and the daughter of a dressmaker. An employment agency for graduates is conducted by the college where Ruth went to school, and Ruth went there to look for a situation. Thursday morning she left home on her usual errand and never returned.

The girl was never on the streets at night and her failure to come home for twenty-four hours without explanation meant more than a caprice. The next morning the elder sisters, Pearl and Adelaide in serious concern, went to the college and learned that the following post card had been turned over to her:

"Dear Madam: Please call in reference to position of stenographer at residence of the secretary, A. Wolter, 122 East 105th street."

Police Make Investigation.

Investigation at the address given, soon showed that Wolter, whom his landlady described as a sickly, white-faced youth of about 20 years, wearing flashy clothes, and having elaborately curled hair, had left the apartment where he lived with his wife, earlier in the same day. He received many calls from young girls, said the landlady, and she had particularly noticed that one who called Thursday was fresher of face and better dressed than the ordinary run of them.

With Wolter gone, the detectives waited for his wife, and when she appeared they trailed her to a corner, where she met a man answering Wolter's description. He was arrested, taken back to the rooms he had vacated and searched.

At first he denied sending post cards to business schools, but when detectives turned up answers addressed to him, he admitted he had received the cards, but could not explain it.

He admitted that the woman with whom he is living is not his wife, it is stated by the police.

Last summer he and she had worked at Irvington-on-the-Hudson at a boarding house. They came to this city last month and since then the woman has supported him by working in a laundry.

Lad Escapes Kidnapers.

Waterloo, Ia., Mar. 28.—The kidnaping of Jay Hanson, aged 11, by two strange men was thwarted at Jesup when an east bound Illinois Central freight was sidetracked to allow another freight to pass. HEIRESS WEDS A NOBLEMAN

DALY MILLIONS FOR EUROPEAN NOBILITY.

Marcus Daly's Daughter Becomes the Bride of Count Anton Sigray of Hungary.

New York, Mar. 29.—More American dollars were poured into the depleted coffers of European nobility today when Miss Harriet Daly, the beautiful and accomplished daughter of the late copper king, Marcus Daly, was married to Count Anton Sigray, head of the ancient Hungarian family of that name, at her home on Fifth avenue.

The wedding was a comparatively quiet affair, despite the attendance of New York's "most select" and several representatives of the Hungarian nobility. On account of the difference in their religion (Miss Daly being a Protestant, and her fiance a Catholic) the customary church ceremony with its attendant brilliance, was supplanted by a quiet but dignified ceremony at the Daly mansion, 725 Fifth avenue. Miss Daly dispensed with bridesmaids but the count was attended by Marquis Pallavicini.

The marriage of this beautiful heiress to the Hungarian nobleman is the culmination of a romance which began two years ago at the wedding of Count Szechenyi and Miss Gladys Vanderbilt. On this occasion Count Sigray, who is a distant cousin of Count Szechenyi, acted as his best man. During the reception at the Vanderbilt mansion, following the ceremony, he met Miss Daly and paid her marked attention. For two weeks he remained in New York and devoted most of his time to the beautiful heiress during this period. The following summer he met her abroad and renewed his attentions, and last summer they met again at the wedding of Miss Anita Stewart to Prince de Braganza in Scotland.

Count Anton is the head of one of the oldest and wealthiest families in Hungary, although, as the count himself admits, his income is small when compared with American standards. He is a large land owner, and, as such is a member of the house of magnates. His title dates back to 1780, his ancestors being among the nobles who helped empress Maria Theresa preserve her throne. Both his parents are dead, but he has two older sisters living, one being Marquise San Mayano, who married an Italian and lives in Rome, and the other Baroness Schell, who lives in Hungary. As the count's wife, Miss Daly will enjoy the full privileges of her rank and will be entitled to entrance at the Budapest court, but not to that of Vienna. On the other hand, the count has married one of the wealthiest girls in the country. Her share of her father's estate alone is estimated at $2,500,000. She is a tall, striking brunette, and a talented musician.

WRECK MAKES MAN MAD

John Spence Fears Detectives Are Dogging Him to Place Blame for Green Mountain Accident.

Marshalltown, Ia., Mar. 28.—As a result of the terrible wreck of the Rock Island train near Green Mountain and the stirring scenes incident thereto, the mind of John T. Spence, aged 27, of Clemons, this county, gave way. Spence became very violent and was hurried to this city in an automobile. He was adjudged insane and committed to Independence. He imagined detectives were following him about in an effort to establish the cause of the wreck.

As a result of the wreck an even fifty are now dead. The latest victim is L. M. Wallin of Washburn, N. D., who died in the hospital.

Dr. G. W. Newman of Mount Vernon, Mo., is also in a serious condition. He is 76 years old.

Pass Along The Good Word

That Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is to-day and has, for over 40 years, been the standard Blood-purifyer, Stomach Strengthener and Liver Invigorator sold by druggists. It's not a secret nostrum but a medicine of known composition — a medicine so good that the best physicans prescribe it knowing that its ingredients, which are printed on its outside wrappers and attested under oath, are the best known to medical science for the diseases for which it is advised.

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not his greater profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

The officers of oth the companies declare that they annot grant the eight hour day deanded by the men and the 15 per ent increase, while the employes are qually as emphatic that they will ot return to work until they are giv- n their demands. Another Building Gain.

Des Moines' building activities for February, 1910, were 20 per cent greater than those of the same month of 1909, according to the official reports as compiled by the American Contractor.

Building activities throughout the entire country were 23 per cent smaller than during February a year ago. The American Contractor will say in part: "According to the predictions made throughout the latter part of last year by the industrial and financial press, the year 1910 was set down as a coming record breaker, which forecast, however, has failed to materialize in building operations."

Of the forty-three cities, sixteen show a loss of from 4 to 79 per cent and twenty-seven show a gain of from 2 to 269 per cent. Cities representing a gain of 50 per cent or more are: Birmingham, 60 per cent; Grand Rapids, 55 per cent; Hartford, 112 per cent; Louisville, 267 per cent; Los Angeles, 160 per cent; Manchester, 679 per cent; Minneapolis, 60 per cent; New Haven, 52 per cent; Salt Lake City, 65 per cent.

Des Moines' gain was 20 per cent. In February, 1909, the cost of buildings was $54,025 and for the same month of 1910, $65,075. Des Moines is the only city of Iowa shown in the report.

Contractors declare that if it had not been for the extreme cold weather of February the building activities in Des Moines would have been twice as great as those of a year ago.

The total amount of building done in the forty-three cities of the United States during February was $36,446,891, while that for 1909 was $46,356,631.

WELL KIDNEYS KEEP THE BODY WELL.

When the kidneys do their duty, the blood is filtered clear of uric acid and other waste. Weak kidneys do not filter off all the bad matter. This is the cause of rheumatic pains, backache and urinary disorders. Doan's Kidney Pills cure weak kidneys.

Rev. Abram Weaver, Georgetown, Tex., former editor Baptist Herald, says: "At a Baptist conference at Jackson, Tex., I fell from a platform and hurt my back. I was soon over the injury, but the kidneys were badly disordered, passages painful and often bloody. Doan's Kidney Pills cured this trouble completely."

Unpublished Utterances.

Herein is set down a hitherto unpublished utterance of Emerson. There is no doubt of its authenticity: "An a boodely boodely boodely boo, doodely doodely doo!" It was his favorite way of addressing babies. Carlyle invariably addressed babies thus: "Kookey kookey kookey koo, kookey kookey koo!" Occasionally he varied that with: "Keekey keekey keekey kee, keekey, keekey kee!" Shakespeare's conversation with babies was this: "Too r-o-sey! Too r-o-sey!" Sir Francis Bacon's was simply: "Klklk." David Hume said: "Boo!" Charles Dickens used to say: "Heao, tain't oo yaph a itty bit?" Sir Isaac Newton used to say: "Howdydoogums!" George Eliot used to say: "Cunnin' sin! Burdie!"—Puck.

Think of it! They charge as much for that imitation stuff as they do for real, delicious, fragrant WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT.

Have You Tried?

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? We can furnish positive proof that it has made many remarkable cures after all other means had failed.

Women who are suffering with some form of female illness should consider this.

As such evidence read these two unsolicited testimonial letters. We guarantee they are genuine and honest statements of facts.

Cresson, Pa.—"Five years ago I had a bad fall, and hurt myself inwardly. I was under a doctor's care for nine weeks, and when I stopped I grew worse again. I sent for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, took it as directed, and now I am a stout, hearty woman."—Mrs. Ella E. Aikey, Cresson, Pa.

Baird, Wash.—"A year ago I was sick with kidney and bladder troubles and female weakness. The doctors gave me up. All they could do was to just let me go as easily as possible. I was advised by friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. I am completely cured of my ills, and I am nearly sixty years old."—Mrs. Sarah Leighton, Baird, Wash.

Evidence like the above is abundant showing that the derangements of the female organism which breed all kinds of miserable feelings and which ordinary practice does not cure, are the very disorders that give way to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are afflicted with similar troubles, after reading two such letters as the above, should be encouraged to try this wonderfully helpful remedy.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

HER PROPOSAL.

By MARION GOLDBERG.

(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

Marion Hathaway, though she was not interested in the rights of women, was deeply interested in the rights of a woman, and that woman was herself. Miss Hathaway was twenty-six years old and unmarried when it suddenly occurred to her that there was one right belonging to her that she had been denied, not by any law, but by the most imperious of all rulers, custom.

"A man," she said, "may say with impunity, 'I'm looking for a wife,' but let a woman say the same thing about a husband and she would be considered immodest in the extreme. Indeed, her statement would be held up to ridicule and would defeat her purpose to marry. Furthermore, a man may ask a dozen women one after another to marry him, while a woman is forbidden to ask even one man. Now, I'm not going to submit to such injustice any longer. I wish a husband, home and children. I know the man I should like to marry. I decline to angle for him. I'm going to assume with regard to him the same privilege he has assumed toward me. I shall propose marriage."

Mr. Archibald Howe was the man to whom Miss Hathaway decided to propose. He was thirty-two years old, doing a good business and of good standing both socially and as a citizen. Miss Hathaway had an income of $1,000 a year. In a business point of view the elements for a partnership existed. The question in the lady's mind was this: First, had the man ever thought of her as one he would like to marry; second, if not, could she lead him to so think of her? He was permitted to discover her feelings for him. Why should she not be permitted to learn his for her?

All this reasoning was well enough, but to put it into practice was another matter. Miss Hathaway winced at the first fine. A brave way to act in the case was to send for Mr. Howe and make her proposal by word. Her feelings constrained her to do it by letter; but, after writing and tearing up some twenty epistles, she concluded that she must either "take the bull by the horns"—that is, make her proposal in person or not at all. Summoning all her resolution, she wrote him to call on her.

When Mr. Howe's card was handed her the next evening she caught sight of her face in a mirror. Dismay was written on every feature. She was a strong character, though with a tendency to enter upon innovations that only the concurrent opinion of large communities can effect. At any rate, she was determined and, having once put her hand to the plow, would not turn back. But it required ten minutes before her heart beat would subside to a normal rate, at the end of which time she descended the staircase and entered the drawing room. Her heart had recommenced its kettledrum performance and her knees threatened to let her down on the floor. That woman's nature had something to do with the custom of proposals for the first time rushed upon her with great force. Mr. Howe rose, she mechanically extended her hand, he resumed his seat, and she sank on one end of a sofa.

"What can I do for you?" asked the visitor.

Miss Hathaway's reply was a shiver.

"A matter of charity?" asked the gentleman after a pause to help her out.

"Well—yes—in a way."

"For whom or what do you ask aid?"

"Myself."

Mr. Howe looked surprised.

"I have sent for you, Mr. Howe," she continued, with every show of resolution, "in order that I may do something—something very disagreeable, and I wish you to help me."

"Something disagreeable!"

"Very."

"Is it something we can do together?"

"No; one or the other must do it."

"I shall be very happy to do it for you if I can."

"That's impossible."

Mr. Howe thought a bit before saying:

"If one or the other must do it, and I can't do it, I don't see but that you must do it yourself."

Miss Hathaway didn't look as if she could.

"Tell me," added the caller, "what it is and I'll see what I can do for you." He rose from his seat and sat down beside her.

"No; I have resolved to do it myself, and I will."

"Proceed."

Miss Hathaway gathered her faculties for a beginning.

"Did you ever think of me—that is, in the friendship that has existed between us—has it ever occurred to you"—

She stopped.

Mr. Howe was looking at her intently. Her bosom was heaving; her eyes were like those of a hunted fawn. It occurred to him that he would like to put his arms about her, take her head on his shoulder and comfort her.

"I have freely resolved," she went on, with a gasp, "always to remain single."

"Indeed!"

"Yes. And I have thought that we might devote ourselves to some world's work together."

He gazed upon her, still intently, for some moments, then said:

"Yes, and that work will be to build up a home for ourselves."

She turned her face up to him lighted by a smile and said:

"There, I knew I could do it."

PERSONAL.

Mary Davis, a 13-year-old New York girl, is in good health and cheerful spirits despite the fact that she fell backward from a five-story fire escape, landing in a basketful of wet clothes. She was scarcely scratched.

Andrew Carnegie is making a study of the heavens through powerful telescopes in the great observatory which he founded on Mount Wilson, near Pasadena, Cal.

Virginia Earle, ten years ago one of the brightest musical-comedy stars on Broadway, is ill and destitute in New York, having been found unconscious in a shabby flat.

GENERAL NEWS.

Twelve lives were lost in a fire in the building of the L. Fish Furniture Company, at 1906-1908 Wabash avenue, which in its occurrence and aftermath duplicated on a minor scale the Iroquois theater disaster. Hardly had the flames which caught a number of young women trapped in the sixth floor of the building been quenched than investigation revealed that the building in which the disaster occurred had never, so far as the records of the building department show, been inspected, and that the structure was erected and maintained in direct violation of the city ordinances.

Laying bare the appalling details of Pittsburg's civic unrighteousness, ordering indictments against 31 present and past councilmen and making a demand upon the directors of the city depositories to investigate their own boards and ascertain the bribe-givers in connection with the ordinance designating their institutions as city depositories, formed the meat of two presentments made by the grand jury.

The eruption of Mount Etna is increasing in violence hourly. Fifteen new craters, opening laterally, are sending forth blue and gold flames, burning cinders and melted lava, accompanied by terrific earthquake shocks and violent explosions. Panic and despair have seized upon the peasants, who plant images of favorite saints and then flee. Cardinal Francisca Nava visited Nicolosi bearing the veil of Saint Agatha, in order to stop the eruption of lava.

At the request of Frank Fehr, cousin of Alma Kellner, the child kidnaped at Louisville, Ky., last December, Gov. Willson of Kentucky has withdrawn the offer of $500 reward, which is believed to have kept the abductors from making terms.

That the British government actually fears for the safety of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, owing to Cairo being the hotbed of the Egyptian national movement was demonstrated by the throngs of policemen that guarded the ex-president from the moment his train arrived in that city until the khedive's royal carriage had deposited him at the doors of Sheppard's hotel. Col. Roosevelt's speeches at Khartum and Assouan, in which he pleaded for native co-operation with the British authorities, has aroused the resentment of the Nationalists and in view of their recent assassination of Boutros Pasha, the premier, the government decided that every precaution should be taken to guard the ex-president. The colonel, himself, laughed at the idea of danger and requested that no special police guard be furnished.

By a unanimous vote the house adopted a resolution naming a committee on rules composed of six Republicans and four Democrats, under the provisions of the Norris resolution. Dalzell was named as chairman.

Sensation followed sensation in the Pittsburg, Pa., councilmanic graft cases. Six more councilmen confessed their connection with graft in this city's affairs.

Towels have been tabooed at the Michigan college of mines at Houghton as being relics of barbarism, insanitary and expensive. Students now use big sheets of paper instead for drying.

Mrs. Charles T. Yerkes, widow of the Chicago traction magnate, who died four years ago, will sell at auction the mansion at Fifth avenue and Sixty-eighth street, New York, together with all its art gems, to satisfy claims of creditors.

Although facing a charge of embezzling $250,000 from the National City bank of Cambridge, Mass., George W. Coleman has taken out a license to marry Miss May Hightower of Kansas City, Mo.

John M. Hayes, an Oklahoma City (Okla.) prohibition-enforcement attorney, acting for the state, has sued the Santa Fe road for $365,000 on the charge of storing liquors consigned to dealers.

Attorney Louis Brandeis, representing Glavis and others, sprung a decided surprise before the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee by declaring that he wished to call Secretary Ballinger as one of his witnesses. Attorney Vertrees, representing Mr. Ballinger, objected. The committee will decide the matter in executive session.

Enraged because his wife had gone to the theater with her brother, Alfred Mitchell, a New Orleans carpenter, shot and probably wounded her, wounded his 12-year-old son and seven-year-old daughter and then shot himself in the head, dying instantly.

United States senators are to be rubbed down and massaged at government expense in the magnificent bathrooms in the new senate office building. A professional masseur will officiate in these baths at a salary of $1,800 a year.

Mount Etna suddenly has become active and four new craters have been opened, due to seven violent earthquakes of volcanic origin, which occurred at Mileto, Province of Catanzaro, Italy. Similar shocks were felt at Messina.

The house committee on interstate and foreign commerce reported favorably the administration railroad bill and that it will take precedence of all the Taft measures for consideration in the house. It will follow the navy appropriation bill.

The special grand jury that has been investigating the work of the mob that attacked the county jail at Cairo, Ill., on the night of February 17, and tried to take out the negro, John Pratt, the purse snatcher, and lynch him, found indictments against 12 persons charging them with forming a mob.

The new house committee on rules will consist of the following members: Republicans—John Dalzell, Pennsylvania; Walter I. Smith, Iowa; J. Sloat Fassett, New York; Henry S. Boutell, Illinois; Sylvester C. Smith, California; George P. Lawrence, Massachusetts. Democrats—Champ Clark, Missouri; Oscar Underwood, Alabama; John J. Fitzgerald, New York; Lincoln Dixon, Indiana. The committee, when elected by the house, will supersede the committee composed of Speaker Cannon, Dalzell, Smith of Iowa, Republicans; Clark and Fitzgerald, Democrats. Dalzell is picked for chairman.

The continued confessions of Pittsburg councilmen, past and present, together with the rumors that the grand jury will hand down another batch of indictments, increases the terror among a certain class in that city.

Stockholders of the American Druggists' syndicate, meeting in New York, voted to increase its capital stock from $200,000 to $25,000,000 to further an attack upon cut-rate drug stores throughout the country.

As a result of the affectionate regard of Minnesotans for the late Gov. John A. Johnson, a fund of $22,000 has been raised in the state to provide an income for his widow for the remainder of her life.

All existing difficulties between the 32,000 locomotive firemen, members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Firemen and Enginemen and the 49 western railroads have been wiped off the slate. The controversy, which for a time threatened a strike of serious proportions, was definitely settled, when a committee of the brotherhood officials accepted the terms offered by the railroads. The demand of the firemen for an increase in wages will be arbitrated.

A royal reception was given Col. Theodore Roosevelt and his party on their arrival at Cairo, Egypt, the khedive sending his state carriage to the station to convey the city's distinguished guest to the palace. During Mr. Roosevelt's six-days' stay here the program for his entertainment includes several dinners, a visit to the University of Egypt, where he will deliver an address, a visit to the American mission, where the colonel will dedicate the girl's college and a thorough inspection of many places of historic interest.

The Republican caucus selected the following members for the new rules committee: Walter I. Smith of Iowa, John Dalzell of Pennsylvania, George P. Lawrence of Massachusetts, J. Sloat Fassett of New York, Sylvester C. Smith of California, Henry S. Boutell of Illinois. All the "insurgents" with the exception of Gardner of Massachusetts were present and voted at the caucus, and declared they were satisfied with the result.

FOR DRAGGED ROAD

Much Interest in River to River Automobile Route.

OFFERS FINE TRIP ACROSS IOWA

Road From Dubuque to Sioux City Is Similar to the Proposed Road in the Southern Part of the State.

Iowa Falls, Mar. 28.—Much interest is being taken in Hardin county in the proposed dragged road from Dubuque to Sioux City, or what is known as the "river to river" automobile route across the state. Similar to a proposed road in the southern part of the state, this road will offer auto tourists a fine trip across Iowa with convenient and comfortable stopping places with good accommodations on the way. This proposed road promises to bring into actual practice much of the "good roads" theories that have been talked about for years and eventually offer a fine system of highways for a distance of several miles adjacent to the Illinois Central railroad which the proposed route will follow across Iowa. Starting at Dubuque, tourists who may use the improved roads will find convenient stopping places with facilities for car repairs and good hotel accommodations about every fifty miles. Out of Dubuque the tourist will strike Manchester, Independence, Waterloo, Iowa Falls, Fort Dodge, Storm Lake, Cherokee, Le Mars and then the river at Sioux City. In offering tourists better road facilities, the business men along the route realize that a place on such a route will be a fine advertisement for their town and will bring many tourists during the auto season and a resultant distribution of money by the tourists. The smaller cities and towns as well as the larger ones, are willing to boost along such a "good thing" and this support is not confined to the towns, for the farmers are anxious to aid in the development of a line of road that will become a highway for travel during six or eight months in the year and give better facilities for getting their produce to market. It is proposed that each county take up the work and map out a good east and west route across the country and then arrange to have the route systematically dragged. Side routes radiating from the main line will eventually follow and offer "good roads" in reality.

NO HEALTHY SKIN LEFT

My little son, a boy of five, broke out with an itching rash. Three doctors prescribed for him, but he kept getting worse until we could not keep him any more. They finally advised me to try a certain medical cure, but its treatment did no good. At the time I was induced to try Cuticura he was so bad that I had to cut his hair off and put the Cuticura Ointment on him on bandages, as it was impossible to touch him with the hand. There was not one square inch of skin on his whole body that was not affected. He was one mass of sores. The bandages used to stick to his skin and in removing them it seemed to take the skin off with them, and the screams from the poor child were heartbreaking. I began to think that he would never get well, but after the second application of Cuticura Ointment I began to see signs of improvement, and with the third and fourth applications the sores commenced to dry up. His skin peeled off in flakes times, but it finally yielded to the treatment. Now I can say that he is entirely cured, and a stronger and healthier boy you never saw than he is to-day, twelve years or more since the cure was effected. CHAPTER IV.

Duty and the Jug.

r. Thomas Ardmore, one trunk, bags and a little brown jug reach- he Guilford house, Raleigh, at t o'clock in the morning. Ardmore never felt better in his life, he as- d himself, as he chose a room care and intimated to the land- his intention of remaining a week. for ill luck of having his baggage ked he should have registered self falsely on the books of the but feeling that this was not e respectable he assured the land- , in response to the usual ques- , that he was not Ardmore of New k and Ardsley, but an entirely dif- nt person.

he Guilford house coffee was not what he was used to, but he was an amiable humor and enjoyed ely the conversation of the com- rcial travelers with whom he took breakfast. He did not often es- e from himself or the burden of family reputation, and these ngers were profoundly entertain- It had never occurred to Ard- re that man could be so amiable arly in the day and his own spirits ied as he passed the sugar, abused hot bread and nodded his approval bitter flings at the inns of other thern towns of whose existence he y vaguely knew.

I wonder if the governor's back ?" asked one man.

The morning paper says not, but s expected to-day," replied the man h the newspaper.

About the first thing he'll have to will be to face the question of ar- ting Appleweight. I was in Co- mbia the other day and everybody s talking of the case. They say"— d the speaker waited for the fullest tention of his hearers—"they say borne ain't none too anxious to ve Appleweight arrested on his side the line."

"Why not?" demanded Ardmore.

"Well, you hear all kinds of things. was only whispered down there, but ey say Osborne was a little too ck with the Appleweight crowd be- re he was elected governor. He as their attorney, and they were a d lot for any man to be attorney r. But they haven't caught Apple- eight yet."

"Where's he hiding; don't the au- orities know?"

"Oh, he's up there in the hills on e state line. His home is as much one side as the other. He spends good deal of time in Kildare."

"Kildare?" asked Ardmore, startled the word.

"Yes, it's the county seat, what ere is of it. I hope you never make at town!" and the inquirer bent a commiserating glance upon Ardmore.

"Well, they use jugs there, I know that!" declared Ardmore; whereat the table roared. The unanimity of their applause warmed his heart, though he did not know why they laughed.

"You handle crockery?" asked a man from the end of the table. "Well, I guess Dilwell county consumes a few gross of jugs all right. But you'd better be careful not to whisper jugs too loud here. There's usually a couple of revenue men around town."

They all went together to the office, where they picked up their sample cases and sallied forth for a descent upon the Raleigh merchants; and Ardmore, thus reminded that he was in the crockery business, and that he had a sample in his room, sat down under a tree on the sidewalk at the inn door to consider what he should do with his little brown jug.

As Mr. Ardmore pondered duty and the jug a tall man in shabby corduroy halted near by and inspected him carefully.

"Good morning," said Ardmore pleasantly.

The man nodded, but did not speak.

"I Want Thet Jug, Young Fella."

He was examining Ardmore with a pair of small, shrewd, gray eyes. In his hands he held a crumpled bit of brown paper that looked like a telegram.

"I got a telegram hyeh say y'u got a jug thet y'u ain't no right t' last night at Kildare. I want thet jug, young fella."

"Now that's very unfortunate. Ordinarily I should be delighted, but I really couldn't give away my Kildare jug. Now if it was one my other jugs—even my Omaha jug, or my dear old Louisville jug—I shouldn't hesitate a minute, but that old Kildare jug! My dear man, you don't know what you ask!"

"Y'll give me thet jug or it'll be the worse for y'u. Y'u ain't in thet game, young fella."

"Not in it! You don't know whom you are addressing. I'm not only in the game, but I'm in to the finish," declared Ardmore, sitting upright in his chair. "You've got the wrong idea, my friend, if you think you can intimidate me. That jug was given me by a friend, a very old and dear friend—"

"A friend of yourn!"

The keen little gray eyes were blinking rapidly.

"One of the best friends I ever had in this world," and Ardmore's face showed feeling. "He and I charged side by side through the bloodiest battles of our civil war. I will cheerfully give you my watch, or money in any sum, but the jug—I will part with my life first! And now," concluded Ardmore, "while I should be glad to continue this conversation, my duties call me elsewhere."

As he rose, the man stood quickly at his side, menacingly.

"Give me thet jug or I'll shoot y'u right hyeh in the street."

"No, you wouldn't do that, Old Corduroy. I can see that you are kind and good and you wouldn't shoot down an unarmed man. Besides it would muss up the street."

"Y'u took thet jug from my brother by lyin' to 'im. He's telegraphed me to git it, and I'm a-goin' to do it."

"Your brother sent you? It was nice of him to ask you to call on me. Why, I've known your brother intimately for years."

"Knowed my brother?" and for the first time the man really seemed to doubt himself. "Wheh did y'u know Bill?"

"We roomed together at Harvard, that's how I know him, if you force me to it! We're both Hasty Pudding men. Now if you try to bulldoze me further, I'll slap your wrists. So there!"

Ardmore entered the hotel deliberately, climbed to his room and locked the door. Then he seized the little brown jug, drew the stopper and poured out a tumblerful of clear white fluid. He took a swallow and shuddered as the fiery liquid seemed instantly to cause every part of his being to tingle. He wiped the tears from his eyes and sat down. The corn-cob stopper had fallen to the floor, and he picked it up and examined it carefully. It had been fitted tightly into the mouth of the jug by the addition of a bit of calico, and he fingered it for a moment with a grin on his face.

He was about to replace it when, to his astonishment, it broke in his fingers, and out fell a carefully folded slip of paper. He carried it to the window and opened it, finding that it was an ordinary telegraph blank on which was written in clear round characters these words:

The Appleweight crowd never done you harm. If you have any of them arrested you will be shot down on your own doorstep.

When Mr Thomas Ardmore had read this message half a dozen times with increasing satisfaction he folded it carefully and put it away in his pocket-book.

Taking half a sheet of note paper he wrote as follows:

Appleweight and his gang are cowards. Within ten days those that have not been hanged will be in jail at Kildare.

He studied the phraseology critically and then placed the paper in the cob stopper, whose halves he tied together with a bit of twine. As the jug stood on the table it was, to all appearances, exactly as it had been when delivered to Ardmore on the rear of the train at Kildare, and he was thoroughly well pleased with himself. He changed the blue scarf with which he had begun the day for one of purple with gold bars, and walked up the street toward the statehouse.

This venerable edifice, meekly reposing amid noble trees, struck agreeably upon Ardmore's fancy. Here was government enthroned in quiet dignity, as becomes a venerable commonwealth, wearing its years like a veteran who has known war and tumult, but finds at last tranquillity and peace. He experienced a feeling of awe, without quite knowing it, as he strolled up the walk, climbed the steps to the portico and turned to look back from the shadow of the pillars. He had never but once before visited an American public building—the New York city hall—and he felt that now, indeed, he had turned a corner and entered upon a new and strange world. He ascended to the toy-like legislative chambers, where flags of nation and state hung side by side, and where the very seats and desks of the lawmakers spoke of other times and manners.

Mr. Ardmore, feeling that he should now be about his business, sought the governor's office, where a secretary, who seemed harassed by the cares of his position, confirmed Ardmore's knowledge of the governor's absence.

"I didn't wish to see the governor on business," explained Ardmore pleasantly, leaning upon his stick with an air of leisure. "He and my father were old friends, and I always promised my father that I would never pass through Raleigh without calling on Gov. Dangerfield."

"That is too bad," remarked the young man sympathetically, though with a preoccupation that was eloquent of large affairs.

"Could you tell me whether any members of the governor's family are at home?"

"Oh, yes; Mrs. Dangerfield and Miss Jerry are at the mansion."

"Miss Jerry?"

"Miss Geraldine. We all call her Miss Jerry in North Carolina."

"Oh, yes; to be sure. Let me see; it's over this way to the mansion, isn't it?" inquired Ardmore.

"No; out the other end of the building—and turn to your right. You can't miss it."

The room was quiet, the secretary a young man of address and intelligence. Here, without question, was the place for Ardmore to discharge his business and be quit of it; but having at last snatched a commission from fleeting opportunity it was not for him to throw it to another man. As he opened the door to leave, the secretary arrested him.

"Oh, Mr.—pardon me, but did you come in from the south this morning?"

"Yes; I came up on the Tar Heel express from Atlanta."

"To be sure. Of course you didn't sit up all night? There's some trouble brewing around Kildare. I thought you might have heard something, but of course you couldn't have been awake at two o'clock in the morning?"

The secretary was so anxious to acquit him of any knowledge of the situation at Kildare that it seemed kindest to tell him nothing. The secretary's face lost its anxiety for a moment, and he smiled.

"The governor has an old friend and admirer up there who always puts a jug of fresh buttermilk on board when he passes through. The governor was expected home this morning, and I thought maybe—"

"You're positive it's always buttermilk, are you?" asked Ardmore with a grin.

"Certainly," replied the secretary with dignity. "Gov. Dangerfield's sentiments as to the liquor traffic are well known."

"Of course, all the world knows that. But I'm afraid all jugs look alike to me; but then, the fact is I'm in the jug business myself. Good morning."

The governor's mansion was easily found, and having walked about the neighborhood until his watch marked 11 Ardmore entered the grounds and rang the bell at the front door.

A severe looking woman moved up to the window at the Citizen Savings & Trust Company with a small check to be cashed The teller said she'd have to be identified and she suggested that he call up the man who had drawn the check and have him describe her.

The teller decided to take the chance, and called the man on the 'phone at his elbow.

"Oh, it's probably all right," came the word over the 'phone. "Wait, I'll describe her for you and you can see if it's the same woman. She had on a faded brown dress and paints just a little bit, has a sharp nose and spectacles, and is about as pretty as Kermit Roosevelt. Oh, yes, and she wore a big brooch with a shower of imitation stones in it."

The teller looked the woman over and cashed the check. She hadn't heard the other end of his telephone conversation and went her way smiling.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Quadruped Ancestors.

Though it may annoy Chesterton, when he gets down on all-fours hunting for a lost sixpence, to be told by a passing biologist that he is hunting that way because his remote ancestors were quadrupeds and though popular interest rests with the prophets of science rather than with the delvers into the prehistoric facts, still, as Huxley said, the small history of man will almost be useless as precedent until it is supplemented by the great natural history of his true origin and being. Consequently, the great prophets of science are the most painstaking delvers into the prehistoric past.

To Heights Sublime.

If making two blades of grass grow where but one grew before is a noble accomplishment, what proud word will fitly name the mantic heroism of reforesting a nation?

Don't plow the ground too wet; get it just right, then rush things.

Seek only that which is honorable that thou in thy poverty shouldst die rich.

Don't forget to make two sowings of clover, and be sure to use one-half alsike.

Do not rush the teams too hard, let them have time to get their shoulders hardened to the work.

The farmer who allowed his implements to be sheltered by the sky during the winter will now find himself out.

When a man insists upon giving you advice, you can readily get rid of him by offering him a little in return.

Do you remember, when you were young, how it encouraged and cheered you to be consulted by your elders? Try it on the young folks of the household.

Everybody is impatient to begin the spring work, but it were wise to temper impatience with good judgment and to wait until all the conditions are right.

When you get the annual spring-cleaning fever, don't cut down or dig up all the nice little trees. Let every one stand that isn't in the way. The trees will come handy twenty years hence.

Just as nearly as you can, grow all the stuff you will need for your family and your stock right at home this year. One thing that keeps a good many men poor is buying what they ought to raise themselves.—From April Farm Journal.

Saved a Soldier's Life

Facing death from shot and shell in the civil war was more agreeable to J. A. Stone, of Kemp, Tex., than facing it from what doctors said was consumption. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed a cough, that stuck to me in spite of all remedies for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. I now weigh 178 pounds." For coughs, colds, la-grippe, asthma, hemorrhage, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough and lung trouble it's supreme. 50c. 1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by the Old Reliable Drug Store.

They effect a cure every time." They never fail to tone the stomach, regulate the kidneys and bowels, stimulate the liver, invigorate the nerves and purify the blood. They work wonders for weak, run-down men and women, restoring strength, vigor and health that's a daily joy. Try them. Only 50c. Satisfaction is positively guaranteed by The Old Reliable Drug Store.

Gifford Pinchot and Theodore Roosevelt are to meet in Copenhagen or London within a short time, according to the admission of the former forester of the United States, who arrived at the former place. Mr. Pinchot would discuss neither the object of the meeting nor any connection it might have with politics.

Theodore Roosevelt bade farewell to Africa and, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Ethel and Kermit, left Alexandria for Naples on the steamer Prinz Heinrich. By Sunday the party will be in Rome. They were given a hearty welcome and farewell.

Recall of the designs by the National Geographical society prevented Sir Ernest H. Shackleton from wearing his medal of honor at an Explorers' club banquet in New York, and caused much gossip as to the reason for the delay.

GENERAL NEWS.

Robert W. Patterson, editor-in-chief of the Chicago Tribune, died suddenly in Philadelphia. Half an hour before his death occurred, his mother, Mrs. Julia A. Patterson, widow of one of the most prominent Presbyterian clergymen of Illinois, passed away at the home of her son-in-law in Chicago.

Marie Corelli, the novelist, is seriously ill at her residence, Mason Croft, Stratford-on-Avon, England. She is suffering from pneumonia.

James R. Meade, the pioneer who named Wichita, died in Kansas City of pneumonia. He was president of the first railroad built into Wichita, the old Santa Fe "stub" line from Emporia to Wichita.

In a speech which occupied two hours and which had not been completed when the senate adjourned, Senator Root came to the support of the administration railroad bill. The portion of the speech delivered dealt almost exclusively with the proposed court of commerce, which Senator Root defended notwithstanding, he said, it appealed to him far less strongly than did most of the other features of the bill.

Convinced that the murder of Alexder J. Moody, the pie manufacturer, by arsenical poisoning on February 20 at his home at Chicago, was, in police vernacular, an "outside job"—not the act of anyone within the Moody household—and given an important clew during the examination of Peter Peterson, the former coachman, Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler detailed detectives to investigate a new angle of the mysterious case.

Italy is in terror and residents have fled to the hills for safety from Mount Etna. A heavy fall of ashes covered the streets to a depth of six inches. Thirty craters are belching fire and lava, and redhot stones bombard the country about the slopes of the volcano. Hundreds of tourists, the majority of them Americans, who came here to view the spectacle, made haste to depart.

Requisition papers for the extradition of J. Ogden Armour of Chicago were filed with Gov. Fort at Trenton, N. J., by Prosecutor Garven of Hudson county.

That the corporation tax law will be amended to restrict the operation of its publicity feature was virtually assured when the house slightly amended a provision previously adopted by the senate for that purpose. As passed by the house the law bearing on this subpect provides that "all corporation tax returns shall be open to inspection only upon the order of the president, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the secretary of the treasury and approved by the president."

Unofficial returns from the Democratic primary held in Arkansas indicate the renomination, equivalent to election, of Gov. George W. Donaghey over Judge C. C. Kavanaugh.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt and the members of their family and party arrived in Rome, where they were received in audience by King Victor Emmanuel, Queen Helena and the pope and called on Cardinal Merry Del Val, the papal secretary of state.

Thomas L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, gave the following advice to 3,000 Illinois miners who have stopped work, in an address at a meeting at Belleville. "Don't be alarmed over the outcome of this affair; don't be afraid that we will not be able to sign up an agreement. It will all be over within 30 days. Anyhow, this is good fishing weather."

The secretary of the navy has ordered that the two citizens of Japan who were held by Maj. Gen. Duvall, commanding in the Philippines, on charges of obtaining information about the defenses of Manila, should be turned over to the civil authorities, there being no federal statute covering the case.

Attorney General Wickersham's hand has fallen heavily on the bucket-shop industry of the United States and within a few days a blow will be struck that will practically wipe the bucket-shop gamblers out of existence.

The most serious clash that has yet occurred among the members of the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation committee marked the resumption of the hearing. A row was precipitated by Chairman Nelson accusing Attorney Brandeis, representing the "prosecution," of attempting to deceive or conceal something from the committee. The attorney, flushed with anger, jumped to his feet and demanded that the chairman's remark be withdrawn.

The New York Central issued a general order increasing by seven per cent. the pay of all employes on the New York Central lines east of Buffalo who now earn $200 a month or less.

Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh has no fear that a decision against the Standard Oil Company or the tobacco trust by the Supreme court will bring on a panic. His information, gleaned from the leading bankers of the country, is that the banks are well fortified with money and even if a slight disturbance was made by the announcement of a decision it will not disturb the credit of the country.

Eighteen hundred miners in the Thumb district of Michigan quit work, but there is said to be little expectation that the shut-down of the mines will be other than temporary.

Two deacons of the Western Heights Baptist church at Atlanta, Ga., donned boxing gloves and sparred before the congregation as a means of inducing delinquent members to attend services.

Behind a sweeping resolution sent to the house of Representatives by Congressman A. J. Three hundred thousand organized miners of the bituminous coal fields of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas quit work. The miners, members of the United Mine Workers of America, declared the walk-out was not a strike, but merely a suspension of work pending an arrangement between themselves and the operators of a wage scale for another year, the old scale having expired with the month of March. The men demanded an increase of pay in some instances of five cents a ton, and in other instances more and certain changes in working conditions.

Prohibitionists won a victory in Massachusetts when the legislature advanced a bill which prohibits the selling of bottled intoxicants by persons licensed to sell goods on their premises.

RAILROAD MEN HEAR TAFT

PRESIDENT ADDRESSES GREAT CONVENTION OF WORKERS.

Rides in Automobile to Worcester, Mass., from Millbury, His Home During School and College Days.

Worcester, Mass., Apr. 4.—President Taft has been and gone, and has left the best kind of an impression on the minds of the thousands of delegates to the great railroad workers' convention, whom he addressed for about 40 minutes yesterday afternoon.

The president left Washington Saturday evening in his private car, and arrived yesterday morning at Millbury. That town was his home during his school and college days, and he spent the morning there as the guest of Miss Delia Torrey, a sister of the president's mother, who died there three years ago while he was in the Philippines. At 12:30 o'clock Mr. Taft entered an automobile and started for this city, escorted by a large party of railroad men also in motor cars. Five companies of the local militia met the chief eecutive at the city limits and escorted him to Mechanics' hall, where the convention is being held. Mayor James Logan greeted Mr. Taft to the city, and Gov. Eben S. Draper delivered the address of welcome on behalf of the state. The president's speech followed, and was listened to with the utmost interest. Then Rev. Dr. John McCoy spoke on "The Church and Labor," and talks were made by Presidents Brown of the New York Central Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, and Tuttle of the Boston and Maine. President Taft left at eight o'clock last night. At the evening session of the convention the speakers were W. S. Stone of Cleveland, Grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; A. B. Garretson of Cedar Rapids, Ia., Grand president of the Order of Railway Conductors; W. S. Carter of Peoria, Ill., international president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; W. G. Lee of Cleveland, grand master of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and P. H. Morrissey, president of the American Railway Employes' Investment association.

FARES FIVE CENTS STRAIGHT

Des Moines Street Car Company Cuts Out Six-for-a-quarter Fares, Effective Friday.

Des Moines, Apr. 2.—Official announcement has been made by the Des Moines City Railway company of a discontinuance of six fares for a quarter. Increased cost of maintenance and operation is assigned by the company as the specific reason for the new order effective yesterday.

Approximately half the people who ride on the street cars will be affected by the order. It will also mean an added income for the street car company of between $75,000 and $85,000 a year, figured on the estimate that 50 per cent of the passengers ride on the reduced fare. Increase in the taxable value of the property is also assigned as a reason for the new order.

George B. Hippee, president of the company, said that the company could no longer afford to grant the reduced fare. He said that it had done so for seven years, although not compelled by city ordinance and that the order was made to meet the increase in cost of maintenance.

"The question revolved itself into a straight financial proposition," Mr. Hippee said. "Our expenses have increased from 33 1-3 to 125 per cent in the last ten years, while the fare has remained the same. So our directors decided that all we could do was to discontinue the reduced fare."

Oklahoma Bee-Keepers Meet.

Guthrie, Okla., Apr. 4.—The Oklahoma Bee-Keepers' association held its annual meeting here today with good attendance and an interesting program. President N. Omaha Garage Destroyed.

Omaha, Neb., Apr. 2—The garage of H. E. Frederickson & Co., at Twenty-second and Farnum streets was entirely destroyed by a fire which started shortly before 2 o'clock this morning. Sixty automobiles were stored in the garage and none was saved. They belonged mostly to private owners. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

IN HOSPITAL FOR NINE MONTHS.

Awful Tale of Suffering From Kidney Trouble.

Alfred J. O'Brien, Second St., Sterling, Colo., says: "I was in the Baltimore Marine Hospital for nine months. I had a dull pain in the small of my back that completely wore me out. The urine was in a terrible state, and some days I would pass half a gallon of blood. I left the hospital because they wanted to operate on me. I went to St. Joseph's Hospital at Omaha and put in three months there without any gain. I was pretty well discouraged when I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I did so and by the time I had taken one box, the pain in the back left me. I kept right on and a perfect cure was the result."

"An infant in a Pullman car set up a loud wail, and would not be comforted," narrates a high railroad official, "and I came forward and told the young mother that I had helped to raise five, and that I thought I could secure a quietus. I put the little tum tum across my knees, and with a little jogging achieved beautiful results.

"Instead of giving me the credit I deserved, some drummers in the car showed stern disapproval of my 'butting in.'

"At 2 a. m., the baby woke up and stayed awake, and kept every one else in the car awake. Finally a gruff voice asked:

"'Where's that fool that put it to sleep this afternoon, I wonder?'"

Alas.

A little five-year-old who had been watching her mother dress for an evening entertainment surprised her mother with the following question: "Mother, didn't you say you were almost 40 years old?"

"Yes," replied the mother.

"Well," answered the little girl, "you don't look it to-night, but you will tomorrow morning."—Judge.

ROSY COLOR
Produced by Postum.

"When a person rises from each meal with a ringing in the ears and a general sense of nervousness, it is a common habit to charge it to a deranged stomach.

"I found it was caused from drinking coffee, which I never suspected for a long time, but found by leaving off coffee that the disagreeable feelings went away.

"I was brought to think of the subject by getting some Postum and this brought me out of trouble.

"It is a most appetizing and invigorating beverage and has been of such great benefit to me that I naturally speak of it from time to time as opportunity offers.

"A lady friend complained to me that she had tried Postum, but it did not taste good. In reply to my question she said she guesed she boiled it about ten minutes. I advised her to follow directions and know that she boiled it fifteen or twenty minutes, and she would have something worth talking about. A short time ago I heard one of her children say that they were drinking Postum now-a-days, so I judge she succeeded in making it good, which is by no means a difficult task.

"The son of one of my friends was formerly a pale lad, but since he has been drinking Postum, has a fine color. There is plenty of evidence that Postum actually does 'make red blood,' as the famous trade-mark says."

ONE OF ADAM'S TROUBLES

Incident In the Garden of Eden That Must Be Taken for What It Is Worth.

Rev. Dr. Charles Townsend of Orange was one of the speakers at the Park Presbyterian Church Men's club banquet last week, and told this story of one of the troubles of the original ancestor:

"Adam had eaten the elaborate repast furnished by his helpmeet with every indication that he relished each morsel. He complimented her upon the dainty manner in which the blue-points were served, the flavor of the puree of pea, the seasoning of the fish and entree, and finally reached a delicious salad. Adam paused, and with a worried look on his face he demanded of Eve where she found the ingredients. She enumerated all except the lettuce.

"'Where did you get those leaves?' he demanded.

"'Why, they were lying on a bush in the back yard,' she replied, sweetly.

"'Well, those were my best Sunday trousers,' sobbed Adam, adding, 'Ah, woe is man,' which was corrupted into 'woman,' the term by which we know Eve's daughters."—Newark Star.

BABY'S SKIN TORTURE

"When our baby was seven weeks old he broke out with what we thought was heat, but which gradually grew worse. We called in a doctor. He said it was eczema and from that time we doctored six months with three of the best doctors in Atchison but he only got worse. His face, head and hands were a solid sore. There was no end to the suffering for him. We had to tie his little hands to keep him from scratching. He never knew what it was to sleep well from the time he took the disease until he was cured. He kept us awake all hours of the night and his health wasn't what you would call good. We tried everything but the right thing.

"Finally I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies and I am pleased to say we did not use all of them until he was cured. We have waited a year and a half to see if it would return but it never has and to-day his skin is clear and fair as it possibly could be. I hope Cuticura may save some one else's little ones suffering and also their pocket-books. John Leason, 1403 Atchison St., Atchison, Kan., Oct. 19, 1909."

MEMORY FAILED.

Mother—Does that cook of yours know her place?

Daughter—I reckon she's had too many of them to remember.

Money and expense are not essential to artistic homes and attractive rooms. One dollar and fifty cents' worth of material will completely transform a crude, inartistic room into a graceful, dainty apartment.

Really it is good taste and skill that makes the home homelike. That dainty touch is worth twice as much as money.

Wall paper is expensive—it costs money to buy it, to hang it and again to remove it. With the use of the alabastine wall there is only the slight cost of the material—any one can brush it on—and it is not necessary to wash it off the wall when a fresh coat is required.

It is very easy to mix, very simple to apply, but the results are simply beautiful. A whole house can be done at just a little more than the cost of a single room when ordinary materials are used.

And this is true, that now that we have so much better materials for use in the decoration of our homes, that wall paper, common kalsomine and paint are now as much out of date as the old time whitewash, tallow candles and rough hewn floors. Mere money is no longer an essential in good housefurnishing in artistic home making.

The new materials and labor-saving machines are most welcome to us all—and every thoughtful woman, every woman who cares for her home, is quick to utilize them.

Absolute Equality.

The Woman—The tax office is one place which I simply love to go to.

The Man—Very few people do. Why do you like it?

The Woman—Because it is absolutely the only place where no discrimination is made against me because I am a woman. They let me there pay just as much as if I were a man.

Good Quality.

Customer—Are these apples fresh?

Grocer—Well, I guess. They'll give you the best sass you ever had.

SYNOPSIS.

Thomas Ardmore, bored millionaire, and Henry Malue Griswold, professor in the University of Virginia, take trains out of Atlanta, Griswold to his college, Ardmore in pursuit of a girl who had winked at him. Mistaken for Gov. Osborne of South Carolina, Griswold's life is threatened. He goes to Columbia to warn the governor and meets Barbara Osborne. He remains to assist her in the absence of her father.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

"You understand, of course, that this discussion is painful to me, extremely painful. And yet, so much has been published about my sister's domestic affairs—"

"Exactly, Mr. Ardmore. What we want is to print your side of the story."

"Well, the fact is—but please never mention it—the fact is that his grace owes me four dollars. I gave it to him in two bills—I remember the incident perfectly—two crisp new bills I had just got at the bank. His grace borrowed the money to pay a cabman—it was the very day before he married my sister."

The reporter stared a moment, then laughed. He abandoned the idea of getting material for a sensational article and scented the possibilities of a character sketch of the whimsical young millionaire.

"If you don't mind saying where you are going, Mr. Ardmore?"

"I'd tell you in a minute, only I haven't fully decided yet; but I shall probably take the Sambo Flyer at 9:13, if you don't make me lose it."

Ardmore looked the reporter over carefully as they shook hands. He was an attractive young fellow, alert and good humored, and Ardmore liked him, as, in his shy way, he really liked almost every one who seemed to be a human being.

"I'll tell you what I'll do with you. If you'll forget this rot we've been talking and come up to Ardsley as soon as I get home, I'll see if I can't keep you amused for a couple of weeks. What did you say your name is? Collins, Frank Collins? I never forget anything, so don't disappoint me."

The young man laughed outright.

"I'll remember; I really believe you mean for me to come."

"Of course I do. It's all settled; make it next week. Good-by!"

Ardmore ate his dinner oblivious of the fact that people at the neighboring table turned to look at him. He finally waved away his plate and called for coffee, and at that moment a middle-aged man appeared at the door, scanned the room for a moment and then threaded his way among the tables to Ardmore.

"I heard you were here and thought I'd look you up. How are you, Ardy?"

"Very well, thank you, Mr. Billings. Have you dined? Sorry; which way are you heading?"

The new-comer had the bearing of a gentleman used to consideration. He was, indeed, the secretary of the Bronx Loan and Trust Company, whose business was chiefly the administration of the Ardmore estate, and Ardmore knew him very well.

"I'm looking for a man, and I'm not good at the business. I've lost him and I don't understand it, I don't understand it," and the secretary seemed to be half-musing to himself as he sat down and rested his arms on the table.

"You might give me the job. I'm following a slight clew myself just at present."

The secretary, who had no great opinion of Ardmore's mental capacity, stared at the young man vacantly. Then it occurred to him that possibly Ardmore might be of service.

"Have you been at Ardsley recently?" he asked.

"Left there only a few days ago."

"You haven't seen your governor lately, have you?"

"My governor?" Ardmore stared blankly. "Why, Mr. Billings, don't you remember that father's dead?"

"I don't mean your father, Ardy," replied Billings with the exaggerated care of one who deals with extreme stupidity. "I mean the governor of North Carolina—one of the American states. Ardsley is still in North Carolina, isn't it?"

"Oh, yes; of course. But bless your soul, I don't know the governor. Why should one?"

"I don't know why, Ardy; but people sometimes do know governors and find it useful."

"I'm not in politics any more, Mr. Billings. What's this person's name?"

"Dangerfield. Don't you ever read the newspapers?" demanded the secretary, striving to control his inner rage.

"No; I quit reading newspapers after the noble duke of Ballywinkle didn't break the bank at Monte Carlo that last time."

"You mustn't be so thin-skinned. You pay the penalty of belonging to one of the wealthiest families in America," and Billings' tone was paternal.

"So I've heard, but I'm not so terribly proud of it. What about this governor?"

"That's what troubles me—what of the governor?" Billings dropped his voice so that no one but Ardmore could hear. "He's missing—disappeared."

"That's the first interesting thing I ever heard of a governor doing," said Ardmore. "Tell me more."

"He's had a row with the governor of South Carolina at New Orleans. I was to have met him here on an important matter of business this afternoon, but he's cleared out and nobody knows what's become of him. His daughter, even, who was in New Orleans with him, doesn't know where he is."

"Ah! the daughter! She remains behind to guard his retreat."

"The daughter is still here. She's a peppery little piece," and Billings looked guardedly around the room. "That's she, alone over there in the corner—the girl with the white feather in her hat who's just signing her check. There—she's getting up!"

"It's a Present for Gov'nor Danger field. He'll Understand."

Ardmore gazed across the room intently, then suddenly a slight smile played about his lips. To gain the door the girl must pass by his table, and he scrutinized her closely as she drew near and passed. She was a little girl, and her light fluffy hair swept out from under a small blue hat in a shell-like curve, and the short skirt of her tailor-made gown robbed her, it seemed, of years to which the calendar might entitle her.

"She gave me the steadiest eye I ever looked into when I asked her where her father had gone," remarked Billings grimly as the girl passed. "She said she thought he'd gone fishing for whales."

"So she's Miss Dangerfield, is she?" asked Ardmore indifferently; and he rose, leaving on the plate, by a sudden impulse of good feeling toward the world, exactly double the generous tip he had intended giving. Billings was glad to be rid of Ardmore and they parted in the hotel lobby without waste of words.

Ardmore's effects had been brought down and were already piled on a carriage at the door. In his pocket was his passage to New Orleans and a stateroom ticket. At the cashier's desk Miss Dangerfield paid her bill, just ahead of him.

"If any telegrams come for my father please forward them to Raleigh," said the girl. The manager came out personally to show her to her carriage, and having shut the door upon her, he wished Ardmore, who stood discreetly by, a safe journey.

"Off for New Orleans, are you, Mr. Ardmore?" asked the manager courteously.

"No," said Ardmore, "I'm going to Raleigh to look at the tall buildings," whereat the manager returned to his duties, gravely shaking his head.

At the station Ardmore caught sight of Miss Dangerfield, attended by two porters, hurrying toward the Tar Heel express. He bought a ticket to Raleigh, and secured the last available berth from the conductor on the platform at the moment of departure.

Ardmore did not like to be hurried, and thus sudden change of plans had been almost too much for him, but he was consoled by the reflection that after all these years of waiting for just such an adventure he had proved himself equal to an emergency that required quick thought and swift action. He had not only found the girl with the playful eye, but he had learned her identity without, as it were, turning over his hand.

The stateroom door stood open, and from his seat at the farther end of the car Ardmore caught a fleeting glimpse of Miss Dangerfield as she threw off her jacket and hat; then she summoned the porter, give him her tickets, bade him a smiling good night and the door closed upon her.

Ardmore went back to smoke and plan his future movements. For the first time in his life he faced to-morrow with eager anticipations, resolved that nothing should thwart his high resolves, though these, to be sure, were somewhat hazy. He did not know why Billings was so anxious to find Miss Dangerfield's father, but as between a man of Billings' purely commercial instincts and the governor of a great state like North Carolina Ardmore resolved to stand by the Dangerfields to the end of the chapter. He was proud to remember his estate at Ardsley, which was in Gov. Dangerfield's jurisdiction, and had been visited by the game warden, the state forester, and various other members of the governor's official household, though Ardmore could not remember their names. He had never in his life visited Raleigh, but far down some dim vista of memory he saw Sir Walter covering a mud-puddle with his cloak for Queen Elizabeth.

Ardmore smoked many pipes and did not turn in until after midnight. The car was hot and stuffy and he slept badly. At some hour of the morning, being again awake and restless, he fished his dressing-gown and slippers out of his bag and went out on the rear platform. His was the last car, and he found a camp-stool and crouched down upon it in a corner of the vestibule and stared out into the dark. The hum and click of the rails soothed him and he yielded himself to pleasant reveries.

Ardmore was half-dozing when the train stopped so abruptly that he was pitched from the camp-stool into a corner of the entry. He got himself together and leaned out into the cool moist air.

The porter came out and stared, for a gentleman in a blue silk wrapper who sat up all night in a vestibule was new to his experience.

"What place is this, porter?"

"Kildare, sah. This place is wha' we go from South C'lina into N'oth C'lina. Ain't yo' be'th comfor'ble, sah?"

"Perfectly; thank you."

Kildare was a familiar name, and the station, that lay at the outskirts of the town, and a long grim barracks-like building that he identified as a cotton mill, recalled the fact that he was not far from his own ample acres which lay off somewhere to westward. He had occasionally taken this route from the north in going to Ardsley, riding or driving from Kildare about ten miles to his house. In this way he was enabled to go or come without appearing at all in the little village of Ardsley.

The porter left him. He felt ready for sleep now, and resolved to go back to bed as soon as the train started. Just then a dark shadow appeared in the track and a man's voice asked cautiously:

"Air y'u the conductor?"

The questioner saw that he was not, before Ardmore could reply, and hesitated a moment.

"The porter's in the car; you can get aboard up forward," Ardmore suggested.

"Be Gov'nor Dangerfield on this train?" asked the man, whom Ardmore now saw dimly outlined in the track below.

"Certainly, my friend. The governor's asleep, but I'm his private secretary. What can I do for you?"

"Well, hyeh's somethin' fer 'im—it's confidential. Sure, air ye, th' gov'nor's in they?"

The man—a tall bearded countryman in a slouch hat, handed up to Ardmore a jug—a plain, brown, old-fashioned American gallon jug.

"It's a present fer Gov'nor Dangerfield. He'll understand," and the man vanished as mysteriously as he had appeared, leaving Ardmore holding the jug by its handle, and feeling a little dazed by the transaction.

The train lingered, and Ardmore was speculating as to which one of the Carolina commonwealths was beneath him, when another figure appeared below in the track—that of a bareheaded, tousled boy this time. He stared up at Ardmore sleepily, having apparently been roused on the arrival of the train.

"Air y'u the gov'nor?" he piped.

"Yes, my lad; in what way can I serve you?" and Ardmore put down his jug and leaned over the guard rail. It was just as easy to be the governor as the governor's private secretary, and his vanity was touched by the readiness with which the boy accepted him in his new role. His costume, vaguely discernible in the vestibule light, evidently struck the lad as being some amazing robe of state affected by governors. The youngster was lifting something, and he now held up to Ardmore a jug, as like the other as one pea resembles another.

"Pa ain't home and ma says hyeh's yer jug o' buttermilk."

A Soldier Yarn.

Sir William Arbuckle is a capital speaker, a quality which has made him exceedingly popular at society dinners. He once told an amusing story, at an annual South African dinner, about Sir Harry Smith, who, in days gone by, was commandant and governor at the Cape. The supply from home, and necessaries of all kinds for the soldiers, was generally sadly deficient, and the men were often in a pitiable plight in the way of clothing. There was, consequently, much discontent. So Sir Harry had them on parade, said some pleasant things to them, complimented them on their soldierly appearance, told them what splendid fellows they were, talked of the service they had seen together, and so forth. When he had finished, an old sergeant stepped forward, saluted, and remarked: "Thank you Sir 'Arry, beg pardon, Sir 'Arry, but we don't want no gammon, we want boots."

To See by Wire.

"To see at a distance, as we now hear, by means of the telephone, is the claim for the invention made by the Anderson brothers," says a Copenhagen letter in a Paris paper. The patents are for "an apparatus for the transmission of pictures by wire, showing color and motion." The brothers could not obtain money in their own country to defray the expenses of preparing working models and procuring patents, but they were helped by a Parison concern, which paid 80,000 francs for all the rights and has agreed to pay also eight per cent. on the earnings resulting from the invention.

Thus Begin Each Day.

I will this day try to live a simple, sincere and serene life; repelling every thought of discontent, anxiety, discouragement, impurity, and self-seeking; cultivating cheerfulness, magnanimity, charity, self-control, and the habit of beautiful silence; exercising economy in expenditure, carefulness in conversation, diligence in appointed service and fidelity in every trust.—Bishop Vincent.

Pessimism.

EXCELLENT TRADE IN WESTERN CANADA

SPLENDID CROPS, BIG PRICES, AND PROSPEROUS OUTLOOK FOR THE FUTURE.

Throughout all of Canada, and especially in the Western Provinces of Canada, there is a buoyancy in every line of business that is fully warranted by every condition. The crops of the past year were what was expected, and the prices for grain of all kinds, put the farmers in a class by themselves. Many of them are independent, and many others have got well started on the road. The latest reports are that seeding is well under way in almost every district, and the prospects are that a vastly larger area than that under crop last year will be seeded early this spring. In the Lethbridge district, in Southern Alberta, steam and gasoline outfits, hundreds of them, are breaking up the prairie at a tremendous pace, but they work night and day. As soon as it becomes dark, gangs are changed, a head light attached, and on, on through the night until the first streak of dawn, these giant monsters with their seven or eight gangs of breaking plows, keep up the work. Then the more modest farmer is putting in the longest hours possible with his teams of horses or oxen. And what will the Country be like in August, when these fields have become yellowed with the literally golden grain. There will be one vast expanse of wheat field. And there will be a market for it, because it is the best grain grown, and the demand will be everywhere. As previously intimated business throughout Western Canada is sound and good. The grain production of 1909 has been the great factor in establishing the reputation of Western Canada, and it is worth talking about. It surpassed all previous records, both in regard to quality and quantity, and such an achievement was by no means easy. The limit has not been reached, and a large average increase may be expected during the next ten years. There will be odd seasons when a falling-off will occur, and it is the falling-off that causes alarms and panics in the commercial world. The plains have done their duty so far in the out-put of grain and it would be reasonable to make occasional allowances for slowing-up. The faster the rate of increase is now, the sharper will be the check when the production diminishes. But there are some unreasonable people who wonder why the growth of one year is not continued during the next, and at an even faster rate. These same unreasonable people are the ones who see flaws in the situation as soon as an indication is given that the startling advances have not been maintained.

A. M. DEYOE FOR STATE SUPERINTENDENT

To My Friends in Hancock County:

I desire to hereby express my appreciation to the citizens and the newspapers of Hancock county for their co-operation and the encouragement that I have received in my efforts for the betterment of the public schools of the county, during my service for the ninth year as county superintendent of schools. Over twenty-one of the best years of my life have been devoted to the interests of the schools of the county.

I will be a candidate for State Superintendent of Public Instruction at the primaries, June 7, 1910. I am the only candidate from north of the central part of the state so far for this office. My chances appear good for the nomination. I acknowledge the support of many friends in the state who are working for me through the newspapers.

My friends in Hancock county will show me a great favor by writing to their friends and acquaintances anywhere in the state concerning my candidacy. You will help me greatly by calling attention in this manner to my name and I assure you that I will be very grateful for your assistance. Very sincerely,

A. M. DEYOE.

Garner, Iowa, April 4, 1910.

The Times wishes to impress upon the minds of everyone who reads this, the fact that Hancock county has a candidate for a state office—one that should have your most careful consideration. We do not need to impress upon you the importance of the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction—you already know that it is the most important office within the gift of the people of the state. The foundation of the future welfare of our state and nation is now in the building, right in our schools—and the State Superintendent should be the best fitted man to have charge of this vast work.

Prof. A. M. Deyoe, our present county superintendent, is our candidate, and no man in the whole state is better fitted for the position. He has put his life work and energy into the betterment of the schools and you all know how faithfully and well he has done his work in Hancock county. There is not the least doubt as to his ability, integrity and high moral character, and every citizen of the county should take pride in promoting his candidacy at every opportunity. Following are some of the important educational views advanced by Prof. Deyoe:

1. Unity of action among all the educational forces of the state on such questions as may be determined to be of especial importance.

2 A general educational campaign for improved common school conditions, appealing to the confidence of the people. An enlightened public sentiment will lead to legislation.

3. Secondary school privileges with practical courses of study for the country youth.

4. Better facilities for training teachers for the rural schools.

5. Some provisions for better supervision of the rural schools.

6. Fewer school officers with definite compensation to such officers for the performance of official duties at school officers' conferences.

7. Better social privileges respecting rural life are important and may be secured by making the school house the center for social and educational gatherings.

8. Proper recognition should be extended to such districts as meet a certain standard in equipment as to buildings, apparatus and character of school work done.

9. The rural schools and the graded school be correlated with high schools of required standard, with uniform examination for promotion from the eighth grade.

10. The present certificate law is to be commended as promoting professional growth among teachers by favoring the experienced and well qualified teachers.

11. The essential function of the public school is to teach well and the common branches must be considered of first importance and a thorough knowledge of each school and the work of the teacher should be held as the chief duty of the county superintendent. This knowledge can best be gained by mingling with the schools.

MOST PEOPLE DO NOT KNOW CAUSE OF THEIR SICKNESS

Does human health depend on one organ alone? This question is becoming widely discussed since L. T. Cooper first advanced his theory that the stomach is the true seat of life and all health dependent upon it.

Mr. Cooper, who has met with remarkable success in the sale of his new medicine, believes that the stomach is responsible for most sickness, and that this organ is weak in the present generation. While discussing this theory recently, he said: "I am asked time and again to tell why my medicine has made such a record wherever I have introduced it. My answer always is, 'because it restores the stomach to a normal condition.' No one will deny that today there are more half-sick men and women than ever before. Nothing critical seems to be the matter with them. They are just half-sick most of the time. They don't know really what is the matter with them. I have talked with thousands during the past two years, and few knew indeed what their trouble was. One said nervousness, another said kidney trouble, another liver complaint, some constipation, or heart trouble, or lung trouble. Many had treated, as they called it, for most of these diseases at different times. A very common complaint is 'all run down,' or 'tired all the time,' or 'no appetite.'

"I know positively that every bit of this chronic ill health is caused by stomach trouble and nothing else. My New Discovery puts the stomach in sound condition in about six weeks. Mighty few people can be sick with a sound digestion. That is why my medicine is selling at such a tremendous rate. I have convinced many thousands of people that these things are so, and the number is growing by leaps and bounds."

Among more recent converts to Mr. Cooper's beliefs is Mrs. Lottie L. Miner, living on Rural Route No. 2, Henniker, N. H., who says: "I was in poor health for six years, from stomach trouble and indigestion. Quite frequently my stomach was so weak that it would not retain solid food. I had vomiting spells every morning, and was subject to frequent attacks of dizziness. Life became such a burden that I often felt it was not worth the living. I tried everything I could hear of, but found nothing that would afford relief.

"For some time I had been reading of the Cooper remedies, and finally decided to give the New Discovery preparation a trial. After taking the first bottle, I noticed a marked improvement. Five bottles made me entirely well. I can eat anything I wish, and have not been troubled with my stomach since. The dizzy spells disappeared long ago.

"My mother, Mrs. Susan Parkins, is a nurse of long experience. Both she and my father have used the Cooper remedies with splendid results. I will be glad to answer any personal correspondence in regard to my case."

Cooper's New Discovery is sold by all druggists. If your druggist cannot supply you, we will forward you the name of a druggist in your city who will. Don't accept "something just as good."—The Cooper Medicine Co., Dayton, Ohio.

Good Work in Denmark.

Under legislation enacted in 1905 the Danish government pays three-fourths of the expenses of all poor persons who desire to be treated in tuberculosis sanatoria. When the hospitals under construction are completed Denmark will have one bed in tuberculosis hospitals or sanatoria for every 1,200 inhabitants, a fact which will mean that the length of treatment can be considerably extended. In the United States there is one bed for every 4,500 inhabitants.

Wrong View of Marriage.

"There would be les divorce," said ex-Gov. Pennypacker, "if there were fewer men like William Windle.

"William Windle embarked on an excursion steamer for Point Breeze, and a few miles out, as he paced the upper deck and drank in the bracing ozone, he spied his friend Jackson.

"'Why Jackson, how are ye?' he exclaimed. 'Are ye out for pleasure, or is yer wife along?'"

A Mean Scheme.

"Is your wife home?"

"Yes; I got tired of having her away."

"But I thought she intended staying four months?"

"She did. I got the office boy to write on a card: 'Better come home. From a well wisher.' And she took the first train after receiving it."

FOR DEEP-SEATED COLDS and coughs, Allen's Lung Balsam cures when all other remedies fail. This old reliable medicine has been sold for over 40 years. 25c, 50c, $1.00 bottles. All dealers.

FIVE CENT FARES

Des Moines Street Car Co. Cuts Out Six-for-a-Quarter.

COST OF OPERATION HIGHER

President Hippee Declares That Company is No Longer Able to Give Satisfactory Service at Old Cut Rate.

Des Moines, Apr. 4—Official announcement has been made by the Des Moines City Railway company of a discontinuance of six fares for a quarter. Increased cost of maintenance and operation is assigned by the company as the specific reason for the new order effective yesterday.

Approximately half the people who ride on the street cars will be affected by the order. It will also mean an added income for the street car company of between $75,000 and $85,000 a year, figured on the estimate that 50 per cent of the passengers ride on the reduced fare. Increase in the taxable value of the property is also assigned as a reason for the new order.

George B. Hippee, president of the company, said that the company could no longer afford to grant the reduced fare. He said that it had done so for seven years, although not compelled by city ordinance and that the order was made to meet the increase in cost of maintenance.

"The question revolved itself into a straight financial proposition," Mr. Hippee said. "Our expenses have increased from 33 1-3 to 125 per cent in the last ten years, while the fare has remained the same. So our directors decided that all we could do was to discontinue the reduced fare."

Eighty Boys in Oat-Growing Contest.

Manchester.—County Superintendent Joseph has sent out to eighty lads, each one-half bushel of choice Swedish Selected White and Black Oats, which is known to make enormous yields with but the ordinary methods of cultivation, and with scientific treatment to go beyond all expecttations. A report is to be made once a month to Mr. Joseph of the progress being made by each entry, and a suitable prize will be awarded at the end of the contest for the greatest yield from the one-half bushel, which is supposed to be planted on a plot of one-eighth acre.

In his instructions to the lads of the county who have entered the contest, Mr. Joseph advises them to plant their oats in the same field with their father's crop, in order that a comparison may be made at any time of the progress and probable outcome of the fancy oats seed, which has been imported from Canadian seed growers for the purpose of the local contest.

Harrison County Wins.

Logan.—According to advice received here from Harlan, Harrison county won out in a bitterly contested $5,000 damage case brought by Miss Sewing to recover damages for personal injuries sustained because of alleged negligence on the part of Harrison county bridge builders near Woodbine.

Says Loose Rail Caused Wreck.

Marshalltown.—C. M. Marshall, master of equipment for the Rock Island railway, declared at the state railroad commission's investigation of the Green Mountain wreck that the accident was caused by a loose rail, the end of which was struck by the wheel of the first engine's tender.

Brakeman Probably Fatally Injured.

Council Bluffs.—While attempting to board his train at Underwood, C. L. Thomas a brakeman on the Milwaukee road, whose home is at Perry, fell and was probably fatally murt. He was hit upon the head by some object. Thomas was hurried to Council Bluffs and placed in a hospital.

Moving Picture Panic in Manchester.

Sioux Rapids.—Mrs. C. E. Ryder, wife of one of the editors of the Republican Press, gave birth to three boys and the mother and babies are all doing nicely.

CHAMPION CHILD SPELLER

Eleven-Year-Old Lucy Robinson, of Ryan, Has Won Many Prizes.

Ryan.—Miss Lucy Robinson of Ryan, is the champion child speller of Iowa. She is a little past eleven years of age, yet this young girl has such a mastery of the dictionary and its big words that she permits none of the boys or girls to out-spell her and get ahead of her in her ability to correctly couple letters together and make big and little words properly constructed. At numerous inter-county contests inaugurated by the school superintendents Miss Lucy has always won first prize and she is able to cope with some of the students who are much older than she.

MISS LUCY ROBINSON.
Champion Child Speller of the State.

Not only is the little Ryan girl a good speller but she is a good story writer as well and has taken prizes for long and short stories which have shown much merit and cleverness.

Educators are inclined to look upon the young girl as a marvel. She has always been able to spell correctly but how she comes by the gift no one seems able to explain. She spells with a sort of intuitive knowledge of words and their construction and when she is entered in a spelling contest she attacks every puzzler that is given to her to spell with a certainty and a precision that is simply amazing.

Commercial Club Wins in Rate Case.

Des Moines.—The Des Moines Commercial club won a victory in the hearing before Attorney General Byers in the case of the Minneapolis & St. Louis railway. The attorney general, after hearing the arguments of the representatives o fthe club and after reading the written argument submitted by General Counsel Seevers for the railway company, announced that he will recommend that the railroad commission issue an order to the railway company directing it either to restore the service which was formerly given over the line between Ruthven and Des Moines, or charge the short line fare for the long line ride, via Tara Junction and Fort Dodge.

Seed Corn Very Bad.

Hamburg.—Inquiry among the farmers of this section indicates that the securing of seed corn will be a problem with some. The seed corn which was secured before the heavy rain last November tests out about 90 per cent good, while corn that was left in the field tests out about 45 or 50 per cent.

Escaped Broken Neck.

Fort Dodge.—Mrs. Fred McHaley, a farmer's wife, miraculously escaped a broken neck when she walked backward through an open cellar door as she was sweeping and fell headlong to the bottom. Her injuries consisted of a broken shoulder and many bruises, but she will recover.

Stork Busy at Mason City.

Mason City.—Approximately 600 babies were born in Mason City this last year, according to the report of the assessors who have practically finished their work for the year. This showing is the best made in the city for any one year and it exceeds the deaths by nearly 200.

Much Corn Testing.

Bloomfield.—J. R. Wallace, secretary of the Davis County Farmers' institute, says that corn taken from an ordinary crib when tested proved only 16 2-3 per cent good. Seed corn raised according to the experts' instructions averaged 66 per cent good.

New Parsonage for Sidney.

Sidney.—The initiatory steps have been taken toward the building of a Methodist Episcopal parsonage in Sidney to cost about $3,000, and to be erected during the coming summer.

PEARY TELLS OF TRIP

Commander Lectures at the Coliseum in Des Moines.

GOVERNOR CARROLL PRESIDED

Shows Pictures of Scenes He Beheld When on His Trip Through Frozen North—More Than Thousand People Present.

Des Moines, Apr. 4.—Commander Robert E. Peary told of his discovery of the north pole to more than 1,000 people in the Coliseum Saturday night. The lecture was illustrated with stereopticon views taken during the course of the journey.

While the views were magnificent the lecture as a whole came as a sort of disappointment. Commander Peary is not an exceedingly interesting public speaker and he seemed to be unable to lift his voice sufficiently to be heard over the entire convention hall.

Commander Peary showed pictures of the paraphernalia used in his wanderings in the most northern arctic regions, and of the Eskimos, the northern lights, the frozen seas and the mammoth icebergs encountered by the party.

"I have often been asked what my sensation was when I found myself at the pole," said Commander Peary. "I was so tired and exhausted that I could not be worked up to any great sensation. I merely had a feeling of gratification that I had satisfied my family, myself, and my friends."

"One of the most important features of the discovery of the pole was the finding that the sea at that point is more than two miles deep," said Mr. Peary. He said that this will be of great aid to scientists in the future. The coldest weather experienced by the party was fifty-nine degrees below zero and the warmest eleven above.

Governor Carroll who presided at the lecture was introduced by Lafayette Young.

WILSON "BIT" IN ALASKA MINE

Reported to Be Heavy Investor in Arctic Mine Which Caught Many at the Capital.

Washington, Apr. 4.—Secretary Wilson and a large number of the employes of his department are greatly disturbed over the slump in the value of the Alaska copper mining stock in which they are reported to have invested heavily. Secretary Wilson declines to state the extent of his investment, but it is known to be large. There are more than 100 stockholders in Washington, who have put $150,000 in the Alaska project and most of the stockholders are employed in the department of agriculture, where Chief Clerk Sylvester R. Burch, a former Iowan, was active in promoting the sale of the stock.

The company in which Secretary Wilson and his employes invested is known as the Hubbard-Elliott Copper Mines Development company of Alaska. H. Curtis Elliott, one of the organizers of the company, is said to have been "grub staked" for Alaskan prospecting by relatives who live at Marion, Iowa. Elliott was killed by an Alaska avalanche last December, since which time the stock in the company is said to have taken a toboggan. One time this stock was quoted as high as $6, and now is near 40 cents on the market, though the par value is $1.

WIND CAUSES MUCH DAMAGE

Houses Damaged, and Barns Carried Away—Worst Storm of the Season Which Swept Des Moines and Vicinity Sunday Night.

Des Moines, Apr. 4—After the fury of the rain storm had spent itself last night, one of the most severe wind storms that Des Moines has experienced in years gained added strength and did thousands' of dollars worth of damage on the west side.

All electric light and telephone wires were blown down for a radius of half a mile

The scene of the whirlwind a short time after it had passed was a mass of wreckage and confusion.

The loss in the section will be high. Several of the men who had made the rounds of all the damaged propert the rounds of all the damaged property estimated that it will not fall below $20,000 and many declared that it will be more.

Farmers should eat more oatmeal.

Although the farmer of today is able to buy almost anything he wants to wear or eat he isn't paying enough attention to food values when it comes to his own table.

He feeds his stock carefully, avoids over-feeding and selects the stock food that he believes will give the best returns in strength and general efficiency.

If he has been watching the extensive researches and experiments on the question of the best human food for muscle and brain he will heed the advice from all sides to "eat more Quaker Oats."

Quaker Oats is mentioned because it is recognized in this country and Europe as the best of all oatmeals. Feeding farm hands on Quaker Oats means getting more work out of them than if you feed them on anything else. 61

An Efficient Mistress.

Mrs. A., who had a shiftless colored maid, was hurrying through her morning's work in order to go out with a friend in the afternoon. As she flew about from room to room she heard the colored woman chuckling to herself as if very much enjoying something. Impatiently she said:

"What in the world is it that amuses you so, Isabel?"

"Well, Mis' Bessie, when I heard you gallopin' aroun' upstairs I jes' t'ought if you'd been de Lawd it wouldn't 'a' took you no six days to make de hebbens an' de yearth!"—S. A. Rice, in Woman's Home Companion.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Silence.

Very few men know how to keep still. The Italians have a proverb, "Hear, see, and say nothing, if you wish to live in peace." The man who is bent on telling all he knows, generally ends in telling a good deal more than he knows. The tongue is harder to bridle than the wildest horse that ever roamed the prairie. The Germans say truly that talking comes by nature, while silence comes of the understanding.

GLADNESS COMES ~

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of illness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact that it is the only remedy which promotes internal cleanliness, without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is, therefore, all-important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to purchase and note that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

It is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the kidneys, liver and bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and assists in overcoming habitual constipation permanently, also biliousness and the many ills resulting therefrom. The great trouble with all other purgatives and aperients is not that they fail to act when a single dose is taken, but that they act too violently and invariably tend to produce a habit of body requiring constantly augmented doses. Children enjoy the pleasant taste and gentle action of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the ladies find it delightful and beneficial whenever a laxative remedy is needed, and business men pronounce it invaluable, as it may be taken without interfering with business and does not gripe nor nauseate. When buying note the name, California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of every package. Price, 50 cents a bottle.

THE SILVANDO.

Queer Whistling Language of the Canary Island Natives.

In Gomera, one of the smallest of the Canary Islands, the silvando, or whistling language, survives. A correspondent writes: "A traveler must land at the little port of San Sebastian and there find a muleteer from the interior. With him he must ride up the steep bridle paths that wind through the mountains. When no longer any living thing is within sight and the wilderness is only broken by the crimson flower of the cactus growing in the clefts of the rock, the muleteer dismounts, sets his forefingers together at a right angle and places them in his mouth. An arrow of piercing sounds shoots across the ravines and up the stony terraces into the fastnesses of the mountains. A moment's pause and there comes a thin, almost uncanny, answering whistle from far away. Conversation begins and, as the sounds rise and fall, are staccatoed or drawn out, so they are faithfully echoed and transmitted by the hills.

"Then comes the ghostly reply, and then question and answer follow without hesitation or misunderstanding. Perhaps the stranger will ask, 'What are you doing there?' Answer: 'There is a traveler with me. One of our mules is lame. Can you bring us a fresh one?' 'Yes, I can. Do you want anything else?' 'You might bring some milk along if you have any,' and so on. That the conversation is correctly interpreted is presently confirmed by the arrival of the mule and the milk, and the distance that separated the parties to the dialogue turns out to be about three miles.

"Long notes and short notes, rising and falling tones, go to make this marvelous means of communication. No record is to be found of its origin or history, and it will be a thousand pities if scientific investigation is not made before the silvando is added to the list of dead languages, as assuredly it will be within the next two or three generations."—Chicago News.

A Minister's Indigestion

Rev. Fletcher of Tennessee Suggests a Remedy Based on Personal Experience—You Can Get It Free.

There is nothing that is so much sought after as a remedy for stomach trouble, and hence you will be interested to know how the Rev. A. J. Fletcher of Rutherford, Tenn., whose picture we present herewith, cured his indigestion. To use his own words, he says, in part:

Rev. A. J. Fletcher

"I received the sample bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin that I asked you to send me, and I made no mistake in ordering it. I have been troubled with dyspepsia and indigestion more or less for about sixty years, and have taken many remedies, but Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has done me more good than anything else. I am 79."

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been sold in drug stores for twenty years. The price is only 50 cents or $1 a bottle. It is especially adapted to the uses of babies, children, women and old folks. Its purity is vouched to the Government, and results from its use are guaranteed. If you have never tried it send name and address for a free trial bottle, which will be cheerfully sent to your home prepaid. If there is any medical advice that you want, or anything about your condition that you don't understand, write the doctor. Address your letter, Dr. W. B. Or Else Burn.

Andrew Carnegie, apropos of his epigram about the disgrace of dying rich, said at a dinner in Washington:

"Why should any one die rich? There are no pockets in a shroud, and as for the man who'd like to take his money with him, why, even if he managed to do so, it would only melt."

It is said old age steals upon us. There is no need for old age to do anything of the kind; he will do it anyway, and might as well do it in the open.

LOOKS AFTER BOYS

Joseph T. Harnett Is Agent State Board of Control.

A FRIEND OF WAYWARD BOYS

It Is His Duty to Obtain for Paroled Boys Homes on Farms, In Workshop, Factory and in Offices. —Helps Many Boys.

Eldora, Ia., Apr. 11.—Joseph T. Harnett, known at the state house at Des Moines, as State Agent of the Board of Control of Iowa, is probably one of the best friends a wayward boy of the Hawkeye state ever had. It is the duty of this officer to obtain for paroled boys homes on farms, in the workshop and office. He has the job of traveling all over the counties of Iowa looking after the state's wards whom the Board of Control permit to leave the Boys' Industrial school. In the shops of the larger towns and cities, on the farms and in many a home in town are boys who have received the proper number of merits in the big state school, and who have no home of their own to go to when they leave the institution. Mr. Harnett is in constant communication with each one of these lads and indeed has his hands full the most of the time, looking after the boys, seeing to it that they behave and do not violate the terms of their parole, that they save their money and do not drift again into the bad and into bad company. The official very much enjoys his labors and has some thrilling as well as exceedingly interesting experiences with the boys in his line of work and duty. He has been the means of getting some of his proteges, so to speak, to save their money, put it in the savings banks and gradually grow up to become interesting and useful men. They leave the school at Eldora equipped to do some work at some kind of a profession or trade and the majority of the lads who understand farming go to the homes of well to do and respectable farmers. There is a demand made upon Mr. Harnett for more boys than he is able to supply and farmers are anxious to get the lads to work for them and furnish the good homes with plenty of pleasant surroundings.

Robber of Dead Arrested.

Marshalltown.—Charged with larceny at the scene of the Rock Island railway wreck near Green Mountain, March 20, Robert I. Beale, a Postal telegraph operator, was arrested here. Beale is accused with having in his possession a woman's ring, set with seven diamonds and six small opals, the largest diamond being of about a quarter karat. The police claim he had filed the prongs holding the set, and disposed of the stones. The ring was sold to a jeweler for 30 cents, and the largest diamond pawned to a friend for $5. Four smaller diamonds sold for 25 cents. The other two small diamonds and the opals are not yet accounted for. Beale also had six Pullman sleeper pillow slips which were found in the Postal office.

Iowa Woman Owns Rare Violins.

Eldora.—Mrs. W. R. Scholfifield of this city possesses two fine old violins. The lady is a splendid musician herself, being a violinist and singer, and has had the instruments for a long time. The one which she prizes the highest is a genuine Cremona and is over 300 years old, having been manufactured in 1589, and was purchased by the lady from a celebrated violinist who was obliged to part with his favorite at a time when he was in straightened circumstances. The record of this fine old Cremona is filed and is known by many of the celebrated violinists of this country and Europe. The other instruments which the Eldora lady prizes highly is a violin which she has had for a long time and has been handed down from generation to generation in her family for fully 150 years.

On April 6, 1867, he was placed upon a freight engine and in September, 1885, he was promoted to a passenger engine, and for the past twenty-five years he has been a passenger engineer. Mr. Finnegan has made his home in Boone for many years and the friends he has made are more than glad to learn that he is honorably retired.

WESTERN CANADA

What Prof. Shaw, the Well-Known Agriculturist, Says About It:

"I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. Feeding is cheaper and climate better for the purpose. Your market will improve faster than yours. Your farmers will produce more supplies. Wheat can be grown up to the 60th parallel (800 miles north of the International boundary). Your vacant lands will be taken at a rate beyond present conception. We have enough people in the United States alone who want homes to take up this land."

70,000 Americans will enter and make their homes in Western Canada this year. 1909 produced another large crop of wheat, oats and barley, in addition to which the cattle exports was an immense item. Cattle raising, dairying, mixed farming and grain growing in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Free homestead and pre-emption areas, as well as lands for sale by railway and land companies, provide homes for millions. Adaptable soil, healthful climate, splendid schools and churches, and good railways.

THE ROAD TO POPULARITY

Recipe Has Been in Use Many Years But It Is Not Always Safe to Trust It.

"The way to be popular has been explained by one of the marshmallow magazines which inflates itself with the idea that it is directing modern life. "When you shake hands with a man," runs the recipe, "grasp the hand as though you were glad to see the owner, look him in the eye, and give him a smile from your heart." This is a sure-enough recipe. It has been worked by some of the greatest frauds in Christendom to subserve their own ends. The man who is seeking popularity, posing for it, juggling for it, usually doesn't deserve it. Keep your admiration for men who show you their real selves, who, when they are bothered or worried, or mad, or glad, make it manifest by appropriate facial expression, and who are not constantly standing themselves before the mirror.

The Dog Settled It.

The multimillionaire was uncertain. "But how do I know you can support my daughter in the manner to which she has been accustomed?" he demanded, dubiously.

The imported nobleman smiled blandly.

"I will go ze test," he volunteered.

"What test?"

"I will lif with you one year and zee how she is accustomed and zen I will know what to say."

But just then James the footman, liberated the $5,000 bulldog.

A Small Loaf.

A half-famished fellow in the southern states tells of a baker (whose loaves had been growing "small by by degrees and beautifully less") who, when going his rounds to serve his customers, stopped at the door of one and knocked, when the lady within exclaimed: "Who's there?" and was answered: "The baker." "What do you want?" "To leave your bread." "Well, you needn't make such a fuss about it; put it through the keyhole."

Algy Explains.

"What do you suppose, Algernon," the young thing asked, "is the reason the ocean is salty?"

"I am sure I don't know," drawled Algy, "unless it is because there are so many salt fish in it."—Success.

The Vested Interests.

"Yes, Mrs. Snoggs, I 'oped as 'ow they would get tariff reform and make the foreigner pay, as we've got one in our top-floor back and I ain't 'ad nothink of him for six weeks now."—The Tatler.

ABANDONED IT

For the Old Fashioned Coffee Was Killing.

"I always drank coffee with the rest of the family, for it seemed as if there was nothing for breakfast if we did not have it on the table.

"I had been troubled some time with my heart, which did not feel right. This trouble grew worse steadily.

"Sometimes it would beat fast and at other times very slowly, so that I would hardly be able to do work for an hour or two after breakfast, and if I walked up a hill, it gave me a severe pain.

"I had no idea of what the trouble was until a friend suggested that perhaps it might be caused by coffee drinking. I tried leaving off the coffee and began drinking Postum. The change came quickly. I am now glad to say that I am entirely well of the heart trouble and attribute the relief to leaving off coffee and the use of Postum.

"A number of my friends have abandoned the old fashioned coffee and have taken up with Postum, which they are using steadily. There are some people that make Postum very weak and tasteless, but if it is boiled long enough, according to directions, it is a very delicious beverage. We have never used any of the old fashioned coffee since Postum was first started in our house."

MINERS CLOSE CONVENTION

WILL MEET IN YEAR 1911 IN DES MOINES.

First Session of Joint Convention of Miners and Operators to Arrange Scale Held Monday.

Des Moines, Apr. 11.—The thirteenth annual convention of the Iowa district, United Mine Workers of America will be held in Des Moines. This was decided at the closing session of the twelfth annual convention, Saturday afternoon at the Trades and Labor Assembly hall. There was no opposition to the choice.

The closing session was devoted to a review of the business transacted by the convention during the last two weeks. A few minor changes were made in the by-laws and the instructions to the miners' scale committee were discussed at length.

This afternoon the delegates to the convention will come to Des Moines again for the joint convention with the coal operators. Practically all of the delegates and officers of the district union returned to their homes.

The real conflict which will decide whether the miners will secure an increase in wages and better working conditions and whether the coal operators will secure protection against future strikes will begin today. Both the miners and operators are now ready for the meeting, having spent more than two weeks in active preparation for the event. Following the joint convention work will begin in the joint scale committee where the definite negotiations are taken up and disposed of.

A HOME FOR RAILROAD MEN

New Building at Highland Park, Ill., Erected by the Brotherhoods, Is Dedicated.

Highland Park, Ill., Apr. 12.—A fine new building for the Home for Aged and Disabled Railroad Employees of America was dedicated today. It will accommodate 86 men in addition to the attendants. The home is supported by money contributed by the divisions and lodges of the brotherhoods. The new building has been under construction since last summer from a fund of $80,000 contributed by the Brotherhod of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, the Order of Railway Conductors, the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and their ladies' auxiliaries.

Texas Federation of Labor.

Galveston, Tex., Apr. 12.—With an unusually large and enthusiastic attendance, the Texas State Federation of Labor opened its thirteenth annual convention today. The first session was a joint one of all the branches at the Auditorium and Cotton palace, and the delegates were welcomed by state and city officials. This afternoon there was an enjoyable boat ride along the jetties and in the harbor, and tomorrow night there will be a smoker. An oyster roast Thursday and a ball Friday complete the list of entertainments. Meanwhile the delegates will transact much business and will listen to speeches by labor leaders of national prominence.

Silver Service Given Battleship.

Charleston, S. C., Apr. 12.—With considerable ceremony and in the presence of a big assemblage, a handsome silver service was presented today to the battleship South Carolina by the people o fthe state for which the vessel is named. Among the guests from Washington were Representative Foss of Illinois, chairman of the house committee on naval affairs, and Mrs. Foss. The festivities in connection with the event include a reception, a trip around the harbor and various teas and dinners.

Operators Meet With Coal Miners.

Chicago, Apr. 12.—The mine operators of the twelfth district, which comprises Illinois, met here today with the scale committee of the United Mine Workers of America in the first definite effort to end the strike in this state. About 75,000 men in this district have quit work pending a settlement of the scale question. A. J. Moorshead, a member of the operators' committee, says he does not look for an agreement within a month.

Hot Attack on "Tama Jim."

Chicago, Apri. 11—Characterizing the teachings of Secretary James Wilson as "abominable and disgraceful," President Cyril G. Hopkins of the University of Illinois delivered a stinging criticism of the department of agriculture here in an address at the City club. Professor Hopkins dismissed the president from his consideration by saying "He is an unscientific man."

WASTED A FORTUNE ON SKIN TROUBLE

"I began to have an itching over my whole body about seven years ago and this settled in my limb, from the knee to the toes. I went to see a great many physicians, a matter which cost me a fortune, and after I noticed that I did not get any relief that way, I went for three years to the hospital. But they were unable to help me there. I used all the medicines that I could see but became worse and worse. I had an inflammation which made me almost crazy with pain. When I showed my foot to my friends they would get really frightened. I did not know what to do. I was so sick and had become so nervous that I positively lost all hope.

"I had seen the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies a great many times, but could not make up my mind to buy them, for I had already used so many medicines. Finally I did decide to use the Cuticura Remedies and I tell you that I was never so pleased as when I noticed that, after having used two sets of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, the entire inflammation had gone. I was completely cured. I should be only too glad if people with similar disease would come to me and find out the truth. I would only recommend them to use Cuticura. Mrs. Bertha Sachs, 1621 Second Ave., New York, N. Y., Aug. 20, 1909."

"Mrs. Bertha Sachs is my sister-in-law and I know well how she suffered and was cured by Cuticura Remedies after many other treatments failed. Morris Sachs, 321 E. 89th St., New York, N. Y., Secretary of Deutsch-Ostrowoer Unt.-Verein, Kempner Hebrew Benevolent Society, etc."

Used to It.

Recently a lady witness in a court up the state was subjected to a troublesome fire of cross questions, and the lawyer, thinking that some apology was necessary, tried to square himself.

"I really hope, madam," said he, "that I don't annoy you with all these questions."

"Oh, no," was the prompt reply; "I am accustomed to it."

"You don't mean it?" wonderingly returned the lawyer.

"Yes," rejoined the lady, "I have a six-year-old boy at home."

Carroll and Garst will again be the opposing candidates for the republican nomination for Governor of Iowa.

At the head of the Taft clubs in Iowa is a man who opposed the nomination of Taft on the ground that he was too progressive.

Senator Funk has well declared that "President Taft was in no danger of censure at the hands of the approaching state convention" and therefore the ostensible excuse for the organization of standpatters to defend him was without reason.

President Taft having come out for Canadian reciprocity and having notified the Canadian government he is going to work for a reduction of tariff on goods from Canada. there promises to be a sudden reopening of the tariff question and particularly the question of Canadian reciprocity. This is one of the Taft ideas which the republicans are asked to indorse, and it is said that a number of the rabid standpatters who have been denouncing reciprocity as the equivalent of free trade will not be enthusiastic for the program.

It is announced in eastern dispatches that Chairman McKinley of the congressional standpat committee, expects to use one million dollars in converting the western states to standpatism. He will have headquarters at Chicago and pay much attention to Iowa. His followers have already organized. They claim they will have Cannon. Tawney and many other leading standpat orators on the stump and invade every state where the progressives are prominent.

Said work to be commenced on or before the 15th day of June, 1910, and completed on or before the 1st day of December, 1910.

Important Supreme Court Decision

The Iowa supreme court has ruled that when the officers of a bank put up a bond to secure county deposits and the bank fails, they are liable for deposits made in the bank prior to the time when the supervisors made the bank a county depository. The court also ruled that where a bank receives the taxes of its customers and the county treasurer furnishes tax receipts at the request of the bank, those receipts are to be treated as deposits for which the bonded bank officers are liable when the bank fails.

The action was brought by County Treasurer Sawyer of Hancock county against the officers of the First State Bank of Corwith which failed while the county had a balance of $12,065.98 in the bank. Some of this money was deposited before the supervisors named the bank as a county depository. The court holds the officers liable on their bond to protect the county funds.

We have come to the conclusion that the candidates for the various county offices don't like to stay at home on wash day. On last Monday we noticed several candidates in our little burg among whom we remember S. M. Davis, Fred Lutjens and P. L. Brown—and there may have been more.

Almer Ludeke had an exciting runaway Tuesday morning. He had three horses hitched to a sulky plow and standing back of H. Lau & Son's machine shed. The horses concluded to take a little exercise and they stopped when they got tangled up in a pile of brush west of A. Koerner's residence. Luckily none of the horses were injured.

In its proper place this week will be found the announcement of P. L. Brown, of Garner, as a republican candidate for the office of County Recorder. Pete has been there before and has demonstrated his ability to handle the office to the entire satisfaction of all. He is a good, square, jovial fellow, and we predict that he will make a strong bid for the nomination.

J. W. Waterman will erect a new store building 26x62 feet in size, on his lot just east of the building he now occupies. The small buildings on these lots have been torn down and the old store building has been reshingled. When the new part is completed the former store building will be used as a store room and for flour, feed, etc. We understand that this improvement will be commenced at once.

HUTCHINSON DEAD

Prominent Ottumwa Business Man Passes Away.

VETERAN OF THE CIVIL WAR

Was a Candidate for Governor Against Boies on the Republican Ticket in 1889—Death Followed Attack of Grippe.

Ottumwa, Ia., Apr. 11.—Capt. J. G. Hutchison, a veteran of the civil war, once republican candidate for governor of Iowa, and a prominent business man of Ottumwa, died, after an illness of three weeks. Death resulted from a complication of diseases which followed a slight attack of the grippe.

Because of his long association with the business interests of Ottumwa and his prominence in church and Y. M. C. A. circles, all Ottumwa mourns his loss.

Captain Hutchison was a native of Pennsylvania and was born Sept. 11, 1840. He was educated at the Williamsport Dickerson seminary, graduating in 1862. He immediately entered the service of his country, becoming a lieutenant in the Thirty-first regiment of Pennsylvania volunteer infantry.

He participated in the battles of Fredericksburg, Antietam, and Chancellorsville. He also took part in the Gettysburg campaign as captain of Company I, Twenty-eighth regiment which was mustered into service under special call of President Lincoln to repel the confederate invasion.

He graduated from the Cleveland, O., law school in 1865 and in December of that year settled in Ottumwa. He assisted in organizing the Johnson Rufller company of Ottuwa, and it was during a trip to Europe that he persuaded T. D. Foster to come to Ottumwa and start the packing house, which is now the Morrell Packing company's packing house.

In 1879 he was elected to the lower house and in 1881 was nominated by acclamation to the senate, and was elected. He was the author of the registration system for elections.

In 1889 he was the republican candidate for governor, but was defeated by Horace Boies, whose platform was not for prohibition. He was twice married, his first wife dying in 1896. A few years later he was wedded to Mabel Vernon Dixon, who with a niece, Esther Hutchison, survive.

He was president of the Ottumwa Law and Order league and a staunch Presbyterian.

TAFT PLEADS FOR PARTY UNITY

Speaks Before Washington Republican Clubs and Says He Would Read no One Out of Party.

Washington, Apr. 11.—William Howard Taft spoke Saturday night before the League of Republican Clubs of the District of Columbia, not so much as president of the United States, as in his capacity as titular leader of the republican party.

Mr. Taft said he was "glad the republican party still lives;" that he did not want to read any man out of the party, but that "by their deeds they should be known".

"Tonight," he said, "we are reading nobody out of the party; we want them all in the ranks and they have the opportunity to establish their claim to republicanism by that which they shall do in both houses of congress by helping to enact the legislation which is now before them."

This utterance was greeted with prolonged cheers. The 500 guests from all parts of the United States stood up and cheered. The president was in a mood to "talk turkey," but he said he had not come to them to make a "keynote speech."

"With all due deference to the distinguished members of the senate and the house who surround me," the president continued, "I want to say that I think this is not exactly the time for speaking except in the two houses of the legislature. This is the time for doing things."

Moon is Candidate for Governor.

Des Moines, Apr. 11—State Senator Edwin G. Moon of Ottumwa made the announcement that he is a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor. His announcement followed a conference of prominent southern Iowa democrats, held at Ottumwa.

Ten Trainmen Held for Looting Cars.

Kansas City, Mo., Apr. 11.—Police here arrested ten switchmen in the employ of the Kansas City Southern railroad on a charge that they have been operating a syndicate for the wholesale stealing of goods in transit over the company's lineea.

UNCLE JOE CANNON

HE ALSO SPEAKS WELL OF CANADA.

No matter what may be the opinion of Mr. Joseph Cannon, no matter if he may be looked upon by some as a czar, and by others as a big warm-hearted man, with many of the instincts that make humanity very bearable, all will admit that he is a man who has been advertised more than any other man in the United States. What he may have to say therefore on any subject, will have weight. Observant, he speaks his mind freely. He was interviewed the other day by the correspondent of a Canadian newspaper. He spoke of his admiration for Canada, and he is quoted in a way that pictures farily well the personal of the man. The correspondent says he launched out into personal biography, proverbial philosophy, political comment, cynical scorn, broad profanity and sentimental poetry such as one rarely hears in the space of an hour. He discussed the Canadian tariff, and then said: "People say I break the Ten Commandmants, all of them. But I don't, at least not often. I did break one of them up in Canada two or three years ago. As I rode from Winnipeg to the Rockies over your great West and saw the finest wheatfields in the world, I thought of Virginia and a lot of our States, and I smashed the Tenth Commandment every hour of the journey. Yes, sir, I coveted my neighbor's land." Coming from a man of the fame of Mr. Cannon, these were words that should have some weight with the Americans who may still have doubts of the advantages that are offered to them in Western Canada. A home amongst the wheatfields. Hundreds of thousands of Americans are adopting it. They go to Central Canada, to any one of the three Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, or to the Coast Province of British Columbia, take up their homestead of 160 acres, and probably pre-empt another 160 acres, or it may be they do not care for pioneering twenty or thirty miles from an existing railway, and purchase a farm. Then they settle upon it and, having no clearing away of timber they begin at once to cultivate it, and make money. That they make money and much more than they could possibly make on the high-priced farms they have left, is the evidence of hundreds of thousands. They do not leave civilized life, they but remove from one sphere to another. They have splendid social conditions, churches, schools, rural telephones, splendid roads, railways, convenient just the same as what they left, and what is more, they get much greater returns from their crops, which give abundant yield. The climate is perfect, and it is no wonder that most flattering reports are sent back to their friends in the States, and it is no wonder that Joe Cannon was tempted to speak as he did. He "coveted" his neighbor's land.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Critics and Managers Clash.

Between the whole press of Copenhagen and all the theatrical managers a curious contest has started because the managers want to compel the critics to write only favorable notices. The contest began when the board of theatrical managers forbade the admission of one critic representing a special theatrical paper.

Why, yes, Miss Dangerfield. It there I met the governor!"

Are you sure it was there, Mr. more?"

Why, I think that was the place. on't know my New Orleans as I uld, but—"

rdmore was suddenly conscious Miss Dangerfield had risen and she stood before him, with her face the least bit flushed, her eyes alight with anger, and that hands at her sides were clenched vously.

My father was not at luncheon at Pharos club, Mr. Ardmore. You er saw my father in your life. I w why it is you came here, and if are not out of that door in one ond I shall call the servants and e them throw you out."

The lady who had appeared for an tant at the door went on slowly the stairs, and the girl held Ard- re silent with her steady eyes until step died away above.

I know what you want my father . Mr. Billings and you are both rsuing him—it's infamous, outrage- s! And it isn't his fault. I would ve you know that my father is an norable man!"

The bayonets were at his breast; would ask for mercy.

"Miss Dangerfield, you may call me ything you please, but I am not ite the scoundrel you think me. It's true that I was not in New Orleans, and I never saw your father in my life. I came to Raleigh on a mission that has absolutely nothing to do with Mr. Billings; he did not know I was coming. On the way here a message intended for your father came into my hands. It was thrown on the train at Kildare last night. I had gone out on the platform because the sleeper was hot, and a warning to your father to keep his hands off of Appleweight was given to me. Here it is. It seems to me that there is immediate danger in this, and I want to help you. I want to do anything I can for you. I didn't come here to pry into your family secrets, Miss Dangerfield, honestly I didn't!"

She took the piece of paper into her slim little hands and read it, slowly nodding her head, as if the words only confirmed some earlier knowledge of the threat they contained. Then she lifted her head, and her eyes were bright with mirth as Ardmore's wondering gaze met them.

"Did you get the jug?"

"I got two jugs, to tell the truth; but when they seemed dissatisfied and howled for me to give one back, I threw off the buttermilk."

"You threw back father's buttermilk to the man who gave you the applejack? Oh! oh!"

Miss Jerry Dangerfield sat down and laughed; and Ardmore, glad of an opportunity to escape, found his hat and rushed from the house.

CHAPTER V.

Mr. Ardmore Officially Recognized.

"She never did it; she never, never did!"

Mr. Ardmore, from a bench in the statehouse park, thus concluded a long reverie. It was late afternoon, and he had forgotten luncheon in his absorption. There was no manner of use in recurring again to that episode of the lonely siding. He had found the girl—(indubitably the girl)—but not the wink! Miss Jerry Dangerfield was not the winking sort; he was well satisfied on that point, and so thoroughly ashamed into the bargain that he resolved to lead a different life and be very heedful of the cry of the poor in the future.

As he sat dejectedly on his park bench he was unaware that Miss Geraldine Dangerfield, walking hurriedly through the park on her way from the governor's mansion to the statehouse, passed directly behind him. His attitude was so eloquent of despair that it could not have failed to move a much harder heart than that of Miss Dangerfield, yet she made no sign; but a few minutes later the private secretary came out on the steps of the statehouse, and after a brief survey of the landscape crossed the lawn and called Ardmore by name.

"I beg your pardon, but Miss Dangerfield wished me to say that she'd like to see you for a minute. She's at the governor's office."

A prisoner, sentenced to death, and unexpectedly reprieved with the rope already on his neck, could not experience greater relief than that which brought Mr. Thomas Ardmore to his feet.

"You are sure of it—that there's no mistake?"

"Certainly not. Miss Dangerfield told me I was to bring you back."

Enthroned at the secretary's desk, a mass of papers before her, Miss Geraldine Dangerfield awaited him. He was ready to place his head on the block in sheer contrition for his conduct, but she herself took the initiative, and her tone was wholly amiable.

"This morning, Mr. Ardmore—"

"Oh, please forget this morning!" he pleaded.

"But I was rude to you; I threatened to have you thrown out of the house; and you had come to do us a favor. You traded buttermilk for moonshine?"

"I shouldn't exactly call it moonshine. It's more like dynamite than anything else. I've written a reply to the note and put it back in the cork, and I'm going to return it to Kildare."

"What answer did you make to that infamous effort to intimidate my father?" demanded Miss Dangerfield.

"I told the Appleweight gang that they were a lot of cowards, and that the governor will have them all in jail or hanged within ten days."

"Splendid! Perfectly splendid! Did you really say that?"

"What else could I do? I knew that that's what the governor would say—he'd have to say it—so I thought I'd save him the trouble."

"Where's the jug now, Mr. Ardmore?"

"In my room at the hotel. The gang must have somebody on guard here. A gentleman who seemed to be one of them called on me this morning, demanding the jug; and if he's the man I think he is, he's stolen the little brown jug from my room in the hotel by this time."

Miss Dangerfield had picked up a spool of red tape and was unwinding it. They were such nice little hands, and so peaceful in their aimless trifling with the tape that he was sure his eyes had betrayed him into imagining she had clenched them in the quiet drawing-room at the mansion.

"I Didn't Come Here to Pry Into Your Family Secrets."

This office, now that its atmosphere enveloped him, was almost as domestic as the house in which she lived. Miss Dangerfield threw down the spool of tape and bent toward him gravely.

"Mr. Ardmore, can you keep a secret?"

"Nobody ever tried me with one, but I think I can, Miss Dangerfield," he murmured humbly.

"Then please stand up."

And Ardmore rose, a little sheepishly, like a schoolboy who fears blame and praise alike. Miss Dangerfield lifted one of the adorable hands solemnly.

"I, acting governor of North Carolina, hereby appoint you my private secretary, and may God have mercy on your soul. You may now sit down, Mr. Secretary."

"But I thought there was a secretary already. And besides, I don't write a very good hand," Ardmore stammered.

"I am just sending Mr. Bassford to Atlanta to find papa. He's already gone, or will be pretty soon."

"But I thought your father would be home to-night."

Miss Dangerfield looked out of the open window upon the park, then into the silent outer hall, to be sure she was not overheard.

"Papa will not be at home to-night, or probably to-morrow night, or the night afterward. I'm not sure we'll wait next Christmas dinner for papa."

"But of course you know where he is! It isn't possible—" and Ardmore stared in astonishment into Miss Dangerfield's tranquil blue eyes.

"It is possible. Papa is ducking his official responsibilities. That's what's the matter with papa! And I guess they're enough to drive any man into the woods. Just look at all this!"

Miss Dangerfield rested one of those diminutive hands of hers on the Unaware That Miss Dangerfield Passed Directly Behind Him.

pile of documents, letters and telegrams the secretary had left behind him; with a nod of the head she indicated the governor's desk in the inner room, and it, too, was piled high with documents.

"I supposed," faltered Ardmore, "that in the absence of the governor the lieutenant governor would act. I think I read that once."

"You must have read it wrong, Mr. Ardmore. In North Carolina, in the absence of the governor, I am governor! Don't look so shocked; when I say I, I mean I—me! Do you understand what I said?"

"I heard what you said, Miss Dangerfield."

"I mean what I said, Mr. Ardmore. I have taken you into my confidence because I don't know you. I don't know anything about you. I don't want to know anything about you. I'd be ashamed to ask anybody I know to help me. The people of North Carolina must never know that the governor is absent during times of great public peril. And if you are afraid, Mr. Ardmore, you had better not accept the position."

"There's nothing I wouldn't do for you," blurted Ardmore.

"I'm not asking you—I would not ask you—to do anything for me. I am asking you to do it for the Old North State. Our relations, Mr. Ardmore, will not be social, but purely official. Do you accept the terms?"

"I do; and I warn you now that I shall never resign."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A German Trade School.

Vice-Consul James L. A. Burrell describes the operation of the German School for Blacksmiths at Halberstadt, in the Madgeburg district: "Young smiths receive instruction in shoeing oxen and horses and preparation for the examination in shoeing, which was made compulsory in the German empire by the imperial act of July 1, 1883, and is held in the various provinces by state examining commissions. The school is supported by appropriations from the city, the province and from the two agricultural associations in Halberstadt. 25 marks ($5.95) for the course. Board and lodging can be had in the school very cheaply. For young blacksmiths without means four free courses, with board and lodging, are provided each year. Candidates who pass excellent examinations receive premiums. Only six persons may take part in each course of instruction."

A Gibe.

William Mitchell Lewis, of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers, was talking in Racine about the improvements in motor cars that the last decade has witnessed.

"I remember the time," said Mr. Lewis, "when it was a common sight, as you drove along a country road, to see a motorist kneeling in the dust beside his car, puzzling over a great heap of cog-wheels, screws, tiny springs, and other delicate pieces of machinery.

"I know a man who knelt beside a scrap-heap composed of his car's innards when a pretty farm girl stopped beside him, put her hand to her head, and said frankly:

"'Would a hair-pin be of any use to you, sir?'"

New Definition of Gentleman.

"A gentleman," says the Philosopher of Folly, "is a man who is so dead sure that he is one that he doesn't think he has to tell people so."

DELAY IS DANGEROUS.

When the kidneys are sick, the whole body is weakened. Aches and pains and urinary ills come, and there is danger of diabetes and fatal Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and impart strength to the whole system.

Mrs. M. A. Jenkins, Quanah, Texas, says: "I was so badly run down that the doctors told me there was no hope. I was so low my relatives were called in to see me before I died. Different parts of my body were badly swollen and I was told I had dropsy. Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life, and made it worth living."

Remember the name—Doan's. For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Britain's Rulers.

Mr. Lloyd George is pleasantly proud of his nationality, but it is amazing that he had to go back to Queen Elizabeth and the Tudors to find historical precedence for a Welsh government of Great Britain. On the other hand, England has often been ruled by Scotsmen. Of the last three premiers, two—Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Mr. Balfour—were Scotch. Mr. Gladstone sat for a Scotch constituency, and so does Mr. Asquith. Ireland has always been busy supplying us with governing men. The duke of Wellington, Lord Roberts, Lord Charles Beresford, Lord Russell and a dozen others immediately occur to one. It is odd to remember that it is centuries since Great Britain had a purely English sovereign. The Tudors were Welsh. The Stuarts were Scotch, William III. was a Dutchman and the Guelphs are of German descent.—London Chronicle.

Reason for Envy.

The stingy man had come home and had objected when his wife attempted to kiss him.

"I've just had a tooth pulled," he explained.

"Well, I envy the dentist," his wife replied.

"You envy the dentist? What do you mean?"

"Oh, nothing much," the wife sighed. "Only he's the first person I've ever heard of who succeeded in getting anything out of you."—Woman's National Daily.

Getting in Deep.

"Father," said little Rollo, "what is the fourth dimension?"

"Why—er—my son, that is hard to explain to the inexpert intelligence. It is something that may exist, only you can't locate it."

"I know. It's like the piece of pie I'm to get when there is company to dinner."

Ungenerous Lavishness.

"Your former husband never complained about the alimony!"

"No," answered Mrs. Flimgilt, "he was brute enough to say his motto was 'Freedom at any cost!'"

Shady Character.

"Who is the man that every one seems to know?"

"Oh, every one knows him. He's our secret police."—Fleigende Blatter.

STANDARD CYPHERS INCUBATOR. Fire Proofed.—Insurable.

BIG REVIVAL IN POULTRY BUSINESS

A BIG REVIVAL in the poultry business is at hand; everybody knows it—everybody in the business should reap the benefits. The way to do this is to start right, and then go right. Starting Right doesn't mean buying cheap and worthless tools with which to work To do that is to invite defeat. Do not be half-hearted! Half-hearted is another name for half-licked Nothing succeeds like success. It is Right and Sensible to imitate the successful, to follow their lead—and it pays. If you do this in the poultry business you will hatch your chickens in Cyphers Incubators, brood them in Cyphers Brooders and raise them on "QUALITY" Chick Food.

hat is the Royal Road to Success in raising y for profit by artificial means. It is open to eader, broad and straight. Did you ever know g poultry plant using $5.00 or $7.50 or $10.00 k, cracker-box incubators, and succeeding in siness? You never did. Have you ever read port of a foremost poultry fancier publicly en- g one of these here-today and gone-tomorrow "fake" machines? You never have.

en Why Should You make the mistake, the seri- costly mistake of buying a big-promise, little-do affair, that is an incubator in name only! To do this efeat the main object of your entire poultry invest- And the only excuse for such a mistake is the faint f saving a few dollars at the start. Our Word For It— dollar you save in this way will be offset very soon by s of ten or a hundred dollars. Thousands have found this to be true. Many letters are received by us every year to that effect. We are asking you to avoid this common pitfall. If life thus far has taught you to profit by the experience of others, then this single advertisement will mean success for you in your poultry work.

The Poultry Business is now increasing rapidly in all branches Those of us who ought to know are certain that the next five to to ten years will be the most prosperous in the history of the poultry industry. There might have been a financial reason one or two years ago for you to "try your luck" with a cheap incubator or a make shift brooder, but now if you are going to take up poultry raising at all, or are going to extend your operations, you ought to give yourself a fair chance to equal the success of other men and women by owning and using the best equipment to be had.

Begin Right if you are going to raise chickens by artificial means, or do not start at all! This is frank and honest advice from men who know—from a company that during the last ten years has manufactured and sold more incubators, brooders and poultry supplies to poultry raisers than the next five largest manufacturers and dealers combined. It is honest advice from a company whose incubators today are in successful use on more government experiment stations on more big practical chicken and duck plants and that are used and publicly endorsed by the foremost American poultrymen than all other makes combined

These Big Facts mean something! They should mean something to you. There is a reason for this company's unequalled success, for the world-wide trade it enjoys, for the many satisfied customers it has in every civilized country on the globe. CYPHERS customers know what that reason is They have found out and are profiting by it.

Do not accept our Unsupported Word for the highly important claims we make—important to YOU! But we do ask you to be guided by the personal testimony of America's best known and most successful poultrymen. Our 160-page 1910 catalogue tells the whole story, tells it straight from the shoulder—tells the truth. The men here briefly quoted stand high in the poultry world for their integrity. They are well known—successful! See our big Annual Catalogue and Poultryman's Guide for their full reports—and many others. Contains five instructive chapters on successful incubating, brooding, feeding, heavy egg-yields, etc. IT IS FREE and we pay the postage.

No Encouragement.

The family had stood the long strain of Uncle Hobart's illness well, but the peculiarities of the physician, chosen by Uncle Hobart himself, had been to say the least, trying. "Do you really think he will recover, Dr. Shaw?" asked the oldest sister of the invalid, who had borne with his vagaries patiently for years.

"I know how you feel, with Thanksgiving coming on and all," said the doctor, peering at her from under his shaggy eyebrows, "but it's too soon to tell. He may get well, and then again, he may not; I can't encourage you yet—either way."—Youth's Companion.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The hearing on the application of the people of Sprague ville for a depot was postponed until May 17. This is one of the most interesting cases before the railroad commission. The commission has decided adversely to the petitioners twice before. The town is located on a cut off of the Milwaukee railroad which runs around a hill between Savanna and Brown, the cut off running from Brown to the Milwaukee line between Dubuque and Savanna. Sprague ville is a mile across the country from Creston on the Brown-Savanna branch. The fast trains and heavy freights are taken through Sprague ville to avoid the big hill and now the people want the fast train to stop at Sprague ville.

AN UP-TO-DATE STOVE

Do you realize there is no longer any reason why you should use a coal range? Oil is cheaper than coal; it is lighter and easier to handle, and gives an intense heat. Provided you have the right stove, oil is more economical, cleaner and less trouble. Have you seen the

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

The accompanying illustration gives you only a rough idea of its appearance. You really can't appreciate it until you either use it yourself, or talk to someone who has used it. It does everything that a coal range will do—except heat the room. The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove will do anything, from heating a kettle of water to cooking a course dinner, but it won't heat a room. It doesn't "smell," it doesn't smoke. It can't get out of order. Light it and it is ready. Turn it down and it is out. Only a woman who knows the trouble of carrying coal and cooking in a hot kitchen can appreciate what it means to have a clean, perfect stove that will cook anything, boil, bake or roast, and yet won't heat the kitchen. How is it done? The flame is controlled in turquoise-blue enamel chimneys, and directed against the bottom of pot, pan, kettle or oven, and only there. The flame operates exactly where it is needed—and nowhere else. With this stove your kitchen is cool.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

The nickel finish with the bright blue of the chimneys makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

GERMANY AND CANADIAN WHEAT

LOOKS TO THE CANADIAN WEST FOR HER SUPPLY.

A dispatch from Winnipeg, Manitoba, dated March 18, 1910 says: That Germany is "anxious to secure a share of Canadian wheat to supply her imports of that cereal." The recent adjustment of the trade relations with Germany has made it possible to carry on a Canadian-German trade with much fewer restrictions than in the past, and considerable development of trade between the two Countries is now certain. The great men of the United States are alive to the Wheat situation in this Country now, and there is consequently the deepest interest in every feature that will tend to increase and conserve the wheat supply. With its present 650,000,000 bushel production of wheat and all efforts to increase it almost unavailing, and the rapidly growing consumption of its increasing population, there is certainly the greatest reason for the anxiety as to where the wheat is to come from that will feed the nation. The United States will be forced as Germany is to look to the Wheatfields of Canada. One province alone raised last year one-eighth as much as the entire production of the United States, and but a twelfth of the wheat area has yet been touched. The Americans who have gone to Canada, are to-day reaping the benefit of the demand for Canadian wheat and they will continue to join in the benefits thus reached for a great many years. Splendid yields are reported from the farms of that Country, and from land that the Government gives away in 160 acre blocks, and from other lands that have been purchased at from $12 to $15 an acre. John Munter, near Eyebrow, Saskatchewan, a former resident of Minnesota says:

"Last fall got over 30 bushels of wheat to the acre and had 30 acres of it; also 20 acres spring breaking on which I had flax of which I got almost 20 bushels per acre. Had 20 acres in oats and got 70 bushels per acre and 500 bushels potatoes on one and three quarter acre, and can therefore safely say that I had a fine crop and am well satisfied with my homestead."

He is considered but a small farmer, but he will be one of the big farmers, some of these days. There are many others, hundreds of others, whose yields were beyond this, and whose average under crop was vastly greater. The story of the experience of American farmers in the Canadian West is a long one. The time to go, would appear to be now, when splendid selections may be made, and where land can be purchased at prices that will be doubled in a couple of years.

Good Law That Should Be Enforced.

Anti-spitting ordinances, laws and regulations in more than five-eighths of the cities and towns of the country are not enforced as they should be, alleges the National Association for the Study of Tuberculosis in a recent report. While most of the larger cities of the United States have such laws on their books, in the great majority of cases they are ignored or overlooked. The report covers in detail the enforcement of the anti-spitting ordinances in 80 of the largest cities in the country. During the year 1909 in these 80 cities, 3,421 arrests were made for violation of the laws regarding spitting in public places. Over 2,900 convictions were secured and $4,100.87 was collected in fines.

Because a home is in the country—because it is on a farm—is only an added reason why it should be more up-to-date and attractive, for those who are fortunate enough to live in the country really spend more time in their homes than do those who live in cities.

And it is also true that farm homes and farm life is daily becoming more and more attractive. The inside of our house is our home, so why not make it nice and attractive, homely and cheerful, up-to-date and modern.

You wouldn't think of burning tallow candles, yet why use wall paper?

In order to educate a few refined people in every community to the artistic beauty of soft velvety alabastined walls of solid color, a free offer of beautiful wall stencils of classic design is made to every reader of this paper.

It is also possible to secure without any expense color suggestions for your home telling you the most suitable colors, to use the best arrangement, curtains and over curtains, etc.—in fact the services of a decorative architect are at your disposal without charge to you.

In cities there are many and most excellent designers of interior decoration, but it takes money and time to carry out their ideas. This same service is at the disposal of every reader if he asks for it, and better than all, it tells you how you can either do the work yourself or direct some one else. It gives you exact shades and colors, and the stencils to do the work without charge.

Queer Attribute of Salmon.

Only about 20 per cent. of salmon spawn before they return up the river from the sea, and those that do return after spawning are coarse, and, when cut up, white in the flesh; in fact, are known as bull trout, for so-called "bull trout" are not a different kind of fish, but are plainly salmon which have spawned.

Race Will Be Between Bashor, Moon and Porter—No Action Taken As to Congressional Candidates.

Des Moines, Apr. 18.—Judge Martin J. Wade of Iowa City, Democratic national committeeman; Clint L. Price of Indianola, chairman of the state central committee, together with Jerry B. Sullivan of Des Moines and Senator John F. Wade, member of the state board of control, met Saturday night in conference at the Savery and selected the following ticket.

For Governor—S. H. Bashor, Waterloo; Senator E. G. Moon, Ottumwa; Claude R. Porter, Centerville.

For Lieutenant Governor—Parley Sheldon, Ames.

For Secretary of State—A. B. Johnson, Marshalltown.

For Treasurer of State—James V. Curran, Ottumwa.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction—A. R. McCook, Shell Rock.

For Auditor of State—John W. Blake, Atlantic.

For Attorney General—James M. Parsons, Des Moines.

For Judges of Supreme Court—P. B. Wolfe, Clinton; A. Van Wagenen, Sioux City.

For Clark of Supreme Court—Robert Van Boskirk, Marengo.

For Railway Commissioners—Nixon P. Jones, Des Moines; Walter Dewey, Chariton; William Louden, Fairfield; Thomas L. Maxwell, Creston.

The three men first named constituted a subcommittee of the state central committee and the job of filling the ticket was delegated to them. Mr. Sullivan and Senator Wade, Judge Wade's brother, were called in to assist by this subcommittee.

There may be changes in this slate as to the office of auditor of state, and in the supreme judgeship, and possibly as to the attorney general, but the latter is said to be improbable.

No action was taken as to congressional matters, the committee leaving the task of getting out aspirants for congressional honors to the district organizations.

"One thing can be said with certainty," said Judge Wade "and that is that a full and complete ticket will be in the field. There is no doubt about it."

Clint L. Price of Indianola, chairman of the state committee, will return to the city early this week to get out the nomination papers for these candidates and see that they are put promptly into circulation. He will return later in the week to receive the nomination papers as they are sent in and see to it that they are filed in due time.

CAN ORDER SHORT LINE CHARGE

Attorney General Byers Hands Down Important Opinion on Railroad Rates.

Des Moines, Apr. 18.—Attorney General Byers has ruled that the state railroad commission has power to compel a railroad company to charge its short line rates between two points, even though it routes the passengers by the long haul route.

The case is the complaint of Gilmore City and others against the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad, which company made the people bound for Des Moines go round by Ft. Dodge from Tara and Ruthven and pay the longer rate. The main point involved is decided by Attorney Byers in the following language:

"Even if the section was applicable a reasonable and proper construction of it when considered with the whole body of the railroad laws of the state would authorize the commission to proceed as requested, and on the whole controversy I hold that, upon the facts in this case. your commission has ample authority to compel the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad company to charge its short line rates between points north of Tara and Des Moines while routing its trains via Ft. Dodge and Angus, the longer line, and that such order will have no effect whatever upon rates to Des Moines from Ft. Dodge and points south."

Where She Scored.

Sheldon Kerruish tells this story on his esteemed father:

"One day a long time ago, a number of children in our neighborhood wers talking about the bad habits of their parents.

"'My father smokes 15 cigars a day,' said a little girl, boastfully like.

"'My father swears something awful when supper is late,' said another.

"'My papa came home tight the other night,' remarked a third.

"It was my little sister's turn next.

"'You just ought to see my papa read Cicero,' she said, and all the other little girls retired in confusion, gladly admitting that sister had won the prize."—Cleveland Leader.

Freezing weather and snow struck Iowa and the whole country generally last Saturday and the damage to fruit trees and vines and gardens is very great. Opinions differ, but it is likely that the cherries, plums, early apples and berries are mostly killed. The cold weather continued Sunday and Monday with hard freezes each night It is difficult at present to tell just how much damage has been done, but it will probably run up into the millions of dollars in the state.

The "big guns" in the Ballinger investigation will not be fired by the prosecution until the secretary of the interior is put on the witness stand. This was indicated when Attorney Brandeis refused to cross-examine Frank Pierce, assistant secretary of the interior, until after he had an opportunity to question Mr. Ballinger.

In an address delivered to the students of the Graduate School of Business Administration of Harvard university George W. Perkins, associate of J. Pierpont Morgan in the banking business, advocated national control of great corporations and compulsory publicity as a panacea for business life.

According to a report made public by John F. Roche of New York, consulting actuary to the insurance department, charges are made that the active managers of the Consolidated Casualty company before its reorganization at Charleston, W. Va., recently, under direction of the insurance department of West Virginia, had collected $757,114 in one year and nine months, of which only $191,637 remains, and that they made false entries on the books of the company and false returns to the insurance department of the state. The arrest of several former and present high officials of the Illinois Central Railroad company is expected soon as a result of a nine-hour secret conference at Chicago held behind locked doors between President Harahan and W. As a special mark of his personal esteem the aged emperor-king, Franz Josef, received Colonel Roosevelt in his private apartments at the imposing Hofburg palace in Vienna instead of in the regular audience chamber. The monarch, who was attired in an imperial uniform, was extremely gracious to the American ex-president and kept him in conversation for 35 minutes. The colonel afterward declined to reveal the slightest detail of the conversation.

Montclair, N. J., believes that prosperity has come to stay. There are no poor left in the township and the authorities have decided to abolish the poorhouse.

There were many echoes of the hissing episode and President Taft's address to the convention of the National American Woman Suffrage association. The subject was not discussed on the floor of the convention, but the general officers met and decided to offer a resolution by way of making amends for the discourtesy shown the president. The resolutions were adopted unanimously.

In delivering a scathing denunciation of the American Sugar Refining company in the house of representatives Representative Rainey of Illinois did not hesitate to make bold suggestions concerning "that most corrupt and rotten trust ever created by the protective tariff system" and President Taft, Attorney General Wickersham and Henry W. Taft, brother of the president.

President Taft was hissed while delivering an address of welcome at the convention of the American Woman Suffrage association. The manifestation of disapproval was not unanimous, but it was pronounced. It interrupted the president's speech, but did not discomfort him. He waited a few seconds for the feminine sibilant of reproach to subside and then finished what he had to say.

A series of earthquakes varying in intensity has swept over Costa Rica, doing vast damage, the extent of which can only now be estimated at more than $1,000,000. So far there has been no report of loss of life, but the people in the cities are panic-stricken and are abandoning their homes for the hillsides.

A letter from William J. Bryan, written in Brazil and read at the Jefferson day banquet at Washington, says: "An item of news has just come to my attention. President Taft, in his Lincoln speech at New York February 12, attributes the present high prices mainly to an increased production of gold and consequent enlargement of the volume of money. This unexpected indorsement of our party's proposition in 1896, when we demanded more money as the only remedy for falling prices, is very gratifying."

Six New Haven (Conn.) firemen were burned to death and a score seriously injured in a fire which partially destroyed the county jail and destroyed the adjoining factory of the New England chair factory, in which 50 convicts were employed.

DEEMER IS FAVORED

President Taft Looks with Favor on Iowa Jurist.

IOWA DELEGATION BOOSTING

Chief Justice of Iowa Supreme Court Believed to Stand Good Show of Appointment to Succeed Justice Brewer.

Des Moines, Apr. 18.—Gov. Carroll has sent a letter to President Taft urging the appointment of Chief Justice Deemer of the Iowa supreme court to the position on the bench of the United States supreme court made vacant by the death of Justice Brewer.

From reliable sources it is learned that President Taft looks with great favor on Judge Horace E. Deemer of Iowa as a successor to Justice Brewer on the United States supreme court. He is giving the Iowa jurist's name the most careful consideration and it is generally conceded that if a man from the Eighth federal circuit is chosen that Judge Deemer will be the man. New York is the only other district being considered.

Congressman Smith and the entire Iowa delegation are boosting for Judge Deemer for the place. Judge Smith and Judge Deemer are old friends, having been, with Judge Dillon, the three youngest judges on the Iowa district bench. It is believed in administration cicles that Solicitor General Bowers will be reserved for the position of Chief Justice when Chief Justice Fuller retires.

Big Crane Fights Man.

Lake City.—A sand hill crane, shot on the Coon river by Henry Ackers, came near making its captor blind for life. Ackers shouldered the bird thinking it was dead, and started for town. When nearing the western part of the city the crane suddenly revived and flopped about desperately. With a savage peck the long necked bird struck Ackers in the eye. Before he could choke the bird he nearly lost the sight of both eyes. He managed to subdue the crane, but not until his face was a bleeding mass. tip to tip of its wings.

Land Deal at Waterloo.

Waterloo.—The possibilities of gaining wealth from Iowa farm lands was strikingly demonstrated here, when Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Hummel disposed of the last of a tract of 363 acres. The whole amount received was $140,650. The land was bought about twenty years ago for a total of about $7,500. It lies within easy access of this city, along the Cedar Falls interurban line. The Galloway-Gibson investment company bought the most of the tract, paying $400 an acre for 281 acres ,and a slightly less sum for the remainder.

B. There still remains in the hospital Miss Irene Cowan, Jay Sweitzer and Paul Swift of Waterloo, G. W. Thompson of Vinton, and Mrs. William Tietz of Reinbeck. All of the injured in the hospital are doing as well as could be expected.

Railroad Board Lays Down Rules.

Des Moines.—The state railroad commission issued three important orders, two of which affect switching service on three railroads. In the case of the Rock Island and Burlington railroads at Washington, the commission ordered the two railroads to build a connecting switch by July 1 and have the same in operation. The order is made at the request of the shippers.

The second order affects the Rock Island and Iowa Central railroads at Montezuma, and provides that the railroads must build a connecting switch at that point and have the same in operation not later than July 1.

The third order provides that within ten days after acceptance by the railroad the St. Paul & Des Moines Railroad company must provide a site at Buckeye for the Farmers' Elevator company of Buckeye. The site must provide for an elevator of 25,000 bushels capacity.

The commission heard the application of the Iowa State Manufacturers' association for a rule defining switching limits in Iowa, defining what is switching service by railroads and prescribing a uniform switching rate for the entire state. Many witnesses were produced by the association to show the need of the rules asked for.

The boy with other children was playing in the yard and the dog was lying near watching when without warning he sprang on the little fellow burying his teeth in the lad's cheek and nose. A portion of the child's nose was torn away and he will be disfigured for life. The dog had not previously shown signs of viciousness, but was at once killed.

iss Dangerfield nodded judicial roval, and settled back in her chair better to contemplate her new etary, and said:

It's a corker, all right."

I don't much like the way it ends. says, right here"—and she bent for- rd and pointed to the place under ticism—"it says, 'Trusting to your se of equity, and relying upon a tinuance of the traditional friend- p between your state and mine, I , sir, awaiting your reply, very spectfully, your obedient servant.' w, I wouldn't trust to his sense of ything, and that traditional friend- ship business is just fluffy nonsense, and I wouldn't be anybody's obedient servant. I decided when I wasn't more than 15 years old, with a lot of other girls in our school, that when we got married we'd never say obey, and we never have, though only three of our class are married yet, but we're all engaged."

"Engaged?"

"Of course; we're engaged. I'm engaged to Rutherford Gillingwater, the adjutant general of this state. You couldn't be my private secretary if I wasn't engaged; it wouldn't be proper."

The earth was only a flying cinder on which he strove for a foothold. She had announced her engagement to be married with a cool finality that took his breath away; and not realizing the chaos into which she had flung him, she returned demurely to the matter of the letter.

"We can't change that letter, because it's signed close to the 'obedient servant' and there's no room. But I'm going to put it into the typewriter and add a postscript."

She sat down before the machine and inexpertly rolled the sheet into place; then, with Ardmore helping her to find the keys, she wrote:

I demand an imediate reply.

"Demand and immediate are both business words. Are you sure there's only one m in immediate? All right, if you know. I reckon a postscript like that doesn't need to be signed. I'll just put 'W. D.' there with papa's stub pen, so it will look really fierce. Now, you're the secretary; you copy it in the copying press and I'll address the envelope."

She bade him give the letter plenty of time to copy, and talked cheerfully while he waited. She spoke of her friends, as southern people have a way of doing, as though every one must of course know them—a habit that is illuminative of that delightful southern neighborliness that knits the elect of a commonwealth into a single family, that neither time and tide nor sword and brand can destroy.

"Well, that's done," said Miss Jerry, when the letter, still damp from the copy-press, had been carefully sealed and stamped. "Gov. Osborne will get it in the morning. I think maybe we'd better telegraph him that it's coming."

The message, slowly thumped out on the typewriter, and several times altered and copied, finally read:

Raleigh, N. C.

The Honorable Charles Osborne,
Governor of South Carolina,
Columbia, S. C.:

Have written by to-night's mail in Appleweight matter. Your vacillating course not understood.

WILLIAM DANGERFIELD,
Governor of North Carolina.

"I reckon that will make him take notice;" and Miss Jerry viewed her work with approval. "And now, Mr. Ardmore, here's a telegram from Mr. Billings which I don't understand. See if you know what it means."

Ardmore chuckled delightedly as he read:

Can not understand your outrageous conduct in bond matter. If payment is not made June first your state's credit is ruined. Where is Foster? Answer to Atlanta. GEORGE P. BILLINGS.

"I don't see what's so funny about that! Mr. Bassford was walking the floor with that message when I came to the office. He said papa and the state were both going to be ruined. There's a quarter of a million dollars to be paid on bonds that are coming due June first, and there isn't any money to pay them with. That's what he said. And Mr. Foster is the state treasurer, and he's gone fishing."

"Fishing?"

"He left word he had gone fishing. Mr. Foster and papa don't get along together, and Mr. Bassford says he's run off just to let those bonds default and bring disgrace on papa and the state."

Ardmore's grin broadened. The Appleweight case was insignificant compared with this new business with which he was confronted. Billings had always treated him with contempt, as a negligible factor in the Ardmore millions, and here at last was an opportunity to balance accounts.

"I will show you how to fix Billings. Just let me have one of those blanks."

And after much labor, and with occasional suggestions from Miss Jerry, the following message was presently ready for the wires:

Your infamous imputation upon my honor and that of the state shall meet with the treatment it deserves. I defy you to do your worst. If you come into North Carolina or bring legal proceedings for the collection of your bonds I will fill you so full of buckshot that 40 men will not be strong enough to carry you to your grave.

"Isn't that perfectly grand!" murmured Jerry admiringly. "But I thought your family and the Bronx Loan and Trust Company were the same thing."

"Don't you worry about Billings. He is used to having people get down on their knees to him, and the change will do him good. Where is this man Foster?"

"Just fishing; that's what Mr. Bassford said, but he didn't know where. Father was going to call a special session of the legislature to investigate him, and he was so angry that he ran off so that papa would have to look after those bonds himself. Then this Appleweight case came up, and that worried papa a great deal. Here's his call for the special session. He told Mr. Bassford to hold that, too, until he came back from New Orleans."

Ardmore read Gov. Dangerfield's summons to the legislature with profound interest. It was signed, but the space for the date on which the lawmakers were to assemble had been left blank.

"It looks to me as though you had the whole state in your hands, Miss Dangerfield. But I don't believe we ought to call the special session just yet. It would be sure to injure the state's credit, and it will be a lot more fun to catch Foster. I wonder if he took all the state money with him."

"Mr. Bassford said he didn't know and couldn't find out, for the clerks in the treasurer's office wouldn't tell him a single thing."

"One should never deal with subordinates," remarked Ardmore sagely. "Deal with the principals—I heard a banker say that once, and he was a man who knew everything. Besides, it will be more fun to attend to the bonds ourselves."

The roll of drums and the cry of a bugle broke in upon the peace of the later afternoon. Miss Jerry rose with an exclamation and ran out into the broad portico of the statehouse. Several battalions of a tide-water regiment, passing through town on their way to Camp Dangerfield, had taken advantage of a wait in Raleigh to disembark and show themselves at the capital. They were already halted and at parade rest at the side of the street, and a mounted officer in khaki, galloping madly into view, seemed to focus the eyes of the gathering crowd. He was a gallant figure of a man; his mount was an animal that realized Job's ideal of a battle-horse; the soldiers presented arms as the horseman rode the line. Miss Dangerfield waved her handkerchief, standing eagerly on tiptoe to make her salutation carry as far as possible.

"Who is that?" asked Ardmore, with sinking spirit.

"Why, Rutherford Gillingwater, of course."

"Four right!" rang the command a moment later, and the militiamen tramped off to the station.

It was then that Ardmore, watching the crowd disperse at the edge of the park, saw his caller of the morning striding rapidly across the street. Ardmore started forward, then checked himself so suddenly that Miss Jerry Dangerfield turned to him inquiringly.

"What's the matter?" she demanded.

"Nothing. I have been robbed, as I hoped to be. Over there on the sidewalk, beyond the girl in the pink sunbonnet, goes my little brown jug. That lank individual with the shabby hat has lifted it out of my room at the hotel, just as I thought he would."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"What's the Matter?" She Demanded.

THE KILLING LUST IN HUMANS

Man Is Easily the Most Bloodthirsty of All the Animals of the World.

In New Liskeard recently an owl perched itself on the peak of a business block as the crimson streaks of the dawn appeared, and wrapped in its muff of feathers, settled itself in comfort to enjoy the drowsy hours of daylight. It was the picture of comfort and pretty as a picture, cozy, warm in the winter's cold, inoffensive and harmless.

But the owl was in a fool's paradise. It had lain down with the tiger. It was in the midst of the wolves. The bushy little ball of feathers had fallen unawares into the haunts of the fiercest and most bloodthirsty of the world's animals.

The sleeping bird was no sooner descried than the human wolves set up a —yap. Men hurried off for their killing machines, and in a few minutes a battery of riflemen were at work pumping death into the spark of life in the bundle of feathers. After awhile one of them hit it, and then the heroes were satisfied. They went home with their guns, and the boys exhibited the carcass.

Poor dead little bit of useless carrion! The boys' eyes sparkled with excitement.

There is a deal of the savage left in the human.—Cobalt Citizen.

Expressing Political Convictions.

Some old time politicians were not content with wearing ribbons as an outward and visible sign of their convictions. "In those days," writes a follower of Pitt who bore the soothing name of James Bland Burges, "men had the courage of their convictions, and would have made motley their garb to distinguish themselves from their opponents. To belong to the Constitutional club was a very simple affair—no balloting or fees beyond cost of costume.

"A gentleman desirous of becoming a member wrote his name in the club book and hurried to the tailor to be measured for a dark blue frock with a broad orange velvet cape and large yellow buttons, round each of which was inscribed "Constitutional Club." The waistcoat was of blue kerseymere with yellow buttons, bordered all round with orange colored silk, and the breeches of white kerseymere with yellow buttons. In point of taste we certainly beat the blue and buff of our opponents."—London Chronicle.

American Banks Needed Abroad.

Germany and England have chains of banks in foreign countries which afford important facilities to their compatriots interested in the foreign trade as well as to the native business interests in their respective spheres of activity.

The lack of such facilities represents a serious handicap to American export trade and the intercourse between the foreign nations and American commerce. In many of the most important territories, which by the mere reason of geographical position are within the natural scope of American export activity, every dollar that changes hands between Americans and their foreign connections yields a tribute to German and British banks —American Industries.

HIS HANDS CRACKED OPEN

"I am a man seventy years old. My hands were very sore and cracked open on the insides for over a year with large sores. They would crack open and bleed, itch, burn and ache so that I could not sleep and could do but little work. They were so bad that I could not dress myself in the morning. They would bleed and the blood dropped on the floor. I called on two doctors, but they did me no good. I could get nothing to do any good till I got the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. About a year ago my daughter got a cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and in one week from the time I began to use them my hands were all healed up and they have not been a mite, sore since. I would not be without the Cuticura Remedies.

"They also cured a bad sore on the hand of one of my neighbor's children, and they think very highly of the Cuticura Remedies. John W. Hasty, So. Effingham, N. H., Mar. 5 and Apr. 11, '09."

Treatment for Lump Jaw.

Lump jaw is due to a fungus which is usually taken into the animal's system in feed consumed. Lump jaw is liable to affect the glands of the throat or the bones of the head, writes Doctor David Roberts in American Cultivator. It is not advisable to keep an animal thus afflicted lingering in a herd. On the other hand it is advisable to either treat such an animal or kill it, as such animals invite diseases into the herd, owing to the fact that they are so reduced in vitality that they have no resisting power. A remarkably large per cent. of such cases can be successfully treated if taken in time by opening up the enlargement and washing it out with a strong antiseptic solution, like five of carbolic acid in water, and putting the animals on a tonic. In this way the afflicted animal is not only saved, but the entire herd is protected against disease.

Something Stronger Than Wind.

Senator Depew, apropos of March winds, said, at a dinner in Washington:

"An old-fashioned fellow, one year when Easter came in March, paid too many Easter calls and drank too many cups of eggnog, and, alas, was quite overcome.

'As the old-fashioned fellow lurched, in the late afternoon, toward home, a little girl watched him from her window, curiously.

" 'Oh, mamma,' she said, 'come and look at Mr. Stuyvesant. Isn't the wind blowing him about!' "

MISCHIEF MAKER
A Surprise in Brooklyn.

An adult's food that can save a baby proves itself to be nourishing and easily digested and good for big and little folks. A Brooklyn man says:

"When baby was about eleven months old he began to grow thin and pale. This was, at first, attributed to the heat and the fact that his teeth were coming, but, in reality, the poor little thing was starving, his mother's milk not being sufficient nourishment.

"One day after he had cried bitterly for an hour, I suggested that my wife try him on Grape-Nuts. She soaked two teaspoonfuls in a saucer with a little sugar and warm milk. This baby ate so ravenously that she fixed a second which he likewise finished.

"It was not many days before he forgot all about being nursed, and has since lived almost exclusively on Grape-Nuts. Today the boy is strong and robust, and as cute a mischief-maker as a thirteen months old baby is expected to be.

"We have put before him other foods, but he will have none of them, evidently preferring to stick to that which did him so much good—his old friend Grape-Nuts.

"Use this letter any way you wish, for my wife and I can never praise Grape-Nuts enough after the brightness it has brought to our household."

Grape-Nuts is not made for a baby food, but experience with thousands of babies shows it to be among the best, if not entirely the best in use. Being a scientific preparation of Nature's grains, it is equally effective as a body and brain builder for grown-ups.

English Beef Ways

The roast beef of old England is presumably the finest in the world and has been celebrated in both song and story, but one seldom hears of the many other excellent ways in which English cooks prepare this meat. One of their most pleasing dishes is beefsteak stewed without the addition of water or any other fluid. To prepare this have three or four pounds of rump-steak cut about an inch thick. Put one tablespoonful of butter in the frying pan and let it melt without browning. Wash the steak quickly in cold water, put it in the frying pan, cover closely and let it slowly become very hot. As soon as it is thoroughly heated add one teaspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of white pepper, then keep it just simmering (never allowing it to boil) until perfectly tender. It should be closely covered all the time. It will require about an hour and a half to cook it just right. When done place the steak on a heated platter and add half a teacupful of walnut or tomato catsup to the gravy in the pan, let it get very hot and pour it over the steak. Sometimes a slice or two of onion and carrot are added to impart a delicate flavor to the steak, but it is quite delicious without.—The March Housekeeper.

Kanawha Record: Miss Christyna Callison, of Stilson, seems to be making considerable progress in her campaign for the county recorder nomination. While the nomination is not fully conceded to her as yet it seems practically certain at this time that her chances are better than those of any candidate for whatever office they aspire. Miss Callison's education and school work has fitted her for the duties of the recorder office, and as the work of this office has been done to a great extent by young ladies we think it no bar against the lady's eligibility that she belongs to the gentler sex, the "jollying act may not be done quite so strenuously as the sterner sex could perform it when they call at the office, but no one will doubt all the courtesies and favors that the office justifies be will extended and the work attended to promptly and correctly. Miss Callison is a Christian lady of integrity, whose work as secretary and treasurer of the Hancock County Sabbath School Association has given her considerable acquaintance with influential people throughout the county, and they, with many others, will not only be voters but workers for her.

Regardless of stand-patters or pat-standers, the fact remains that there is no real fault to find with the administration of Governor B. F. Carroll and he should be given the nomination for a second term—the courtesy that has always been shown a deserving official.

When you cast your ballot at the primary election next June, don't fail to vote for A. M. Deyoe for State Superintendent of Public Instruction. He is deserving of, and should receive, the vote of every republican in the north half of the state. Let's make it unanimous in Hancock county.

Prof. Baggs, of Garner, candidate for county superintendent of schools, has been confined to his home for some time by sickness. His friends should see to it that his campaign does not lag or in any way suffer on this account. While we lose a good officer when Mr. Deyoe steps out, it is very gratifying to know that the people have it in their power to put another first class man into this very important position.

The fire-blackened, black-damp filled shaft of the Youghiogheny & Ohio Coal company's Amsterdam (O.) mine, gave up 18 dead, killed in a gas explosion. All the bodies were brought to the pit's mouth, there to be seized on by the weeping, moaning women, who, since the dull rumble and roar of the explosion have watched through tears hoping a miracle might bring forth alive some few of the missing. Seven miners escaped, Mine Boss Ed. Jones bringing them through the air shaft. Twenty-five were in the mine.

With the simplicity which he requested a few hours before death claimed him, the funeral services of Samuel L. Clemens were conducted in New York city. He was buried Sunday in one of the white flannel suits which he had worn so frequently in his declining years, at Elmira, N. Y., where in the family plot lie his wife and three children.

Following the efforts of President Taft to have the inquiry rushed, came a sensational climax in the Ballinger investigation when the prosecutor practically accused Attorney General Wickersham of juggling public records in the interest of his cabinet colleague. Secretary of State Knox visited the capitol and informed several members of the committee that it was the desire of the president that the investigation be concluded as speedily as possible, regardless of who is hurt.

Senator Dolliver of Iowa, by starting a little filibuster, prevented a vote on the pooling provision of the railroad rate bill. As a result Senator Elkins was compelled to submit to another day's delay in his plans to have the administration measure disposed of next week.

No reigning sovereign ever received a more enthusiastic welcome to Paris than did Theodore Roosevelt, former president of the United States. He was greeted by the representatives of the president of the republic and the cabinet, American Ambassador Bacon, M. Jusserand, the French ambassador at Washington, and a great concourse of people, which the cordon of troops surrounding the railway station had difficulty in holding in check.

Charles D. The cotton situation has become so acute that dread of the government's investigation of the so-called cotton pool has given place to fear among the large operators that more than one big Wall street house dealing in cotton is in a bad way financially and that if they should be forced to the wall no one can predict where the demoralization of the market will end.

William R. Hearst after a half hour's conference with President Taft came out in a public interview with an indorsement of the Taft administration which completely took away the breath of the Democracy. MOTHERS' DAY, SUNDAY, MAY 8

Wear a White Carnation and Make Your Mother Feel that She is "Queen o' the May."

The second Sunday in May is "Mother's Day." It was first observed at Norfolk, Va., in 1898, in connection with evangelistic services, and resulted in so much kindly thought and happiness that it has since been observed in many places.

The State Congress of Mothers appeals to the Christian Ministry of Iowa, to help make it a memorable sucess by devoting at least one service, May 8, to Motherhood.

It asks each person who would do honor to Motherhood to observe the day by wearing a white flower—white carnation preferred, typical of Mother love; and suggests that each person give one such flower to at least one other person in the community.

It wishes to remind every son and daughter in Iowa, especially busy, successful men and women, of the unselfish devotion that guarded their childhood and requests each to make the mother feel that today, and always in the hearts of her children, she is "Queen o' the May."

Sunday schools are also requested to make mothers guests of honor at their services and admonish children to more loving care and thoughtfulness.

All Mothers' clubs, Child Study clubs, Parent-Teacher associations, etc., are asked to co-operate with the churches in every way possible, that Mothers' Day may be appropriately observed and may come to have a beautiful significance in Iowa.

Young man, have you a mother? Are her eyes dim and her hands red and the bloom faded from her cheek? Are you just a little ashamed of her sometimes when your swell friends come unannounced? Did you ever think that she was once young and fair, that she gave her freshness and strength and beauty for you, and that she was glad and proud to do it? Do you grow weary of her frequent complaining, of her headaches, and back aches and oft-recurring ills? There was never a night so dark or so cold that your first plaintive cry did not bring her to your bedside. You never heard a murmur of complaint when she nursed you through the measles and mumps and whooping cough and scarlet fever and diphtheria and smallpox. When disease held you in its clutches when you were attractive in no other eye, your mother was beside you. You heard no complaint through the long night watches and the weary days when she bathed your burning head and kissed your fevered brow and held your nervous hands in her own cool, firm ones. You may win much love in the future, tender and passionate and true. You will never find a love so unselfish, so long-suffering, so endless as the love of your mother. Wea rthe white flower.

Boys have you a mother? Good! That means a lot, don't it? You know who bakes the little pies, saves the fat doughnuts and keeps the gravy warm when a fellow is late. You know who wipes up the mud, lets the cat out of the barrel and covers up a multitude of sins with her broad charity. You know who understands a kid—who is his best chum, the best confidante, the most lenient judge; wear the white flower.

Girls, bright, beautiful, thoughtless girls, have you a mother? Do you think that it is by chance that breakfast is ready when you come down in the morning, that dinner is waiting when you get home at noon, that the house is kept tidy, the dainty dresses pressed carefully and the new hat and coat always in season, though mother wears her old ones from year to year? Mother does not mind. She rejoices in your happiness. Your fresh, young beauty is like a vision of her own lost youth and she covets for you every joy it can bring. She loves to forget herself in your pleasure, but do you forget her also? Do you save your smiles and kisses for your casual friends and your confidences for your sweet girl chums? Bring in the breath of your active outside life to enliven the grim monotony of her household tasks, nothing in the world is as dear to her as your caresses, nothing so precious as your confidence. An appreciative "Thank you, mother, it is beautiful" amply repays her for days of nerve-taxing toil, so don't forget to "pay up" as you go along, and—Wear the white flower.

LAYMAN FINDS STOMACH CURE

Good Christian and Family Man, But Had Poor Digestive Organs—What Cured Him You Can Get Free.

It is a generally admitted fact that among ministers and their families Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative. It is not often that the layman has a chance to "speak up in meeting," and hence these words from Mr. Joseph Murphy of Indianapolis, Ind., whose picture we present herewith:

Mr. Joseph Murphy

"All my life I had needed a laxative to cure my constipation and stomach trouble. I couldn't eat anything; I couldn't get what I did eat out of my system. I tried everything, because my work, engineer on a railroad train, makes it necessary that I feel strong and well. Finally it was my good fortune to meet up with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, through the recommendation of a friend. I took it and was cured. That is some time ago, but I am still cured."

It can be bought of any druggist for 50 cents or $1 a bottle. Send your address and a free test bottle will be sent to your home. If there is some mystery about your case that you want explained write the doctor. For the advice or free sample address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Getting Even.

William, aged five, had been reprimanded by his father for interrupting while his father was telling his mother about the new telephone for their house. He sulked a while, then went over to his mother and, patting her cheek, said:

"Mother, dear, I love you."

"Don't you love me too?" asked his father.

Without glancing at him, William said disdainfully: "The wire's busy."

WESTEN CANADA AS A GRAIN PRODUCER

NEVER SAW SUCH FINE WHEAT ANYWHERE.

Gust. Anderson of Maidstone, Sask., was formerly of Minnesota and has been in Central Canada three years. On January 16, 1910, he writes:

"Arriving fifteen miles from Maidstone, I bought a couple of steers from a rancher, as my capital was not large, and with the two oxen I brought with me, I broke 25 acres which I put in crop in 1908 and had to clear some brush. I earned $45.00 by breaking fifteen acres for a neighbor and during the summer I put up hay and hauled timber and put up houses for other settlers. Notwithstanding a heavy frost on August 12th, I had 22½ bushels of wheat per acre and 60 bushels of oats. Off 35 acres of wheat in 1909, I got 27 bushels of wheat per acre and 1,300 bushels of oats off 20 acres. I never saw such fine wheat anywhere. We have plenty of rain between May and August and after August seldom any but dry warm days. Water can be had at from 20 to 40 feet and plenty of grass for cattle."

The evidence of Mr. Anderson is given because it is encouraging to the man of small means who is desirous of bettering his condition. It shows what can be done, and there is really but small limit to the man with push and energy to become wealthy on Canadian lands. And the grain that he raises is good. A press dispatch says:

The quality of the wheat continues to be the feature of the deliveries. In the total of 3,378 cars in the February inspections there were 2,847 of high grade stuff, a percentage of 84.28. For January the percentage was 82.21, and for the six months it was 88.6. This is an unusually high average, and it demonstrates beyond the shadow of a doubt that the farmers in this part of the Dominion still know how to grow first-class wheat. The crop of 1908 was considered good enough, and its average of contract wheat was only 70 per cent. Good weather throughout the season was an important factor, of course, in insuring the high quality of the grain, and it is not likely that atmospheric influences of so favorable a character will be encountered for a long time to come. The best that can be expected is that a fair average for a term of years will be maintained.

The Worst of It.

"Oh, she's awful. Whenever she tries to sing a song she simply murders it."

"But that's not the worst of it. If she'd only murder it outright, I wouldn't mind, but she tortures it so long."

The LITTLE BROWN JUG at KILDARE

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Thomas Ardmore, bored millionaire, and Henry Maine Griswold, professor in the University of Virginia, take trains out of Atlanta. Griswold to his college, Ardmore in pursuit of a girl who had winked at him. Mistaken for Gov. Osborne of South Carolina, Griswold's life is threatened. He goes to Columbia to warn the governor and meets Barbara Osborne. Ardmore learns that his winking lady is the daughter of Gov. Dangerfield of North Carolina. He follows her to Raleigh, and on the way is given a brown jug at Kildare. In Raleigh he discovers that the jug bears a message threatening Dangerfield unless Appleweight, a criminal, is allowed to go free. Ardmore becomes allied with Jerry Dangerfield in running the affairs of the state in the absence of the governor. A scathing telegram is sent to Gov. Osborne.

CHAPTER VI.

Mr. Griswold Forsakes the Academic Life.

Miss Osborne had asked Griswold to await the outcome of the day, and, finding himself thus possessed of a vacation, he indulged his antiquarian instincts by exploring Columbia. The late afternoon found him in the lovely cathedral churchyard, where an aged negro, tending the graves of an illustrious family, leaned upon his spade and recited the achievements and virtues of the dead.

As the shadows lengthened, Griswold walked back to the hotel, where he ate supper, then, calling for a horse, he rode through the streets in a mood of more complete alienation than he had ever experienced in a foreign country; yet the very scents of the summer night, stealing out from old gardens, the voices that reached him from open doorways, spoke of home.

As he reached the outskirts of town and rode on toward the governor's mansion, his mood changed, and he laughed softly, for he remembered Ardmore, and Ardmore was beyond question the most amusing person he knew. It was unfortunate, he generously reflected, that Ardmore, rather than himself, had not been plunged into this present undertaking, which was much more in Ardmore's line that his own. There would, however, be a great satisfaction in telling Ardmore of his unexpected visit to Columbia, in exchange for his friend's report of his pursuit of the winking eye. He only regretted that in the nature of things Columbia is a modern city, a seat of commerce as well as of government, a place where bank clearings are seriously computed, and where the jaunty adventurer with sword and ruffles is quite likely to run afoul of the police. Yet his own imagination was far more fertile than Ardmore's, and he would have hailed a troop of mail-clad men as joyfully as his friend had he met them clanking in the highway. Thus, modern as we think ourselves, the least venturesome among us dreams that some day some turn of a street corner will bring him face to face with what we please to call our fate; and this is the manifestation of our last drop of medieval blood. The grimmest seeker after reality looks out of the corner of his eye for the flutter of a white handkerchief from the ivied tower he affects to ignore; and, in spite of himself, he is buoyed by the hope that some day a horn will sound for him over the nearest hill.

Miss Osborne met him at the veranda steps. Indoors a mandolin and piano struck up the merry chords of "The Eutaw Girl."

"My young sisters have company. We'll sit here, if you don't mind."

She led the way to a quiet corner, and after they were seated she was silent a moment, while the light from the windows showed clearly that her perplexity of the morning was not yet at an end. He felt that she was seriously anxious and troubled, and he wished to hearten her if he could. The soft dusk of the faintly lighted corner folded her in. He heard whispered in his heart a man's first word of the woman he is destined to love, in which he sets her apart; above and beyond all other womenkind—she is different; she is not like other women!

"It is nearly nine," she said, her voice thrilling through him. "My father should have been here an hour ago. We have heard nothing from him. The newspapers have telephoned repeatedly to know his whereabouts. I have put them off by intimating that he is away on important public business, and that his purpose might be defeated if his exact whereabouts were known."

"I have no doubt in the world that the explanation you gave the newspapers is the truth of the matter. Your father must be absent a great deal—it is part of a governor's business to keep in motion. But we may as well face the fact that his absence just now is most embarrassing. This Appleweight matter has reached a crisis, and a failure to handle it properly may injure your father's future as a public man. If you will pardon me, I would suggest that there must be some one whom you can take into your confidence—some friend, some one in your father's administration that you can rely on?"

"Yes; father has many friends; but I cannot consider acknowledging to any one that father has disappeared when such a matter as this Appleweight case is an issue through the state. No; I have thought of every one this afternoon. It would be a painful thing for his best friends to know what is—what seems to be the truth." Her voice wavered a little, but she was brave, and he was aware that she straightened herself in her chair, and, when wayward gleams of light fell upon her face, that her lips were set resolutely.

"You saw the attorney general this morning," she went on. "As you suggested, he would naturally be the one to whom I should turn, but I cannot do it. I—there is a reason"—and she faltered a moment—"there are seasons why I cannot appeal to Mr. Bosworth at this time."

"Impertinent? It's the most contemptible, outrageous thing I ever heard of in my life! Gov. Dangerfield has dilly-dallied with that case for two years. His administration has been marked from the beginning by the worst kind of incompetence. Why, this man Appleweight and his gang of outlaws only come into South Carolina now and then to hide and steal, but they commit most of their crimes in North Carolina, and they always have. Talk about a vacillating course! Father has never taken steps to arrest those men out of sheer regard for Gov. Dangerfield; he thought North Carolina had some pride, and that her governor would prefer to take care of his own criminals. What do you suppose Appleweight is indicted for in this state? For stealing one ham—one single ham from a farmer in Mingo county, and he's killed half a dozen men in North Carolina."

She paced the corner of the veranda angrily, while Griswold groped for a solution of the problem. The telegram from Raleigh was certainly lacking in diplomatic suavity. It was patent that if the governor of North Carolina was not tremendously aroused, he was playing a great game of bluff; and on either hypothesis a prompt response must be made to his telegram.

"I must answer this at once. He must not think we are so stupid in Columbia that we don't know when we're insulted. We can go through the side door to father's study and write the message there," and she led the way.

She found a blank and wrote rapidly, without asking suggestions, with this result:

The Honorable William Dangerfield,
Raleigh, N. C.:

Your extremely diverting telegram in Appleweight case received and filed.

CHARLES OSBORNE,
Governor of South Carolina.

"What Are Our Intentions?"

She shrugged her shoulders as though throwing off a disagreeable topic, and he saw that there was nothing more to be said on this point. His heart-beats quickened as he realized that she was appealing to him; that, though he was only the most casual acquaintance, she trusted him.

As he pondered for a moment, a messenger rode into the grounds, and Miss Osborne slipped away and met the boy at the steps. She came back and opened a telegram, reading the message at one of the windows. An indignant exclamation escaped her, and she crumpled the paper in her hand.

"The impudence of it!" she exclaimed. He had risen, and she now turned to him with anger and scorn deepening her beautiful color. Her breath came quickly; her head was lifted imperiously; her lips quivered slightly as she spoke.

"This is from Gov. Dangerfield. Can you imagine a man of any character or decency sending such a message to the governor of another state?"

She watched him as he read:

Raleigh, N. C.

The Honorable Charles Osborne,
Governor of South Carolina,
Columbia, S. C.:

Have written by to-night's mail in Appleweight matter. Your vacillating course not understood.

WILLIAM DANGERFIELD,
Governor of North Carolina.

"W[illegible] do you think of that?" she de[illegible]ed.

"I [illegible]nk it's impertinent, to say the least," [illegible]replied guardedly.

She met Griswold's obvious disappointment with prompt explanation.

"You see, the governor of South Carolina cannot stoop to an exchange of billingsgate with an underbred person like that—a big, solemn, conceited creature in a long frock-coat and a shoestring necktie, who boasts of belonging to the common 'peo-pull.' He doesn't have to tell anybody that, when it's plain as daylight. The way to answer him is not to answer at all."

"Excellent. It's bound to irritate, and it leaves him in the dark as to our—I mean Gov. Osborne's—intentions. And those intentions—"

During this by-play he had reached a decision as to what should be done, and he was prepared to answer when she asked, with an employment of the pronoun that pleasantly emphasized their relationship:

"What are our intentions?"

"We are going to catch Appleweight, that's the first thing—and until we get him we're going to keep our own counsel. Let me have a telegraph blank and I will try my hand at being governor." He sat down in the governor's chair, asked the name of the county seat of Mingo and wrote without erasure or hesitation this message:

To the Sheriff of Mingo County,
Turner Court House, S. C.:

Make every possible effort to capture Appleweight and any of his gang who are abroad in your county. Swear in all the deputies you need, and if friendliness of citizens to outlaws makes this impossible wire me immediately, and I will send militia. Any delay on your part will be visited with severest penalties. Answer immediately by telegraph.

CHARLES OSBORNE,
Governor of South Carolina.

"That's quite within the law," said Griswold, handing Barbara the message; "and we might as well put the thing through at a gallop. I'll get the telegraph company to hold open the line to Turner Court House until the sheriff answers."

As Barbara read the message he saw her pleasure in the quick compression of her lips, the glow in her cheeks, and then the bright glint of her bronze-brown eyes as she finished.

"There must be no mistake, no failure," she said quietly.

"We are not going to fail; we are going to carry this through! Within three days we'll have Appleweight in a North Carolina jail or a flying fugitive in Gov. Dangerfield's territory. And now these telegrams must be sent. It might be better for you to go to the telegraph office with me. You must remember that I am a pilgrim and a stranger and they might question my filing official messages."

"That is perfectly true. I will go into town with you."

"And if there's an official coach that everybody knows as yours, it would allay suspicions to have it," and while he was still speaking she vanished to order the carriage.

In five minutes it was at the side door, and Griswold and Barbara, fortified by the presence of Phoebe, left the governor's study.

"If they don't know me, everybody in South Carolina knows Phoebe," said Barbara.

"A capital idea. I can see by her eye that she's built for conspiracy."

Griswold's horse was to be returned to town by a boy; and when this had been arranged the three entered the carriage.

"The telegraph office, Tom; and hurry."

CHAPTER VII.

An Affair at the Statehouse.

Barbara filed the messages herself with the manager of the telegraph company, who lifted the green shade from his eyes and smiled upon her.

"We'll rush them, Miss Osborne. Shall I telephone the answers if they come to-night? No; your father likes his telegrams delivered, I remember."

"I will call for them," said Griswold. "Gov. Osborne was only at home a few hours this evening and he left me in charge of these matters."

The manager's face expressed surprise.

"Oh! I didn't know the governor was at home," he remarked, as he finished counting the words and charging them against the state's account. "I will send them myself, and ask the operators at the other end to look lively about the answers. You are Mr.—"

"This is Maj. Griswold," said Barbara, conferring the title with a vague feeling that it strengthened her cause.

"Major," repeated the manager, and he nodded to Griswold with an air that implied his familiarity with official secrets. "You will call? In a couple of hours, major."

NOTABLE CEREMONY IN SIAM

Presentation by the King of Yellow Robes to Priests of Buddhist Temples.

Once a year, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, all the Buddhist temples in Siam are visited by the king, or his deputies, bearing the Phra Kathin (yellow robes), in conformity with an ancient custom by which the priests were made to seek their apparel for the ensuing year. During the lifetime of Buddha, monks and priests were sent out to beg for old, cast-off garments, which were afterward dyed yellow and patched together to form the required robes. This ancient mendicant custom graduaally gave place to the present one of making the garments from new cloth of a bright canary yellow, provided by joint contributions of king, princes, nobles and commoners. When the king goes in the royal throne barge to present the robes in person he does so with great pomp and ceremony. The priestly garments, folded in bundles, are carried to the door of the temple to await the appearance of his majesty and his suite. The king, on arriving, takes a priestly robe and places it on a decorated altar. The chief priest then lays his hands on the garment and chants an acknowledgment.

Pineapples.

People in the north don't know what pineapples are, because to be shipped to this market they must be picked when they are green and an unripe pineapple is just wood, to be handled with a knife, a hatchet or a saw. Taken off the tree when it is ready, the inside fruit is flowing honey, to be dipped out and eaten, as the natives of pineapple countries do, with a spoon.—New York Press.

A SINGLE HAIR.

By PERCY G. HALL.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

The editor of the Excelsior Magazine sat at his desk opening envelopes containing contributions. Running over the sheets of one to discover if it came within the prescribed length, he found between two of them a hair. It was too long for a man's hair and too short for a woman's. But it must be one or the other, and since the manuscript was sent in by a woman he concluded that it had belonged to the latter. It was not black or brown or red; it was golden. And the name of the girl on whose head it had doubtless grown was Nathalie Rose Arrowsmith. But perhaps this was fictitious.

The Excelsior Magazine was published in the far west, where women, being comparatively scarce, are appreciated. Possibly it was this that led the editor to dream over the golden hair and Nathalie Rose Arrowsmith. He was a young man of ideal tastes. He was not the owner of the periodical, but an employee whose business it was to select such contributions as would fit in between certain other staple matter. He possessed literary discrimination, but was aware that this delicate faculty was not considered in fixing his salary. What was expected of him was to read the manuscripts that came in to see that there was nothing in them calculated to offend any of the magazine's patrons, selecting those that would fit the empty spaces.

That a good name for Miss Arrowsmith would be "the fair one with the golden locks" gradually insinuated itself into the young editor's mind. He estimated the length of her production and, finding it within limits, laid it aside for acceptance in case it contained nothing objectionable. Meanwhile his operative mentality was on his work, but his ideal faculties—those akin to soul—were on "the fair one with the golden locks." By the time he had read her manuscript he had conjured up a poetic, aesthetic condition that enabled him to see in it the highest degree of literary merit. The language was "plains" or gulch language, and the author had succeeded in giving it as correctly as if she had kept a cowboy's boarding house. There were Rattlesnake Bill and Mexican Pete, as "bad men as ever fanned a 45 or twisted a bowie." Then there was Cactus Kate, not overparticular in her loves, but "a heart as big as Table mountain."

The story was available, but when the editor contemplated offering the management's limit of compensation for such productions—$2.50—his whole ideal nature sickened. Yet what could he do? Any suggestion to pay an additional sum for a literary gem would only meet with a snarl from his chief and the remark that "we ain't in this yere business to edecate authors, but for dust." He concluded to soften the blow for the fair one with the golden locks by writing her a letter of apology for offering her so pitiful a sum for her production.

If he had stopped at this there need have been no harm done. All editors kindly insert feather beds under struggling authors before knocking them down. It's a feature of the business. But the gold strand had stuck in his head, and he added some "soft stuff." He inclosed the proprietor's check for the price to be paid and sent the whole away with a fluttering heart.

A few days later the young editor heard a stentorian voice in the manager's private room debating some question with all the intensity of language of Rattlesnake Bill or Mexican Pete in the story. Then the manager called the editor into his office. There stood a strapping cowboy whose yellow hair hung down under his sombrero. There were pistols and cartridges in his belt and spurs big enough for buzz saws on his heels. He was flushed with anger; but, on seeing the editor, who was a delicate fellow of five feet two inches and a hundred pounds weight, he stood astonished for a moment then burst into a fit of uncontrollable laughter.

"Be you the kid as writ that?" he asked, holding forth the editor's apologetic message.

The editor stood stupefied.

"Waal, waal, I ain't on the blow about seein' big wonders, but this is the blarstedest observation I ever made. So y' took me for a gal. And the hair ez got in between the sheets. A golden strand. And y' daubed in some soft soap on me. I sure never see nothin' like this before."

"Did you write the stuff?" asked the proprietor of Nathalie Rose Arrowsmith.

"Sartin. I read it to the boys, and they 'lowed it was fine."

"What made you choose that name?"

"Why, pard, I was called sudden on a roundup and lef' the stuff with a young feller ez jist come out to the Peters ranch from the east to send to your magazine. He put on the name. He said he'd give it a nom der plum."

"It is a plum," remarked the proprietor contemptuously.

"Waal, little one, I come up yere to to see what kind of a galoot took me for a gal. I thort as if there was ary insult intended, though I ain't much on gun suddenness, I'd jist bore a hole in the man as did it. But you ain't big enough target for my guns. Goodby, Mr. Proprietor; goodby, little one."

And he walked out to the music of his spurs.

Then the manager turned to his editor.

"I reckon," he said, "this ain't no pasture for a moon calf like you? Y' better go east to some o' them college magazines. Here's your salary to date."

THE QUICKEST WAY.

How One Might Travel 190 Miles In About Ten Minutes.

It is estimated that if all mechanical difficulties could be removed and sufficient power developed the minimum time in which passengers could be transported over the eighty-five miles from New York to Philadelphia would be six minutes and forty-four seconds and for the 190 miles from Boston to New York ten minutes and four seconds. A correspondent of the Scientific American who has been working on the problem says that the trains would have to be run in a vacuum to prevent their being heated to incandescence by the resistance of the air. They would have to be held in suspension in the vacuum tube through which they traveled, for the slightest contact with the sides of the tube would result in enormous friction. The cars might be held in suspension by the propulsion of opposing magnets on the cars and on the tubes respectively. When thus isolated they could be propelled only by the power of magnetism. The energy consumed in propelling the cars would be comparatively low.

To avoid shock or jar the trains would travel faster and faster until one-half of the distance should be covered and then slow down until the destination should be reached. When the rate of acceleration is just such as can be borne with comfort the limit is attained. The effect on the passengers would be a continuous pressure against the back of the seat, as when a car is started suddenly, for the first half of the journey, and then in order to prevent them from pitching out of their seats the chairs would be turned in the opposite direction for the rest of the journey, during which the same sensation would be felt.

At the speed named the passengers would be traveling for each half of the distance one-third as fast as they could fall through the same space under the attraction of gravity.

A Canine Feat.

A blind man, guided by a large and athletic dog, went down the street the other day. Just as they turned a corner the blind man's dog saw a dog it knew and darted forward in a way that threw the sightless mendicant to the ground. He was speedily assisted to his feet, however, by a waggish passerby, who remarked that he had heard some remarkable stories of the feats performed by dogs, but this was the first time he had ever known one to pull down the blind.

God's ways sometimes seem dark to us poor mortals, but we know that He has good and sufficient reasons and that He doeth all things well All sympathize with the afflicted ones in their sorrow.

Well, preachers are human beings like the rest. They make promises and don't always fill them. Did they put in an appearance at the camp-ground and help in the building of tabernacle? Just as we expected, only two showed up. Two had a funeral to attend, one was sick, one has a wife that cannot milk the cow, etc. etc. Yet the work is progressing nicely. The good people of Garner, Klemme and Germantown have again demonstrated that they can be depended upon when it comes to work.

At a business meeting held in the Germantown church Monday evening, it was decided to replaster the church, paper and paint the inside, install a furnace, make a cement platform and walk, and build an addition to the north side of the present building, and connect the same with the main auditorium by folding doors. The most encouraging feature of it all is that nearly enough money was subscribed in less than ten minutes to carry out all of the above. It was one of the most agreeable and harmonious business meetings we ever attended, considering the amount of business transacted in so short a time. When completed the entire building will have the appearance of a new church.

Evidently Not.

They had met at Bluepoint, L. I., two years before and were celebrating it by a little dinner at a cafe.

"I shall never forget how we became acquainted," he was saying. "So romantic. In swimming. That was when I first saw you. You went into three feet of water and got frightened. I rescued you from a watery grave and we were friends at once." He called the waiter. "Bring me the wine list," he said, explaining. "Because we began our acquaintance in a watery way, it needn't always be watery.."

DRIP! DROP! SPLASH!

There's that old roof leaking again. The wind got busy and blew off a few shingles and now the only thing to be done is to put the dishpan under the leak and catch the drip, drop and splash. The plaster is down in patches and the walls are ruined.

Cheer up, though—We're going to get a new roof of GAL-VA-NITE that won't leak summer or winter — rain or snow. It never needs painting or patching, won't rot, rust or warp and blow off. Any handy man can put it on and then we won't have any more of the grief of leaky roofs and the annoyance of drip, drop and splash.

GAL-VA-NITE comes in rolls complete and all ready to be put on. The secret of its ability to withstand the elements lies in the fact that it is waterproofed with three coats of mineral asphalt and weatherproofed with an "armor-plating" of flaked mica.

This great railroad magnate is taking advantage of the situation by extensive railway building to the wheat fields of Western Canada.

SAVE GRAPE CROP

Veteran Iowa Fruit Grower Tells How it Can Be Done.

NEW BLOSSOMS, GOOD CROP

Pinch Off the Frozen Buds Declares Cedar Rapids Fruit Grower and Then New Buds Will Take Their Place.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Apr. 25.—R. J. Wilson, a veteran fruit grower, gives those who have grape vines a valuable pointer. He said:

"The grape blossoms this year are almost a month ahead of the usual season. The blossoms appear on the new shoots of the season. Now if those who have grape vines will go through them and pinch off the frozen shoots, the vines will concentrate their energies on new shoots and there is yet plenty of time for new shoots, new blossoms and a good crop of grapes. Perhaps they will be a little later than usual, but there is no reason why there should not be a good crop.

"If, however, these frozen shoots are left on the vines, nature will make an effort to revive them. The effort will fail. The frozen shoots will sour and then the vines will put out new shoots. The thing to do is to pinch off the frozen shoots at once, so that all the energy of the vine may be put into the task of sending out new shoots."

Mr. Wilson said also that this is the best time to trim hard maple trees.

"The cold spell will stop the flow of the sugar sap," he said. "There will be no more danger of the trees bleeding until the start of what we call the June sap. From now until the fifteenth of May is a good time to trim, not only the sugar maple, but other trees as well."

Will Reclaim Much Land.

Waterloo.—A number of Waterloo capitalists are organizing a company for the object of reclamation of a large area of property in and near Waterloo which at this time is untenable because it is low land and becomes inundated during the spring freshets. The project has back of it men with command of large capital. Orders for the machinery have been placed. The object of the company is the saving of land by means of filling places with material dredged from the Cedar river. This will serve two purposes—build up property now inaccessible and deepen the channel of the river.

Masons to Waterloo in June.

Waterloo.—Arrangements are being completed for the entertainment of the grand lodge of Iowa, A. F. and A. M., which meets in Waterloo early in June. The secret work will be exemplified at Waterloo theater, and the regular sessions of the grand lodge will be held in Syndicate theater. There will be a reception and ball one evening, and some form of amusement at the park on another evening. Waterloo will endeavor to take care of the 1,200 visitors expected in a royal manner.

Broke Jaw Calling Hired Man.

Sioux City.—Too much strenuosity of enunciation in calling the hired man to dinner resulted in a broken jaw for Miss Ida Bethune, who lives near Dunbar, Neb. The jaw was fractured square across between the third and fourth molars on the left side, caused, the doctors said, by over exertion of the muscles and their rapid contraction.

510 Inmates at Anamosa.

Anamosa.—The number of inmates at the state reformatory here has now reached 510 and has exceeded the count at Fort Madison by three. The number at each place is larger now than in the past five or six years, and this is the first time since the removal of the government prisoners that Anamosa has had more prisoners than the penitentiary.

Gets Letter From Dead.

Marshalltown.—Mrs. G. A. Ernest, Humboldt, Kansas, has received a letter from the dead. It was written her by her father, Albert Holcomb, three days before he killed himself here. The letter was sent to her home and later forwarded here.

Resigns After Thirty Years.

Waterloo.—After thirty years in the employ of the Illinois Central Railroad company, D. W. Loban, agent for the company in Waterloo for the past five years, has tendered his resignation, effective the first of the month.

Iowa Red Men Will Gather.

Oskaloosa.—The proposition to make May 12 the anniversary of the dedication of the statue of Mahaska and the annual holiday and celebration of the Improved Order of Red Men of Iowa, is meeting approval throughout the state. The head officers of the order have indorsed the plan and have notified the local committee that they expect to be present. Six or eight drill teams have promised to compete for the prizes to be offered, and from present indications several thousand braves from all over the Iowa reservation will gather on the battle field here and have a big war dance in the presence of the great chief.

Saunders to Fort Dodge.

Fort Dodge.—It was announced authoritatively that Father Saunders, pastor of St. Mary's parish of Boone, is the selection of Bishop Garrigan for the vacancy in Corpus Christi parish. Father Saunders will also receive appointment to the vicar generalship of the diocese and will be invested with the office and title of monsignor. He will assume his new pastorate May 1. Father Saunders is 68 years old and considered one of the most capable and efficient priests of the diocese. He has been pastor of St. Mary's for the past six years, having served some thirty-five years since being ordained.

Tournament at Lake City.

Lake City.—The board of control of the Maple Valley Firemen's association, which met here in joint session with the officers of the local fire department, has announced that the 1910 annual tournament of the assication will be held July 15. The tournament, it was decided several weeks ago at the regular meeting of the officers, will be held in Lake City, and the date was set earlier than usual to avoid conflict with the Chautauqua, which takes place from July 24 to 30.

Lamoni Man Shoots Self.

Lamoni.—William Smith, about 40 years old, manager of an elevator at Lamoni, shot himself in the temple in the Farmers' bank here, dying almost instantly. On his entry he inquired as to the state of his acount at the bank and was told that he had withdrawn all his money. He then picked up the bank's revolver which was lying on the counter, and fired, the bullet passing through his head.

Transfers $30,000 Damage Suit

Iowa City.—A $30,000 damage suit has been ordered transferred from Iowa City to the United States northern district court at Cedar Rapids by Judge R. P. Howell. The plaintiff is Mrs. Millie Fish of Trenton, Mo., and the Rock Island Railway company is the defendant. She alleges her husband, Norman G. Fish, a brakeman, was killed through the company's negligence.

House Cleaning at S. U. I.

Iowa City.—While the housewife is busy cleaning house, janitors at the big $3,000,000 university here are at work of the same kind. Buildings are being thoroughly cleaned, lawns are being cared for to promote the growth of the grass. Work of excavating for the new $215,000 physics building has been started. The old engineering shops are being torn down and other preparations made.

Mayor to Improve Park.

Logan.—Mayor C. A. Bolter of Logan intends to greatly improve the city park here by the construction of cement walks, and erection of a fountain and the leveling up of the grounds. The improvements will add greatly to the appearance of Logan and the park. The expense of the improvement will be borne by Mr. and Mrs. Bolter.

S. U. I. Cadets to Camp.

Iowa City.—Plans are now being made at the state university for the annual march and encampment of the university battalion, which will probably take place May 21, 22 and 23. The location of the camp has not yet been settled, but the final selection will probably be West Liberty, southeast of Iowa City.

Iowan Meets Bryan in South America

Iowa City.—Percy Hess of Iowa City, a young civil engineer, now building railroads in South America, writes home of a recent meeting with William Jennings Bryan, and the pleasure accorded in being of assistance to the eminent Nebraskan.

Iowans to Europe.

Boone.—S. L. Moore, his niece, Miss Elizabeth Hill, and Misses Susie Moore and Eleanor Moore, of Des Moines will leave Boone about June 11 for New York where they will sail for Germany. On the trip the party will witness the passion play at Oberammergau.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

HIS HAPPY PAST.

Weary—Did youse ever get enough to eat?

Miles—Gee! yes. I had indigestion oncet.

Not Quite.

"Young man," inquired her father, sternly, "will you give her a home like the one she has been used to?"

"No," replied the truthful suitor, "for there will be no grumpy father to come home and make every one miserable by his kicking over trifles and swearing at matters in general. There will be no mother to scold her from morning to night for wasting time merely because she wants to be neat. There will be no big brother to abuse her for not doing half his work, and no little brother to make enough noise to drive her crazy when her head aches. There won't be any younger sister to insist on reading some trashy novel while she does all the work. She will not have with me a home like she has been used to, not if I can help it."—Puck.

A Great Surprise.

Papa—Ruthie, I shouldn't be surprised if God would send you a little baby brother before long. What would you think of that?

Ruthie—Oh, papa! I think it would be perfectly lovely. And say, papa, let's you and me keep it a surprise for mamma.—Life.

ROOTS THAT NEEDED SOAK

Pat at Least Told the Exact Truth His Application for Whisky.

The town of Dedham is under prohibition law, apothecaries alone being permitted to sell alcoholic stimulants. The other day a son of the Emerald Isle entered a drug store there, and taking a bottle from his pocket, asked for a quart of whisky. The salesman asked to what use it was to be put, and the reply was:

"To soak roots in it."

The order was filled, and the customer after handing over the bottle and its contents, inquired, in a conversational manner:

"What kind of roots are you going to soak?"

Pocketing the bottle, the customer said:

"The roots of my tongue, be jabers!"—Argonaut Storyette (1886).

Giving Papa Away.

London is smiling over a story regarding little Miss Asquith, who at that tender age when indiscretions marks are still pardonable.

Mrs. Asquith had taken her two daughter out to tea, and while their mother was talking to some friends at the other end of the room little Margaret endeavored to entertain a conservative statesman who sat near her.

"Do you like Mr. Lloyd-George?" she asked when there was a lull in the conversation.

"No," said he, smiling, "I can't say that I do."

"Neither does daddy," said the prime minister's 10-year-old daughter blithely.

No man should play practical jokes unless he is a good loser.

Every man who owns a single share of stock in a $1,000,000 corporation thinks he could run it better than the general manager does.

In the London streets there are nearly 10,500 boy traders under 14 years of age, and over 900 girl traders.

TOTAL LOSS OF FRUIT

Frost and Cold Wave Kills Crops and Vegetation.

FARMERS NOW FEAR FOR OATS

Thousands of Dollars Lost on Muscatine Island, Garden Spot of Eastern Iowa—Farmers Unable to Estimate Damage.

Muscatine, Ia., Apr. 25.—The damage to fruit and vegetables and other crops and vegetation in this locality as a result of the frigid temperature of the past two days cannot be estimated. The Muscatine island, the garden spot of eastern Iowa, has been smitten as by a plague.

Thousands of acres of early vegetables have been ruined and the loss is hundreds of thousands of dollars in Muscatine and Louisa counties.

The crop disaster is the worst in years. Single localities concerned, report the complete loss of hundreds of acres of cabbage, radishes, peas and early vegetables. Ice froze to a thickness of two inches and even plants in hot beds, despite the protection afforded, are severely injured.

All day Saturday island gardeners were busy providing extra protection for the plants in the hotbeds to save them, if possible, from the expected freeze. It is feared that little effort will be made by many gardeners to repair the damaged plants by replanting, because of the lateness of the season. The fruit crop has been completely ruined.

The frosts of the early part of last week severely injured the opening buds and the extreme cold of Friday night froze practically all the buds, resulting in a total loss. The strawberries escaped the frost, but the freeze killed many of the plants.

Small Fruit Is Total Loss.

Davenport, Ia., Apr. 25.—Eastern Iowa farmers simply threw up their hands in despair Saturday, when asked to estimate the damage done by the blizzard to Iowa crops. They report a total loss of all small and large fruit, except, perhaps, a few late apples, while truck gardeners lose all the early vegetables that were above ground and many fields of oats and potatoes will have to be replanted.

Blizzard in Dubuque.

Dubuque, Ia., Apr. 25.—A blizzard raged in Dubuque the greater portion of Saturday and traffic was practically suspended for several hours during the storm. The temperature was down to 21. Vegetables and all fruit are killed.

Six Degrees Below Freezing.

Burlington, Ia., Apr. 25.—Six degrees below freezing, with a hard wind and flying snow, took away all hope of any kind of a fruit crop in southeastern Iowa Saturday. The clover crop is also killed.

Farmers Fear for Oats.

Marshalltown, Ia., Apr. 25.—The farmers fear for their oats, owing to the severe weather. Their only hope for the crop is that the snow may protect the crop from freezing.

QUICK HOUSE DEMOLISHED

Dr. Hall, an Occupant of the Residence, Was a Classmate of the Carthage Woman.

Prairie City, Ia., Apr. 25—Jesse A. Quick's beautiful residence, three miles east of Prairie City was wrecked Saturday night at 11:45 o'clock by a terific explosion of dynamite.

Dr. Mary Guthrie of Carthage, Ill., is being held in the town jail on suspicion that she fired the charge underneath the bedroom of her former sweetheart, Dr. Alexander Hall, a son-in-law to Mr. Quick.

While the entire front of the farm dwelling was shattered by the explosion, none of the four occupants was injured. Every window in the eight room house was demolished and the furniture was completely destroyed.

An hour after the explosion, Dr. Guthrie, who had been in Prairie City but two days, was arrested by Marshal Andrew Waddell as she was entering the Main hotel at Prairie City.

Twain Sleeping in Langdon Plot.

Elmira, N. Y., Apr. 25—Under a tent on the grassy slope of the Langdon plot in Woodlawn cemetey, with the rain beating fiercely against the canvas cover, a little group of mourners silently watched as the body of Samuel L. Clemens was lowered into and evergreen lined grave beside the bodies of his wife and children.

GOV. CARROLL FILES PAPERS

Executive Is Now Legally a Candidate for Re-Election—Many Nomination Papers Filed.

Des Moines, Apr. 25.—Nomination papers have been filed by Gov. B. F. Carroll with Secretary of State Hayward. He attached only about half of the petitions he has received from every county in the state to the nomination blank. There were about 3,000 names filed.

Senator George Cosson, candidate for attorney general, and State Treasurer W. W. Morrow, candidate for reelection, also filed their papers Saturday. Their nomination blanks were accompanied by petitions from almost every county in the state.

The first nomination papers for the office of state superintendent of public instruction were filed by Adam Pickett of Union county.

George W. Clarke, of Adel, filed his papers for renomination for lieutenant governor.

H. M. Towner, of Corning, has filed his papers for renomination for congress in the Eighth.

John A. De Armond, of Davenport, filed for Congressman from the Second district, and many candidates for members of the state legislature have their petitions on file.

Stop Women And Consider

This Fact—that in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with women's diseases covers twenty-five years.

The present Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, was for years under her direction, and has ever since her decease continued to advise women.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty causes them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probable examinations of even their family physician. Such questioning and examination is unnecessary. Without cost you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION:

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Mrs. Pinkham, care of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

The Two Angels.

The following allegory is told among the Turks:

Every man has two guardian angels, one on his right shoulder and one on his left. In doing good the angel on the right shoulder notes it down and sets a seal upon it, for what is done is done forever. When evil is committed the angel on the left shoulder writes it down, but he waits until midnight before he seals it. If by that time the man bows his head and says, "Gracious Allah, I have sinned; forgive me!" the angel blots out the fault, but if not he seals it at midnight, and then the angel on the right shoulder weeps.

H. LAU & SON

THE SOLAR SYSTEM AND HALLEY'S COMET

Following are some fragments from the lecture on Halley's Comet and the Solar System given by G. I. Schaper:

The lecture was well attended and a keen interest taken by the audience.

The speaker chose to reverse the subject to "The Solar System and Halley's Comet."

The Solar System consists of the Sun, from which it takes its name, the planets and an unknown number of comets. Of the planets such as move directly around the Sun are called Primary; others are Secondary because they move around the Primary planets. The secondary planets are called Statellites or Moons. The earth has one moon, Jupiter 4, Saturn 8, Uranus 6 and Neptune 1.

The speaker intimated that the inhabitants of Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus, if such there are, must have a hard time planting their potatoes in the dark of the moon.

The planets named in their regular order from the sun beginning with the nearest, are: Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune.

Jupiter, the largest, is nearly 1400 times as large as the earth. Its diameter is 85,968 miles while the diameter of our earth is but 7,916 miles. Our earth revolves around the sun in 365¼ days, while Jupiter requires nearly 12 of our years and Neptune, the one farthest from the sun, requires 164 years.

It was briefly demonstrated by the use of a globe that the rotation of the earth upon its own axis causes day and night and that the inclination of the earth's axis (23½°) in connection with its motion around the sun, causes the change of the seasons. The speaker admitted that the teachings of astronomy are very much doubted and disbelieved, but thoroughly demonstrated by drawings on the blackboard that the astronomer IS capable of ascertaining the distance, size, orbit or path and velocity of the planets or stars.

Comets form the most numerous class of bodies which belong to our System, and sometimes exhibit appearances which render them most imposing of all natural phenomena. Their magnitudes are extremely various, nor is there a great regularity observed as to their motions; some of them moving in the same direction as the planets, others in an opposite direction and others at right angles to the orbits of the planets. Halley's comet revolves once in 76 years, Encke's in 3 years and 4 months, Biela's in 6 years and 9 months, and Faye's in 7½ years.

Astronomers tell us that light travels at the rate of 186,000 miles per second, and that some of the stars that are visible to the naked eye are so distant that it would take their light 3,000 years to reach the earth In other words, if such a star were a dark object and Almighty God would light it, it would take 3,000 years until we would see it, and if God would blow it out we would continue to see it as a shining star for 3,000 years after it was blown out.

The telescope reveals myriads of other stars beyond those visible to the naked eye, and the speaker tried to lead his audience to conclude that the universe is as boundless as space, and light may never reach its extreme limits.

"God made the Sun to rule the day,
The moon and stars to shine by night;
The little lambs to skip and play.
And flowers to charm our sight."

The diameter of the sun is 822,000 miles and its volume is 1,300,000 times that of the earth. The distance from the earth to the sun is 92,897 geographic miles.

Halley's Comet is now visible to the naked eye from 2 to 4 o'clock a. m.—looking a little north of east at two, about due east at three, and a little south of east at four, the tail pointing away from the sun.

(Concluded next week.)

(Note—The article next week will be entirely about Halley's Comet.)

For County Sheriff

The above is a likeness of Wm. Lau, democratic candidate for Sheriff of Hancock County, whose announcement appears in the Times this week. It has been rumored that Mr. Lau had withdrawn from the race, but such reports are absolutely without any foundation. He is most emphatically in the race and in it to win the nomination too. He has been a resident of the county for over 28 years and enjoys a very wide acquaintance.

Political Advertisement

The candidate advanced by Garner this year for the office of Treasurer seems to have the full approval of the west side of the county as shown by the absence of a candidate for the same office, but it could not be otherwise considering the qualifications of candidate J. O. Lewis. His dealings with the public in the past have always been obliging and accommodating, combined, in this case, with a full knowledge of the responsible duties of the Treasurer's office, acquired as deputy under the present treasurer. The voter of the county is supposed to select the person to fill this important office of the county on merit alone, and Garner this year has given us the ideal candidate in the person of John O. Lewis.—Britt News.

MORE THAN TWO THOUSAND PEOPLE SEE COOPER DAILY

During L. T. Cooper's recent stay in Boston, it is estimated that sixty-five thousand people talked with him and purchased his medicine. This is an average of over two thousand a day.

His success is so phenomenal as to cause universal comment both by the public and the press. There must be a reason for this. Here is the reason given in his own words by Mr. Cooper when interviewed on the subject. He said:

"The immense numbers of people who are calling on me here in Boston is not unusual. I have had the same experience for the past two years wherever I have gone. The reason is a simple one. It is because my medicine puts the stomach in good condition. This does not sound unusual, but it is in fact the key to health. The stomach is the very foundation of life. I attribute 90 per cent. of all sickness directly to the stomach.

"Neither animals nor men can remain well with a poor digestive apparatus. Few can be sick with a digestion in perfect condition. As a matter of fact, most men and women today are half-sick. It is because too much food and too little exercise have gradually forced the stomach into a half-sick condition. My medicine gets the stomach back where it was, and that is all that is necessary."

Among Boston people who are staunch believers in Mr. Cooper's theory, is Mr. Frank D. Brown, of 57 Bloomingdale street, Chelsea, Mass. He says:

"For five years I have sought relief for indigestion, stomach trouble and dyspepsia, spending nearly all my wages with doctors and obtaining no results. I had dull pains across my back, radiating to the shoulders. I had splitting headaches, which nothing seemed to cure. There was a gnawing and rumbling in my stomach and bowels. I was troubled with vertigo and dizziness, and at times almost overcome by drowsiness.

"I felt tired and worn out all the time, my sleep was not refreshing, and I would get up in the morning feeling as weary as when I went to bed. My appetite was variable—ravenous at times, then again nauseated at the sight of food. Sometimes my face was pale, at other times flushed. I was constipated and bilious, and had catarrhal affection in nose and throat, which caused me to hawk and spit a great deal, especially in the morning. I heard so much of the Cooper remedies that I decided to try them. After taking one bottle, a tapeworm 50 feet long passed from my system. I felt better almost immediately. All my troubles disappeared as if by magic, and my improvement was rapid. I now feel entirely well, and can honestly recommend Mr. Cooper's medicine to anyone who suffers as I did."

Was Taking No Chances.

Once upon a time a fond mother disapproved of her daughter marrying. This was the more awkward because the young lady had picked the young man out. Also he had wealth. And the mother, who was widowed, had not the wherewithal to furnish her daughter with the variety of frocks and things which her youthful heart craved. "I might not object to the man so much," said the mother one evening, "if you would only let me see him. But here is a man whom I have never set eyes on, and yet one whom you insist on taking for a husband. I don't understand such secrecy!" The daughter replied: "If I ever introduced him you'd insist on marrying him yourself."

From Pain to Pleasure a Quick Transition.

I suggested Resinol and gave a neighbor one of your sample boxes for a child of a few months whose lower limbs were broken out with a rash resembling Eczema. The sample was applied at once and changed the wail of pain into smiles. Two jars were used with complete recovery in the surprisingly short time of two days. That tired mother's looks and words of gratitude were from the heart. Geo. E. Ames, D. D. S., Boulder, Colo.

A "Crisis."

A mother of a seven-year-old lad was daily expecting a visit from the stork, and found the little fellow's conduct so annoying that his father was called upon to interfere.

"Bobby," said papa, "mamma is quite ill and we are afraid that if you are not a better boy and mind your mother, it will bring on a crisis. Now, my boy perhaps you don't know what a crisis is."

"Oh, yes, I do, papa," said Bobby, blithely, "it's either a boy or a girl."—Judge.

PLEASES SCHURMAN

Cornell President Sees Good in Big Philanthropy Scheme.

Believes Congress Should Grant Request for National Charter—Would Change Only One Small Detail.

Ithaca, N. Y. — In an address before the Council congress on Friday night President Jacob Gould Schurman of Cornell commended the scheme for the Rockefeller foundation for which congress has been asked for a national charter. President Schurman devoted his entire speech of several thousand words to this subject and in summing up he said:

"I recognize that section No. 2 of the bill, which defines the object of the Rockefeller foundation, authorizes and empowers that foundation to do anything and everything which may promote and advance human civilization, that is to say, morals and religion, art and science, manners and social intercourse, and all that concerns the political, economic, and material well being of individuals and communities This is a vast field for the exercise of philanthropy.

"But Mr. Rockefeller has conceived a vast scheme of philanthropy, for the benefit of his fellow citizens and mankind. His character, ability and organizing skill are adequate guarantees that he will carry out his scheme wisely and successfully, with incalculable benefit and blessing to mankind. It is in the interest of the nation that he be given a free hand in the exercise of his colossal beneficence. So long as he is active or his influence remains it would be wise and safe to give the foundation the sort of organization he desires. Neither now nor hereafter does it seem necessary to limit the scope of his beneficence, which is coextensive with the efforts of mankind to attain a higher civilization.

"The only change I would desire to see in the proposed bill is the total or partial elimination of the method of selecting trustees by co-operation. The organization might well be left a close corporation, if Mr. Rockefeller so desires, for a generation. But after that time I am confident that it would inure both to the efficiency of the foundation and to the public welfare—to say nothing of the satisfaction of the sentiment of a democracy—if the majority of the trustees were appointed by the president of the United States, with the advice and consent of the senate, or selected by some other high abiding, governmental agencies that may fairly be regarded as representing the people of the United States, whose welfare is the primary object of the immense and glorious benefaction."

AIRSHIP RUNS AWAY TO DOOM

Zeppelin II., Belonging to German Army Post, Is Wrecked in Gale.

Limburg-an-der-Lahn.—The Zeppelin II., one of the three dirigible balloons of the German government's aerial fleet, ran away and was destroyed. The airship, which was forced to descend here, owing to a storm, encountered while attempting a return trip from Homburg to Cologne, broke its moorings and without a crew drifted in a northeasterly direction. A half hour after its escape the dirigible dropped at Wellburg and was smashed to pieces.

CANADA FORGING AHEAD

Thomas C. Shotwell, one of the greatest market reporters in America, writes from New York, under date of March 20th, and says:

"The Tariff tangle with Canada which President Taft has taken in hand is of importance chiefly because of the multitude of American farmers that are crossing into the Canadian northwest. Most conservative estimates of their number place it at 150,000 for 1910. Some say as many as 250,000 will cross. These are all expert farmers and their places in the United States are being filled by untrained men from Europe and from the cities. Canada is gaining rapidly in agricultural importance and within a few years the United States will have to call on the Dominion for wheat. Production of wheat in the United States is not keeping pace with the population. A tariff war would complicate the problem of getting food. Even now Canadian farmers are getting higher prices for their cattle on the hoof and Canadian housewives are paying less for meat in the butcher shops than farmers and housewives are receiving and paying in the United States. The tariff on cattle and wheat must be removed as between the two countries before long."

The following dialogue took place between two very small boys on their way home from Sunday school:

Willie—Where is my soul?

Bobby—It isn't any place; it's just air.

Willie—How can it go to heaven when it's just air?

Bobby—Why, your body goes, too.

Willie—Bones and all?

Bobby—Yes, everything but your clothes.

A Denver man who visited the museum at City Park recently tells of a farmer he saw there. The ruralist stepped in front of a portrait which showed a man sitting in a high-backed chair. There was a small white card on the picture reading:

"A portrait of E. H. Smith, by himself."

The farmer read the card and then chuckled to himself.

"Regular fools these city fellers are," he said. "Anybody who looks at that picture 'd know Smith's by himself. They ain't no one in the paintin' with him."—Cincinnati Post.

GUESTS OF BUFFALO

President Taft and Secretary Knox in Places of Honor.

AT CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE

Executive in Conservation Talk Indirectly Makes Plea, and State Department Head Raps Newspapers for "Diluting" News.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 2.—President Taft and Secretary of State Knox were guests of honor Saturday night at a banquet given by the two leading commercial organizations of Buffalo, the Chamber of Commerce and the Manufacturers' club. Thomas Penny, former district attorney of Erie county, acted as toastmaster.

Secretary Knox devoted himself to an explanation of recent reforms in the diplomatic and consular services. He declared anew that diplomacy and trade must go hand in hand and that it was a misconception to construe it otherwise.

The president devoted the greater part of his speech to purely local topics. He spoke of Niagara falls referring to its scenic grandeur and industrial utility. This brought him to a discussion of the conservation of national resources and indirectly to a reference to Secretary Ballinger when he said:

"Let me lift my voice in behalf of those who are responsible for carrying forward this work and plead that they shall not be traduced and misrepresented in reaching a solution of a problem most difficult."

The president spoke of the conservation bills in congress and especially the one confirming the right of the executive to withdraw lands from public entry.

Guest of Ad Club.

Mr. Taft and Secretary Knox, as guests of the Buffalo Ad club at luncheon made two little impromptu speeches which won them enthusiastic plaudits. The president spoke of his legislative hope but declared that he preferred being advertised rather than to advertise himself, despite the criticism that he did not sufficiently employ that agency. Secretary Knox took a decided fling at "some newspapers." which, he declared, in diluting the news were as guilty of wrongdoing as men indicted under the pure food act for diluting foodstuffs.

"Especially," added the secretary, "if that dilution springs from malice or an attempt to misrepresent."

FIRE STOPS A MERRY DANCE

Flames Break Out in Hall at New Sharon—Two Buildings and Contents Destroyed.

Oskaloosa, Ia., May 2.—The town of New Sharon suffered a $15,000 fire early Saturday. The principal losers are:

The New Sharon State bank, $1,000; Tracy Osborn, owner of the Concert hall building, $4,000. A. C. Rogers, hardware stock, $3,000. New Sharon Drug company, $5,000. E. J. Norgren and the New Sharon Motor company, of which he is manager, $1,500. K. of P. lodge, $1,000. W. W. Winder, building, occupied by the Ellwood Barber shop loss on both, $5,000.

The fire was discovered about midnight by some merrymakers, who had remained at Concert hall for a dance after the close of a baseball benefit fair. As the orchestra struck up "Home Sweet Home," the flames, fed by an explosion of oil in the ware room below, burst through the rear windows of the hall and pandemonium reigned for a few minutes. Luckily all escaped without injury.

The postoffice and the Star newspaper office, which are located in the same block, were saved by the direction of the strong wind that was blowing at the time. All the burned structures will be replaced with substantial brick and cement buildings.

AWFUL BURNING ITCH CURED IN A DAY

"In the middle of the night of March 30th I woke up with a burning itch in my two hands and I felt as if I could pull them apart. In the morning the itching had gone to my chest and during that day it spread all over my body. I was red and raw from the top of my head to the soles of my feet and I was in continual agony from the itching. I could neither lie down nor sit up. I happened to see about Cuticura Remedies and I thought I would give them a trial. I took a good bath with the Cuticura Soap and used the Cuticura Ointment. I put it on from my head down to my feet and then went to bed. On the first of April I felt like a new man. The itching was almost gone. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuitcura Ointment and during that day the itching completely left me. Frank Gridley, 325 East 43rd Street, New York City, Apr. 27, 1909." Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world; Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props, Boston, Mass.

Only Nine Left.

Lee Wyman is an earnest advocate of some plan under which the sayings of children shall be preserved for future generations to read.

"The other day, for instance," says Wyman, "my little boy was called before the tribunal over which his fond mother presides.

"'You've broken one of the precious ten commandments,' she said.

"'Did I?' asked our boy carelessly like.

"'Yes, my boy. I've said to you over and over the ten commandments,' said Mrs. Wyman, 'and now you've broken one of them.'

"'Dear, dear,' my boy said, 'there's only nine left now.'

"And Mrs. Wyman let it go at that."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Governor Deneen, of Illinois, owns a section of land in Saskatchewan, Canada. He has said in an interview:

Our people are flocking across the boundary in thousands, and I have not yet met one who admitted he had made a mistake. They are all doing well. There is scarcely a community in the Middle or Western States that has not a representative in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta."

THE "IRON KING."

By DAVID G. HARTLEY.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Hooker, the "iron king" of New York, was an irritable man and a stingy one. His business was speculating in iron, and to do this successfully he was obliged to secure information from all parts of the world as to the production, consumption, stock on hand and such other items as tended to fix the price of the metal.

Hooker gave his sister's son, Edward Earle, a position in his office. At twenty-five, though the young man was manager of that branch of the business which pertained to information, he was paid but twelve hundred a year. On this he supported his mother, a wife and two little children. He chafed under his uncle's stinginess and on one occasion asked for more salary. He was informed that if he could do better elsewhere he was welcome to go. The young man appreciated the proverb "A rolling stone gathers no moss" and remained where he was.

One day Hooker informed his clerk that he wished him to go to England to investigate the condition of the market there. He furnished the young man with a second class ticket on an ocean liner and barely enough money to pay his board and travel third class between the principal English iron manufacturing towns.

One morning Earle, who was in Sheffield, arose and while breakfasting with his paper before him saw a notice of the failure of an iron firm located in the neighboring town of Birmingham. The concern being a small one Earle attached little importance to the failure, but during the day a business acquaintance who had an interest in favoring him gave him a bit of secret information that caused him to change his mind. It was believed that the failure would involve a larger firm, that firm would involve a number of others, and the whole community of iron firms in England would go down like card houses. This would throw a large lot of iron on the market that had been held speculatively for a rise, and consequently the prices would fall considerably.

There was no Atlantic cable in those days, so Earle wrote the information he had received, giving his opinion that a crisis was at hand and advising his employer to sell at once all the iron he had on hand. The ship bearing the letter had no sooner sailed than the second firm in line failed. This caused Earle to feel still greater confidence in the information he had received, and he had no doubt that all he had heard would be realized.

The young man proved himself admirably fitted to assume responsibility. He took a risk that would make or break him. In the name of Hooker & Co.—he was not authorized to sign the firm name, but it was not known—he contracted to deliver thousands of tons of iron at a figure below the market price, the iron to be delivered in ninety days. This done, he took the first steamer that sailed for America, the one that bore the news of the iron panic in England.

On the morning of his arrival he went straight to the office. There sat Mr. Hooker at his desk with a morning paper before him. Earle caught sight of large headlines announcing the tumble of iron in England. It had been sent from Sandy Hook. Hooker was white as a sheet.

"You worthless scamp!" cried the head of the firm to his employee. "Why didn't you write of the beginning of all this? I'm ruined! I had an immense stock on hand, and, learning of a shortage on the continent, I bought more."

"I wrote by the last steamer, giving you information that pointed to this result and advised you to sell out all the stock you had."

"Your letter never came. You should have brought the information yourself."

"Are you sure about the letter?"

"James," called Hooker to a clerk, "are there any letters that have not been delivered to me?"

"There was one came, sir, a few days ago. You know that you ordered all letters on which the postage was not paid in full to be left at the postoffice. There was 8 cents due on this one, and I refused to pay it."

"Oh, heavens!" groaned Hooker.

"Was it from England?" asked Earle of the clerk.

"I think it was."

"It must have been a mistake of the clerk's at the British postoffice. I put on stamps to cover the cost as he quoted it to me."

Hooker's head dropped on his desk. Irritated some time before at receiving unstamped letters (at that time such letters were delivered), he had given orders that all mail on which any money was due should not be taken from the postoffice. For refusing to pay 8 cents he had been ruined.

"How much iron have you on hand?" asked Earle.

"A hundred thousand tons," groaned the speculator without taking his head off his desk.

"Well, Mr. Hooker, cheer up. It's not so bad, after all. I took a big risk while abroad. I sold in your name just as the panic began 125,000 tons to be delivered in ninety days."

"What!"

"I sold for you 125,000 tons at about what your stock cost you. There'll be some low figures today on the publication of this news. Perhaps I'd better go on to the exchange and buy a part of it in."

Hooker fell on his nephew's neck. There was a profit on the transaction of many thousand dollars, and from that day Earle took his uncle's place as the "iron king."

HIS THOROUGHBRED.

A Deal the Horseman Put Through on the Dead Quiet.

A man known roundabout as a lover and possessor of fine horses was lately driving one of his favorite steeds along a suburban road when he came upon another horse lover, almost as well known, who was driving in the opposite direction. Seemingly pleased to meet each other, both drew up alongside.

"I heard only yesterday that you'd gone away and brought back a new thoroughbred," greeted the second horseman.

"Yep," gleefully returned the first horseman; "I'm just after leaving her back home while I give this horse a little spin for his liver."

"Think she'll suit?" asked the second man, squinting good humoredly.

"Well, you know my style, old man. She can step along in the best class, and she's got a pedigree eclipsing any around here."

"How long have you had her?"

"Just four days," answered the first horseman in the same gleeful tone, "but I've had my eyes on her for some time back."

"Carried this deal through a little on the quiet, didn't you?"

"Yep," laughed the first man, with a head shake of satisfaction.

"Is she a record breaker?"

"Sure thing; wouldn't have any other. Wait till you fellows get a glimpse of her, and if you don't agree that I've still got my eyes for winners I'll eat the tail off that horse there."

Suddenly the second horseman leaned over toward his friend and thrust out his hand in palpable earnestness.

"Accept my congratulations," said he, "and also give 'em to your—your thoroughbred!"

"I will!" heartily returned the other man, gripping the proffered fist. "Be sure to come in and see us," he added as his friend prepared to drive on. "I know she'll be tickled to meet a friend of mine; she isn't too high hitched for that, old man. That's her winning quality. She's a wife fit for a horse judge!"—Detroit Free Press

Stanley Ketchel, champion middleweight of the world, defeated Sam Langford, the negro challenger for the title, in six viciously fast rounds before the National Athletic club, Philadelphia. It was a toss-up between the pair until the final round. IOWA POULTRY MEN

Decide to Hold Next Show in Des Moines

SIMPSON MAKES SUGGESTION

Believes Bill Providing for Establishing Poultry Division of State Fair Preferable to Annual Appropriation.

Des Moines, May 2.—That Des Moines will get the next Iowa Poultry and Pet Stock association show was decided by the members of the local division of the organization at a meeting held at the Kirkwood, when the proposition to transfer the session to Fort Dodge was rejected. At the suggestion of John C. Simpson, secretary of the Iowa State Agricultural society, the organization will ask the next legislature for the passage of a bill creating a poultry division of the state agricultural society.

In suggesting this plan to gain support for the organization, Mr. Simpson said:

"A bill providing for the establishment of a poultry division of the state agricultural society would be preferable to an annual appropriation in money," said Mr. Simpson. "I would suggest that a superintendent of the division be appointed to take charge of the work. His duties should consist of keeping up the interest in poultry breeding in the schools, to educate poultry men in the best methods of conducting the poultry industry and to assist in the annual shows. The finances of the division should be in charge of a committee to be composed of the head of the poultry department at the Iowa state college, the superintendent of the poultry division of the state agricultural association and the president of the Iowa Poultry and Pet Stock association. A department of this kind would benefit all interested in the breeding and raising of poultry."

For Inspection of Memorial School.

Mason City.—Big plans are being made here by the university for the annual visit early in May of the commander in chief of the national order of Sons of Veterans, and some of his staff, who are on a tour of inspection through the west. Hon. W. G. Pollitt of Patterson, N. J., heads the order this year. Accompanying him will be Arthur L. Vescelius, chief of staff of Patterson, Hon. Horace H. Hammer, Reading, Pa., national secretary of the order, and Miss Mollie Donaldson, Patterson, N. J., head of the Sons of Veterans auxiliary of the nation. They come here from Freeport, Ill., where they attend the annual encampment of the order in that state. It is planned for a reception at 10:45 in the morning at the university building, followed by a luncheon at noon by the college faculty. In the afternoon a drive about the city will be had and in the evening a banquet tendered by the S. O. V. camp of this city.

Burns to Death in Hotel.

Ida Grove.—Relatives here were notified that Miss Ellen Sykes, formerly of Ida county, was burned to death in a hotel fire at Meadow, S. D. The fire is supposed to have started from a lamp turned over by a demented person. Three people were burned to death, and the remains of the Ida county girl were completely incinerated. Her mother ran the hotel. Besides the Miller hotel, a bank, lumber yard and livery barn were burned.

WHERE ROBE WOULD COUNT

Under Friendly Cover Preacher Might Safely Proceed to Split His Infinitives.

"I tried to get a chance to speak to you at church Sunday," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "but the crush was so great that I couldn't push through to where you were." "Yes, wasn't it awful?" replied her hostess, as she flecked a bit of dust from the Gobelin tapestry. "All the common folks in town seem to want to crowd into our church lately. It's too bad they ain't satisfied to stay where they belong. How did you like the sermon?" "Well, as a sermon it was fairly good, but I do wish Doctor Goodman would quit splitting his infinitives. I try not to let it make me nervous, but I can't keep from being shocked every time he does it." "I never let them kind of things bother me, but that's where the Episcopals have the advantage of us. If our preacher would wear a long robe he could split them and we would never notice it."—Kansas City Star.

"Yes," says the man with the shaggy eyebrows, "we have a phonograph. We've got several Italian grand opera records, and last week I discovered a way to make their reproduction absolutely perfect.."

"Indeed?" asks the man with the purple nose. "What is it?"

"I rub a little garlic on the record before it is played."

The Overland
The Simplest Car

The wonderful sale of the Overland—greater than any other car ever known—is largely due to simplicity. The man who runs his own car wants a trouble-proof car.

We are turning out 140 such cars every day, but we never yet have been able to make as many as people wanted.

Easy to Operate

The Overlands operate by pedal control. One goes backward or forward, fast or slow, by simply pushing pedals. It is as simple as walking, and the hands are left free to steer.

The Overland has fewer parts than any other automobile. One part is made to take the place of many. It is free from complexities. The operations are all automatic.

A novice could run an Overland from coast to coast the first time he tried. One of these cars has run 7,000 miles without stopping the engine.

Very Low Prices

The Overlands are made—as watches are made—by modern automatic machinery. And we devote a whole factory to one model alone.

Because of these facts, and our enormous output, we give more for the money than anyone else. We have cut the cost 20 per cent in the past year alone.

We now sell a 25-horsepower Overland for $1,000 in roadster style, or for $1,[illegible] with tonneau. The car has a 102-inch wheel base, and is easily capable of [illegible] miles an hour.

We sell a 40-horsepower Overland for $1,250. Other Overland models cost $1,[illegible] $1,400 and $1,500. All prices include gas lamps and magneto.

You will find no car that compares with an Overland at anywhere near its price.

The Car You'll Want

You will see why the Overlands outsell all other cars when you make your comparisons. Wherever you are you can do this, for there are Overland dealers everywhere.

But the first step is to send for our catalog—to see all the styles and know all the facts. When we send it we will tell you our nearest dealer. Please send us this coupon now.

The LITTLE BROWN JUG at KILDARE

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Thomas Ardmore, bored millionaire, and Henry Maine Griswold, professor in the University of Virginia, take trains at Atlanta. Griswold to his college, Ardmore in pursuit of a girl who had smiled at him. Mistaken for Gov. Osborne of South Carolina, Griswold's life is threatened. He goes to Columbia to warn the governor and meets Barbara Osborne. Ardmore learns that his winning lady is the daughter of Gov. Dangerfield of North Carolina. He follows her to Raleigh, and on the way is given a brown jug at Kildare. In Raleigh he discovers that the jug bears a message threatening Dangerfield unless Appleweight, a criminal, is allowed to go free. Ardmore becomes allied with Jerry Danforth in running the affairs of the state during the absence of the governor. A mysterious telegram is sent to Gov. Osborne. Griswold becomes adviser to Barbara Osborne, who is attending to her father's duties in South Carolina. Orders are sent to the sheriff to capture Appleweight.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

As Barbara and Griswold turned to leave, a young man who had been waiting a message at the standing desk in the lobby lifted his hat and addressed Barbara. He was a reporter for the Columbia Intelligencer, and his manner was eager.

"Oh, Miss Osborne, pardon me, but I've been trying to get you on the telephone. Can you tell me where your father is to-night?"

"Father was in town only a few hours, and then left on state business."

"May I ask if it's the Appleweight case? The Raleigh papers have wired for information and we'd like to know more."

"I cannot answer that question. It's enough that the governor is absent on state business and that the business is important. You may print that in the Intelligencer and repeat it to Raleigh. There is no harm in that. Miss Osborne?"

"No; certainly not," Barbara replied.

"But the papers all over the state are talking about the Appleweight gang. They intimate that those people enjoy immunity from prosecution and that the governor—you will pardon me, Miss Osborne—will take no steps to arrest them for personal reasons."

"Your question is quite proper," replied Griswold. "The governor's acts are subject to scrutiny at all times and it is just as well to have this matter understood now. I am employed by the governor as special counsel in some state matters. My name is Griswold. Take out your book and come to the desk here and I will give you a statement which you may publish as by the authority of the governor."

The three found seats at a table and Griswold dictated while the reporter wrote, Barbara meanwhile sitting with her cheek resting against her raised hand. She was experiencing the relief we all know, of finding a strong arm to lean upon in an emergency, and she realized that Griswold was not only wise, but shrewd and resourceful.

"Please print this exactly as I give it: It having been intimated in certain quarters that the Appleweight gang of outlaws, which has been terrorizing the North Carolina frontier for several years, enjoys immunity from prosecution in South Carolina owing to the fact that Gov. Osborne was at some time attorney for Appleweight, Gov. Osborne begs to say that steps have already been taken for the arrest of this man and his followers, dead or alive. The governor presents his compliments to those amiable critics who have so eagerly seized upon this pretext for slurring his private character and aspersing his official acts. The governor has no apologies to proffer the people of South Carolina, who have so generously reposed in him their trust and confidence. He is intent upon safe-guarding the peace, dignity and honor of the state through an honest enforcement of law and he has no other aim or ambition."

Griswold took the reporter's notebook and read over this pronunciamento; then he handed it to Barbara, who studied it carefully.

"I think it sounds just right, only, why not substitute for 'honest' the word 'vigorous'?"

"Excellent," assented Griswold, and thus amended the statement was returned to the reporter.

"Now," said Griswold to the young man, "you are getting a pretty good item that no other paper will have. Please wire your story to Raleigh; Gov. Osborne is very anxious that the people up there shall understand fully his attitude in the Appleweight matter."

"I reckon this will wake up old Dangerfield all right," said the reporter, grinning. "He'll be paralyzed. May I use your name in this connection, sir?"

"Not at all. My engagement with Gov. Osborne is of the most confidential character and our purposes would be defeated by publicity. Remember, you get the exclusive use of this story—the return and immediate departure of the governor, his statement to the people in the Appleweight case—all with the understanding that you use what you have to the best advantage."

"This is all right, is it, Miss Osborne?" asked the reporter.

"Maj. Griswold has full authority to act, and you need question nothing he tells you," Barbara replied.

"I suppose the governor didn't see the attorney general to-day?" asked the reporter detainingly, as Barbara rose. She exchanged a glance with Griswold.

"Father didn't see Mr. Bosworth at all, if that's what you mean!"

"Didn't see him? Well, Bosworth didn't exactly tell me he had seen him to-day, but I asked him about the Appleweight case an hour ago at his house and he said the governor wasn't going to do anything and that was the end of it so far as the administration is concerned."

"Print his story and see what happens! We have no comment to make on that, have we, Miss Osborne?"

"Nothing at all," replied Barbara scornfully.

"I'm at the Saluda house at present. See me to-morrow and I may have another story for you!" and Griswold shook the reporter warmly by the hand as they parted at the carriage door.

"Home," said Barbara for the reporter's benefit, and then, to Griswold: "I must speak of another matter. Drive with me a little way until we can throw the reporter off."

She spoke quietly, but he saw that she was preoccupied with some new phase of the situation, and as the carriage gained headway she said earnestly:

"That young man told the truth—I am sure of it—about Mr. Bosworth. I knew he would do something to injure father if he could, but I did not know he had the courage to go so far."

They were now at the edge of the town and she bade him stop the carriage.

"We must go to the statehouse," said Griswold. "We must get that requisition, to guard against treason in the citadel. Assuming that Gov. Osborne really doesn't want to see Appleweight punished we'd better hold the requisition anyhow. It's possible that your father had it ready —do pardon me!—for a grand-stand play, or he may have wanted to bring Appleweight into the friendlier state; —but that's all conjectural. We'd better keep out of the principal streets. That reporter has a sharp eye."

She gave the necessary directions and the driver turned back into Columbia. It was pleasant to find his accomplice in this conspiracy a girl of keen wit who did not debate matters or ask tiresome questions. The business ahead was serious enough, though he tried by manner, tone and words to minimize its gravity.

"Have you the office keys?" he asked.

"Yes; I have been afraid to let go of them. There's a watchman in the building, but he knows me very well. There will not be the slightest trouble about getting in."

The watchman—an old confederate veteran—sat smoking in the entrance and courteously bade them good evening.

"I want to get some papers from father's office, captain."

"Certainly, Miss Barbara." He preceded them, throwing on the lights, to the governor's door, which he opened with his own pass key. "It's pretty lonesome here at night, Miss Barbara."

"I suppose nobody comes at night," remarked Griswold.

"Not usually, sir. But one or two students are at work in the library, and Mr. Bosworth is in his office."

The veteran walked away jingling his keys. Barbara was already in the private office bending over the governor's desk. She found the right key, drew out a drawer, then cried out softly. She knelt beside the desk, throwing the papers about in her eagerness, then turned to Griswold with a white face.

"The drawer has been opened since I was here this morning. The requisition and all the other papers in the case are gone."

Griswold examined the lock carefully and pointed to the roughened edges of the wood.

"A blade of the shears there, or perhaps the paper cutter—who knows? The matter is simple enough, so please do not trouble about it. Wait here a moment. I want to make some inquiries of the watchman."

It Was Opened Guardedly.

He found the old fellow pacing the portico like a sentry. He pointed out the attorney general's office, threw on a few additional lights for Griswold's guidance, and resumed his patrol duty outside.

The attorney general's door was locked, but in response to Griswold's knock it was opened guardedly.

"I am very sorry to trouble you, Mr. Bosworth," began Griswold, quietly edging his way into the room, "but one never gets wholly away from business these days."

He closed the door himself, and peered into the inner rooms to be sure the attorney general was alone. Bosworth's face flushed angrily when he found that a stranger had thus entered his office with a cool air of proprietorship.

"Who the devil are you?" he demanded, glaring.

"I'm special counsel for Gov. Osborne in the Appleweight case. There's no use in wasting time in further identification, but if you take down that volume on Admiralty Practice just behind you, you will find my name on the title page. Or, to save you the trouble, as you seem to be interested in my appearance, I will tell you that my name is Griswold and that my address is Charlottesville, Va."

"You are undoubtedly lying. If you are smart enough to write a book you ought to know enough about legal procedure to understand that the attorney general represents the state and special counsel would not be chosen without his knowledge."

"Allow me to correct you, my learned brother. You should never misquote the opposing counsel—it's one of the rules of the game. What I said a moment ago was that I represented the governor—Gov. Osborne. I didn't say I represented the state, which is a different matter, and beset with ultra vires pitfalls. There is no earthly reason why a governor should not detach himself, so to speak, from his office and act in propria persona, as a mere citizen."

Bosworth grinned, but not at the legal status of monarchs and states. He had thought of a clever stroke and he dealt the blow with confidence.

"Let us assume," he said, "that you represent Mr. Osborne. May I ask the whereabouts of your client?"

"Certainly. You may ask anything you please, but it will do you no good. It's an old rule of the game never to divulge a client's secret. Gov. Osborne has his own reasons for absenting himself from his office. However, he was at home to-night."

"I rather guess not, as I had all the trains watched. You'll have to do a lot better than that, Mr. Griswold."

"He has issued a statement to the public since you lied to the Intelligencer reporter about him today. I suppose it's part of your official duty to misrepresent the head of the state administration in the press, but the governor is in the saddle and I advise you to be good."

The attorney-general felt that he was not making headway. His disadvantage in dealing with a stranger whose identity he still questioned angered him. He did not know why Griswold had sought him out, and he was chagrined at having allowed himself to be so easily cornered.

"You seem to know a good deal," he sneered. "How did you get into this thing anyhow?"

"My dear sir, I was chosen by the governor because of my superior attainments, don't you see? But I'm in a hurry now. I came here on a particular errand. I want that requisition in the Appleweight case—quick! —if you please, Mr. Bosworth."

"Mr. Griswold, or whoever you are, you are either a fool or a blackguard. There isn't any requisition for Appleweight. The governor never had the sand to issue any, if you must know the truth! If you knew anything about the governor you would know that that's why Osborne is hiding himself. He can't afford to offend the Appleweights, if you must know the disagreeable truth."

"Mr. Bosworth," began Griswold deliberately, "that requisition, duly signed and bearing the seal of the secretary of state as by the statutes in such cases made and provided, was in Gov. Osborne's desk this morning at the time you were so daintily kicking the door in your anxiety to see the governor. It has been taken from the drawer where the governor left it when he went to New Orleans. You have gone in there like a sneakthief, pried open the drawer and stolen that document; and now—"

"It's an ugly charge," mocked the attorney general.

"It's all of that," and Griswold smiled.

HUSHED SHRIEKS OF VICTIM

Little Woman Found One Good Use for Discordant Notes of Carollers.

The shivering carollers had just selected a pitch beneath a lamp in a back street, when a small boy emerged from a house opposite and beckoned mysteriously to their leader.

"Mother says you're to sing something loud," he whispered. "That bit about 'Peace on earth' will do fine. She don't want no others. Just you go on hollering 'Peace on earth.'"

For ten minutes the willing minstrels yelled their loudest. Then a little woman, armed with a copper saucepan, appeared upon the scene.

"Thanks!" she said, handing the collector three-pence. "That 'Peace on earth' 'as done it beautiful! My ol' man went to fetch the turkey 'e won in a raffle to-night, an' comin' 'ome, 'e made one or two calls and lorst it, so I've bee a-teachin 'im to be more careful, an' I didn't want none o' the neighbors to interfere when 'e 'ollered out."—Pearson's Weekly.

"Generally the gas man fits the meter to the shorn East side lamb," said the New York woman. "Gas bills are not half what they are on the West side, but lately something's wrong somewhere. I don't cook at all and go out to the theater nearly ever night of the world, leaving the flat in darkness, but this month my bill was just exactly the same as hers."

from town, nearly all the patrons of the school were present. They served a dinner good enough for a king, and ample for a wedding feast, from hot coffee to ice cream. On Monday morning she opened another term in a school house near Martin Bachman's. Anna is always popular with her scholars.

For some reason it is seldom that a Lutheran minister enters a Methodist pulpit, but we enjoyed (?) this pleasure last week. He not only occupied the pulpit, but took possession of the whole thing. Rev. Achtermann and ourselves were present but were ignored entirely. He had no use for any of us. He had brought his daughter with him to play the organ, so our organist was brushed aside. He asked the congregation to sing, but they could not sing according to his meter, so he did his own singing by leaps and bounds. Since our choir had been requested to sing, we finally insisted that they sing at least one selection. So their song was hooked on the rear end. But we venture to assert that there was more sympathy and spirit of Christ in that song than in the minister's sermon. The poor fellow likely seldom mingles with people of other churches and thinks it piety to keep aloof. He preached Christ but comes far from imitating His spirit. We recently met another minister of the same calibre, though of a different denomination who lives less than a hundred miles away. We have passed his house more than a hundred times in the past few years and yet he had the impudence to ask us our name and where we live, as though he had never heard of us before. How low the horizon of some people seems.

the affairs of this office which I seek in a proper manner. I feel justified from the assurances that friends thruout the county have given me, to use every honorable effort to secure the position, and therefore thank my friends for the assistance they have already shown me. As a matter of information I will state that in the state of Iowa there are forty-one ladies holding county offices. Among the counties in this part of the state which have lady recorders are Cerro Gordo, Emmet, Palo Alto, Dickinson, Greene, Polk, Humboldt and Marshall counties.

Better Home Surroundings and Better Farming

The most potent influence in the education of the child is the home. As the child's home surroundings, so will be the man's ideals of life to quite an extent.

The school may very properly stimulate interest in better home conditions and should be a prominent factor in promoting the best possible preparation by our boys and girls for the occupations of life. The opinion is prevalent that our schools must come in closer touch with our homes and must afford some actual training for the vocations of life.

In communities where business prosperity depends largely upon successful farming, as in Iowa, the study of topics pertaining to agriculture should be pursued in our schools.

There is a demand for our best and brightest boys and girls on the farm. There are opportunities for all to secure comfortable homes on small farms in Iowa. These homes when made attractive and provided with modern conveniences may become the best and the happiest homes in the world.

The public schools may simply serve as an agency for suggestive and directive effort, while the experimental work can best be carried on at the homes. In accordance with this theory, the State Agricultural College at Ames through its Extension Department is urging the boys and girls to organize branches of the Junior Agricultural Union in every school district in Iowa, the object of which is to assist in extending the benefits of the College to the young people in the state.

The County Superintendent has distributed five leaflets issued at Ames relating to the following topics to every school in the county: The Spraying Calendar, Quack and other Grasses, Oats, and Testing Dairy Cows on the Farm. Other leaflets from Ames and from the Bureau of Education at Washington may be secured.

Two bushels of Murdock's Early Yellow Dent seed corn have been sent out to boys from the ages of ten to eighteen, who made application for the same and who have agreed to report the results of their planting and cultivation next fall.

The Sioux City Nursery & Seed Co., Sioux City, Iowa, has furnished free for distribution among pupils enrolled in the public schools, especially to girls from ten to eighteen years old, 1600 packages of flower seeds. The collection includes excellent varieties of pansy, sweet peas, phlox, balsam, petunia, stock, castor bean, and nasturtium seeds. The generosity and favor of the seed company is appreciated.

Thus briefly indicated are some of the ideas and plans intended to create home and farm sentiment.

Sincerely,
A. M. DEYOE,
Co. Supt. of Schools.
